BROTHER-IN-LAW OF WILSON NAMED IN SHIP INQUIRY

Former Washington Bank Cashier Tells of $1800 Payment to R. W. Bolling "Put Down as Loan."

SAYS $40,000 WAS TO BE DISTRIBUTED

Tucker Sands Gives Confusing Answers—Bolling and Company Mentioned Make Denials.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Charges that R. W. Bolling, brother-in-law of President Wilson and treasurer of the United States Shipping Board, participated in the distribution of $40,000 alleged to have been given by a shipbuilding company for assistance in obtaining a shipbuilding contract, were contained in testimony today before the Walsh Committee investigating Shipping Board affairs.

The money, it was charged by Tucker K. Sands, a former officer of the Commercial National Bank in Washington, D. C., and the alleged go-between in the transaction, was given by the Wallace Downey Shipbuilding Co. of Staten Island. Others he alleged participated, included Lester Sisler, former secretary of the Shipping Board, and John Cranor, said to have been interested as a representative of the Downey company in Shipping Board contracts. Sands underwent long examination and his replies at times proved contradictory.

He charged that there was an understanding that $15,000 was to go to Cranor and that the remaining $25,000 was to be divided among Cranor, Bolling, Sisler and himself. He first said he knew neither Bolling nor Sisler had anything to do with the board's contract and that he did not believe Bolling received any of the money.

Contradictory Testimony.

Later he testified that he gave Bolling $1800 in the nature of a loan but that Bolling paid back $300 and that he had taken no note from the treasurer. Afterward he said the $1800 was a "part payment to Mr. Bolling for his share" and that he carried it as a loan as he "did not think it would look right."

"Don't you know, as a matter of fact, that this payment had nothing whatever to do with the shipping board?" Representative Joseph Walsh, chairman of the committee, asked Sands.

"I can't say; I always thought it had," replied the witness.

Sands testified that he received the money in the form of "notes," some of which he discounted and at different times described payments to Bolling and Sisler as both "payments" and "loans."

In another part of his testimony he asserted the money was to be understood as a commission to him for securing a loan from the bank to the shipbuilding company, with which the witness was then connected.

Reporter Tells of Affidavit.

The testimony of Sands was preceded by that of Alfred W. McCann, a reporter for the New York Globe, who swore he had secured from Sands an affidavit detailing the entire transaction. McCann further testified that when he took the affidavit to Sands for him to sign, he declined to do so on advice of his attorney. Previous to submitting the affidavit for Sands' signature, however, McCann said he had taken the document to the Shipping Board, and had it photostated. One of these copies, carrying notations in what was testified to be Sands' handwriting, and which Sands afterwards testified to being "correct except that some of the facts may be a little different," was presented by McCann in evidence. The document, however, was not made a part of the stenographer's minutes of the hearing.

In the coures of questioning by Chairman Walsh and Congressman Kelley, Sands said he did not think Bolling ever got a cent from anybody for aiding to get a contract—that money given to him was a "loan." At another time he stuck to a statement that Bolling was to get his share of the transaction; that he "gave Sisler $5000" and that he had loaned Sisler for one of his companies $5000 on his note, which note he still has. He said he had never had any controversy with Bolling and was on friendly terms with him. He also mixed into his testimony details of a purchase by him from Bolling of a lot for $900.

Tells of Being Indicted.

Sands testified he was now under indictment "for allowing a company to overdraw"—a shipping company, in which I was interested." He testified that he was then connected with the Commercial National Bank

WOMAN CLIMBS ON STAGE AND BREAKS UP WARFIELD SHOW

Creates Disturbance at American Theater—Sent to Hospital for Observation.

As the curtain ascended for the opening act of "The Return of Peter Grimm" at the American Theater last night a young woman left her seat in the front row of the parquet, mounted the stool of the bass fiddler in the orchestra pit and then climbed to the stage. The house had been darkened and as the young woman walked across the stage and carried one of the "prop" chairs to the far end at the left edge of the footlights, many in the audience regarded her as one of the cast. When she had placed the chair she sat down.

As the members of the cast appeared on the stage none appeared to notice the young woman. They spoke their lines, and finally, when David Warfield, the star, appeared, the audience became restless. Warfield's back was to the young woman and he was not aware of her presence until the stage manager came out from the wings and tried to induce the woman to leave the stage. Hearing the commotion behind him, Warfield turned and asked "what has happened."

Melville Stoltz, the house manager, who had just left Warfield's dressing room, saw the interruption and ordered the curtain down. The young woman was ushered to the stage door and asked to leave. She became indignant and when asked what she meant by climbing onto the stage she said she was not satisfied with the seat she had in the parquet and that she desired to be nearer the performers.

She was offered the return of the price of her admission but she declined to accept it and insisted upon being allowed to see the play from the stage. A policeman was called and she was taken to the City Hospital for observation. She said that she was Miss Claudine Brennan of 3704 Lindell boulevard, which is the address of the Queen's Daughters' Annex.

After she had been taken from the theater the curtain again went up and the play was started over again, after a delay of five minutes.

MRS. ELEANOR D. STICKNEY REPORTS LOSS OF JEWELRY

Tells Police Box Containing Gems Disappeared From Her Home Between Oct. 5 and Nov. 17.

Mrs. Eleanor Dozier Stickney of 4915 Argyle avenue yesterday asked detectives to solve the disappearance of a jewel box containing valuable jewelry which was in a pasteboard box in which she had hidden it in the sun parlor of her home. The theft, she said, occurred between Oct. 5 and Nov. 17.

Thinking the box possibly might have been misplaced she made an investigation herself, but failing to find any trace of the box or the jewels, called the detectives.

In the case when it was taken, Mrs. Stickney reported, was a pearl necklace, a diamond and turquoise ring, a ring set with five diamonds, a ruby and sapphire ring, two children's rings and a la valliere with one large diamond and two smaller diamonds in the pendant.

No valuation was placed on the jewelry by Mrs. Stickney in her report to the police, and last night she refused to discuss the matter.

BAKER SAYS UNION WAGE SCALE HOLDS UP PRICE OF BREAD

Officer of Large Concern Says He Cannot Visualize a Reduction Until Open Shop Is Re-established.

CONTRACT RUNS UNTIL NEXT JUNE

Flour Down to $8.40 per Barrel, but No Cut Yet by the Large Baking Firms in St. Louis.

Although the price of flour has gradually declined from its war-time peak of $14.50 to $8.40 for a barrel of 196 pounds, officials of the American Bakery Co. and the General Baking Co., representing six of the largest bakeries in St. Louis, have not reduced the price of bread, and inquiry yesterday by the Post-Dispatch disclosed that they have no intention at present of announcing any price reduction.

These officials said the present flour market is fickle, and that flour will have to strike a normal level before new bread prices can be made consistent with good business. They added, however, that the public will first benefit from low flour prices by an increase in the size of the standard loaf, but were not certain when the loaf could be consistently enlarged.

But there is one baker in St. Louis, George Ehlhardt, 3030 North Newstead avenue, who has decreased his price, and who has stated that bread ought to be retailing at 5 cents a loaf within 60 days. Ehlhardt has reduced his price to 6 cents a loaf, allowing the retailer to sell two one-pound loaves for 15 cents. He said his price reduction is in line with what some other cities are doing, and this is borne out by dispatches from Indianapolis and Toledo, where reductions of 1 to 2 cents have been made in the last few days in the standard loaf.

View of One Manager.

George N. Meissner, manager of the General Baking Co., which operates a chain of large bakeries throughout the United States, and has a large plant here, said he did not anticipate lower bread prices in the immediate future, but looked for a gradual reduction, beginning about the spring of 1921 and continuing until, in about a year or 16 months hence, 5 cents will buy a 14-ounce loaf.

Meissner said the local Bakers' Union was enforcing the closed shop so rigidly that in many instances the men work only seven hours a day for eight hours' pay, and that they refuse to work overtime for less than $1 an hour. This condition, he explained, was largely responsible for the prevailing high-priced bread. He said he regarded this factor as being quite as important in price adjustments as the market price of flour.

"Our present contract with the Bakers' Union will expire next June," he said, "when we hope to re-establish the open shop. I cannot visualize a normal price for bread until this has been accomplished.

"While it is true," he continued, "that flour has taken a fall, we are still paying $10.50 to $11 a barrel in the open market for the very high grade of flour we use. We produce a superior product and cannot, will not, sacrifice quality for a few cents' reduction in price. We believe the people are glad to pay a fair price for quality."

12 Cents for 20-Ounce Loaf.

Meissner's bakery specializes in a 20-ounce loaf, which is sold to retailers at 12 cents, who, in turn, sell to the public for 15 cents.

Ehlhardt, whose bakery has a capacity of 30,000 1-pound loaves a day, and is a modern, sanitary plant, has furnished bread to city institutions for seven consecutive years. He also supplies 200 retail grocers, and is now selling his customers at 6 cents a loaf, thus enabling them to sell two loaves for 15 cents. He guarantees his loaves to weigh 16 ounces net 12 hours after baking.

"We are at present paying $8.40 a barrel for flour," Ehlhardt said, "and there is no reason, in view of thee tumble in flour, why bread prices also should not go down. We could sell to retailers now at 4½ cents a loaf if they would sell at 5 cents and be content with a ½-cent margin of profit. We expect to see flour go to $6 to $7 a barrel next month, which should bring back a 14-ounce loaf for 5 cents in January."

Ehlhardt was asked concerning the quality of his bread—if it measured up to the standard of bakers' bread as set by the larger bakeries.

285 Loaves to One Barrel.

"As proof that our product is as good as that of any other local bakery," Ehlhardt continued, "here is our formula: 4 gallons of pure

80,000 SEE HARVARD DEFEAT YALE WITH THREE FIELD GOALS

Blue's Savage, Though Ragged, Defense Several Times Blocks Touchdown.

By the Associated Press.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—Repulsed repeatedly in their attacks at the Yale goal line today, Harvard resorted to a kicking offense and with three field goals defeated the Elis 9 to 0 in the annual football combat in the Yale bowl.

The contest, witnessed by close to 80,000 spectators, and the thirty-ninth between the two universities since 1875, was a remarkable exhibition of the comparatively modern open and aerial game.

The defeat of Yale, while not unexpected, took a most unusual turn, due to the ragged but savage defense of the Elis, who, facing a far more finished football machine, refused to be awed by the gridiron juggernaut of Harvard. The Yale players battled so savagely that, although the Cambridge clan several times drove the Blue eleven back to the shadow of its own goal posts, a touchdown was beyond the physical ability of the Crimson.

A detailed account of the game will be found on the sporting page.

WHISKY FOUND IN GRIP CARRIED OFF TRAIN BY CONDUCTOR

Pullman Employe Is Arrested—Company Has Been Informed Employes Transport Liquor.

When a New York train stopped on track No. 8 in Union Station yesterday at 4 p. m. Pullman Conductor Wilbur Young of New York alighted carrying a black grip which he deposited on the platform. He then re-entered the train.

An usher picked up the grip and started toward the station. Two detectives stopped him, took the grip and opened it. Fifteen quarts of whisky were in it.

The usher said that a man in the station had instructed him to get the grip. He could not be found. Young was arrested. He declared that the grip had been left on the train, that he did not know its owner and that he did not know that it contained whisky.

Detectives have been watching New York trains at the request of the Pullman company, officials of which had said that they had been informed some of their employes were carrying whisky into St. Louis.

STATE EXAMINER CLOSES 12 NORTH DAKOTA BANKS IN WEEK

Says Farmers Have Failed to Meet Notes in Time—All Expected to Be Reopened.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 20.—More than a dozen State banks in Western North Dakota were closed this week by O. E. Loftus, State Bank Examiner, who states all may be reopened later. Poor crops, depreciation of land values and holding of wheat by farmers are held responsible for closing of the banks.

"Failure of farmers to meet notes held by the banks is the immediate reason for closing them," said Loftus. "As the banks were unable to collect money due, their cash reserves fell below the legal requirements under the State banking laws, and they were closed for the protection of the public. As soon as possible past due notes will be collected and the banks reopened for business."

TWO THANKSGIVING TURKEYS SENT TO PRESIDENT WILSON

One of 38 Pounds From Texas, Another Larger One From Kentucky —Other Foods Sent.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—President Wilson has two big turkeys, a box of oranges and a crate of grapefruit for Thanksgiving. The Chamber of Commerce of Cuero, Tex., presented a 38-pound gobbler, and South Trimble, of Kentucky a larger one, which is on the way.

B. F. Fly of Yuma, Ariz., sent oranges and grapefruit which were grown on an irrigation project provided for in a bill signed by the President.

It was hinted by Dr. Carey T. Grayson, the President's physician, that his patient's capacity for food is increasing every day now that he is walking better and improving rapidly.

TAX MEASURES MAY GO OVER

Speaker Thinks Congress Will Consider Only Appropriations.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Speaker Gillett of the House of Representatives thinks the passage of appropriation bills will be the most important work done at the final session of the Sixty-sixth Congress, which will begin Dec. 6 and end March 4.

Gillett said today that in his opinion all matters pertaining to readjustment of the tax laws probably would have to go over until the special session of the new Congress. Preliminary work on the framing of the appropriation bills will be started Monday by subcommittees. Under a resolution passed by the House last June, all appropriation measures in future will be handled by the Appropriations Committee, which will be enlarged from 21 to 35 members.

SALOON KEEPER KILLS MAN, WOUNDS ANOTHER FATALLY

East St. Louisan, Former Detective, Calls Police and, Pointing to Bodies, Says: "There They Are."

QUESTIONED, HE REFUSES TO TALK

Both Men Slain Heads of Families—Assailant Shot a Man Less Than a Year Ago.

Patrick J. Manley, 34 years old, proprietor of a saloon at 701 Missouri avenue, East St. Louis, and a former city detective, shot and killed Michael Hennessey, 40, an electrician, of 1235 Cleveland avenue, in the saloon at 4:45 yesterday afternoon, and shot Herbert Hogan, 50, of Mount Vernon, Ind., a former East St. Louis policeman, inflicting three wounds, from which Hogan died in St. Mary's Hospital at 8:05 p. m. Both men were heads of families.

No adequate explanation of the shooting has been given, and some of Manley's acquaintances believe he is mentally deranged. He shot a man in a sidewalk quarrel less than a year ago, and lost his place on the detective force at that time.

After the shooting, Manley telephoned to the police station, asking that an ambulance be sent to his saloon. When a policeman entered the saloon a few minutes later, Manley was standing at the end of the bar, one elbow on the bar and in a lounging attitude. He pointed at the dead man and the wounded man, both lying on the floor, and said in an indifferent tone, "There they are."

Hogan, after reaching the hospital, was able to talk a little, and said he did not know why Manley shot him and Hennessey. Two of Hogan's wounds were in the abdomen, and one in the left chest.

Wounded Man Visitor in City.

Hennessey was wounded twice, one bullet piercing his heart. He had a wife and four children, and was a brother-in-law of Justice William Kane. He bore a good reputation. Hogan had a wife and two children. He formerly ran a saloon, then was on the police force for a time, and later worked for the Aluminum Ore Co. He removed to Indiana a year or more ago, and was back in East St. Louis for a visit.

After Manley was locked up in the police station, Chief of Police Mulconnery asked him why he shot the two men. Manley replied: "What would you do if somebody tried to cut your throat?"

Mulconnery replied that he did not believe "Spike," as Hennessey was called, had attempted to harm Manley. "Well," Manley replied, "he was boasting." Mulconnery afterwards said he did not understand the meaning of this.

"Is Hogan dead?" Manley asked after a time.

"No," the Chief replied, "but he may die."

"I don't care," Manley remarked, according to the Chief.

When a Post-Dispatch reporter questioned Manley, he said, "I don't know why they had it in for me." He would not explain this remark, and when questioned further, answered only that he would talk "at the proper time."

Manley Formerly Detective.

Manley, while a member of the detective force, on Dec. 16 last, shot Joseph A. Beck, a motorman, after a quarrel on the sidewalk in front of a saloon at 205 Missouri avenue. Beck was wounded in the mouth, his teeth deflecting the bullet in a manner which probably prevented a fatal wound. Manley was charged with assault with a deadly weapon and was released on $300 bond. His case is still pending. He was dismissed from the detective force because of the shooting of Beck.

On the night of Oct. 9 last Manley was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Granite City, suffering from injuries which he said were the result of an attack by robbers near Madison. He said he was beaten, robbed and thrown from an automobile. Three nights after he was taken to the hospital he got a bottle of whisky, and after partaking of it he broke out of his room, carrying a revolver and fired four shots, frightening patients and nurses.

While he was still disabled by his injuries, Manley's saloon was robbed by two men, who held up the bartender, a woman and a customer, taking $100 from the cash register and $10 from the customer.

ROCKY MOUNT, N. C., Nov. 20.—The North Carolina Methodist Conference today unanimously indorsed a national Sabbath law to be passed by Congress to stop all Sunday trains, Sunday newspapers and Sunday mails.

NOBEL PEACE PRIZE REPORTED AWARDED TO PRESIDENT WILSON

Swedish Newspapers Say Announcement Will Be Made Late This Month.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 20.—President Woodrow Wilson will be awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for 1920, according to the Swedish newspapers. The announcement of the prize committee, however, will not be made before the end of November.

The Inter-Parliamentary Socialist group in the Riksdag, including Hjalmar Branting, the Socialist leader, decided last January, according to dispatches from Stockholm, to recommend to the Norwegian Storthing Nobel Committee that it support President Wilson and Christian Lange, secretary of the Inter-Parliamentary Union, as the candidates for the 1919 and 1920 Nobel peace prizes. The last peace prize, in 1917, was awarded to the International Red Cross Committee of Geneva.

The Nobel peace prize is about $40,000. It was awarded to Theodore Roosevelt in 1906. In 1918, with the consent of Congress, he divided the fund among various war work organizations.

HARDING'S SHIP ENCOUNTERS TROPICAL HEAT NEAR CUBA

Approaches Half-Way Mark on Voyage to Panama—President-Elect Plays Deck Games.

ON BOARD STEAMSHIP PARISMINA, Nov. 20.—(By Wireless to the Associated Press.)—Sailing through a quiet sea the steamer Parismina, with President-elect Warren G. Harding and his party aboard, tonight approached the half-way mark in her voyage from New Orleans to Panama, where the first stage in Mr. Harding's vacation trip will be reached. Except for the light rain and moderate wind fair weather favored the distinguished passenger and he spent most of the day on deck walking, reading and playing quoits, shuffleboard and other ship games.

Mrs. Harding remained in her stateroom during today on advice of her physician. It was explained she was not ill and that her appetite continued good, she was just in need of rest after the excitement of the campaign, the trying Texas experiences and the almost overwhelming welcome accorded to the party in New Orleans.

The Parismina left the Gulf of Mexico and went into the green waters of the Yucatan channel and about noon today passed close to the western tip of Cuba. In the afternoon real tropical heat was encountered.

A picture show featured the night's entertainment program.

TWO CINCINNATI BREWERIES SEIZED BY THE GOVERNMENT

Bureau of Internal Revenue Authorized to Take Such Action Against All Violating the Dry Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Bureau of Internal Revenue has authorized the seizure of all breweries making beer with an alcoholic content of more than one-half of 1 per cent. This is the beginning of a drive under the nuisance provision of the Volstead act, which enables the Government to seize and sell property used for the manufacture or sale of intoxicating liquors. The Herancourt and Jackson breweries at Cincinnati were ordered seized after it was found that their products exceeded the legal limit of alcoholic content.

The Anti-Saloon League takes issue with the Bureau of Internal Revenue on its decision that the Volstead act provides for the granting of permits to wholesale dealers to handle liquor. It and other temperance organizations led with the prohibition enforcement department a protest against the renewal of permits to wholesale liquor dealers under the Volstead act. The permits expire in December, and applications for renewals are on file.

It was urged by Attorney Wheeler, who filed the protest, that permits to wholesale liquor dealers, who are not manufacturers or wholesale druggists, are not authorized under the prohibition act. It was insisted that the issuance of these permits is in direct conflict with the expressed purpose of the Volstead act to "prevent the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage."

FREE DELIVERY LIMITS OF EXPRESS EXTENDED

Public Service Commission Order Based on North St. Louis Business Men's Request.

An extension of the free delivery limits of the American Railway Express Co. in the northern part of St. Louis, to take effect Dec. 15, was ordered yesterday by the State Public Service Commission, at the request of the North St. Louis Business Men's Association.

The new boundaries of the free delivery service will include the new northwest industrial district. The boundaries are Hamilton avenue, Kennerly avenue, Clara avenue, Union boulevard, Brown avenue, Euclid avenue, Natural Bridge avenue, Cora avenue, Florissant avenue, around O'Fallon Park to Broadway and Athlone avenue, Hall street and Gano avenue to the river.

HOLDUPS IN 3 MONTHS SHOW 91 PCT. INCREASE OVER PERIOD IN 1916

Police Figures for August, September and October Show 27 Per Cent More Burglaries.

REPORTED PROPERTY LOSS MUCH GREATER

Total of $91,730 for This Season 845 Per Cent Larger Than in Same Period Before War.

Investigation by the Post-Dispatch of records at Police Headquarters, completed yesterday, disclosed that in August, September and October of this year the number of highway robberies in the city increased 91 per cent over the number committed in the same three months of 1916, before our entrance into the war. Burglaries increased 27 per cent.

The number of highway robberies in the three-month period this year was 553, while in 1916 they totaled 290 for the same period. There were 765 burglaries in that period this year, compared with 602 in 1916.

In the 553 highway robberies this year the persons robbed reported losses totaling $91,730, as compared with reported losses of $9732 in the 1916 period, an increase of 845 per cent. Burglary losses reported for the 1920 period were $119,708, compared with $25,073 in 1916, or an increase of 377 per cent. Whisky thefts and payroll robberies were the chief contributing factor in the increased value of property stolen in the 1920 period.

Chief O'Brien's Explanation.

Chief of Police O'Brien, whose department represents the people in the field in the fight against criminals, was asked for an explanation of the increase in crime in the city. To a Post-Dispatch reporter, he said:

"In the first place I want to point out that payroll robberies and reported thefts of whisky, which were exceptionally rare in the period before the war, constitute the chief contributing factor in the increased value of stolen property in 1920. In fact, all property values this year are much greater than they were in 1916.

"I also wish to call attention to the fact that those reported whisky thefts, running into thousands of dollars, should be carefully considered before being accepted. In the first place, the bootlegging value of the liquor is given. Whisky purchased at from $1 to $1.50 a quart was valued, after reported theft, at from $20 to $25 a quart, the estimated replacement cost at bootlegging prices. While many reported thefts from private stocks were undoubtedly based on fact, detectives who investigated reported thefts from storage places were satisfied in many instances, although unable to prove it, that the report was fictitious and made for the purpose of concealing unlawful removal of liquor.

"In justice to the Police Department, some mention should be made in presenting crime statistics that, in the three months of 1920 referred to, the Detective Bureau has recovered stolen property valued at $152,597. Consideration also should be given to the fact that out of a total of 684 automobiles stolen this year all but 133 have been recovered, as compared with the records of 1918, when 845 out of a total of 2241 stolen cars were not recovered, and of 1919, when 287 out of 1244 stolen cars were not recovered.

Force Remains Same Size.

"Another thing to bear in mind is that in 1900, when the city's population was 200,000 less than what it is now, we had as many patrolmen as we have today. The walking force consists of 1400 patrolmen and 190 Sergeants, including Detective Sergeants, and, with the exception of 35 of the Sergeants, that is the same force we had 20 years ago when the population of the city was 575,238, as compared with the present population of 772,897.

"But I am not trying to belittle the crime situation. There is a lot of it going on, not only in St. Louis, but in other American cities. Conditions here are no worse than in other cities of proportionate size. There are comparatively few professional crooks at work. Most of the burglaries and highway robberies are being committed by boys. The records are filled with confessions of lads between 16 and 20 years of age.

"Why do these boys prefer to start out on a career of crime rather than take up some honest means of livelihood? What makes crime popular?

WOMAN CUSTOMER KILLED BY ROBBERS IN BUTCHER SHOP

Mrs. Mary Glowalski, Mother of Four Children, Shot When She Fails to Comprehend Command to Hold Hands Up.

Mrs. Mary Glowaski, 36 years old, of 821 O'Fallon street, mother of four children, died at the city hospital at 10:45 o'clock last night from a bullet wound inflicted by a robber at 10 o'clock when she failed to comprehend a command to put up her hands.

Mrs. Glowaski was one of several customers in the butcher shop of Alex Kogut, 1316 North Ninth street, when three holdup men, each carrying a revolver, entered the place and ordered "hands up." She was standing in the rear part of the store with a market basket on her arm and holding the hand of her 5-year-old daughter.

Kogut and his three clerks obeyed the order. So did all of the customers with the exception of Mrs. Glowaski. Being unable to understand English, she failed to comply, but glanced about her in apparent bewilderment. One of the clerks, Nick Kogut, 19, a son of the proprietor, was hit on the head with the butt of a revolver by one of the robbers because he did not put up his hands quick enough to suit the robber.

Shot Through the Neck.

One of the robbers had the people at the counter covered with his revolver and another had gone behind the counter to the cash register. Mrs. Glowaski started toward the front door and before she had taken two steps the third robber fired at her. The bullet entered the left side of her neck and came out on the right side. She fell unconscious.

The robbers ran to a waiting automobile across the street from the butcher shop and joined two men who were sitting in the car. They drove south a block to O'Fallon street, east to Sixth street and south on Sixth street.

As the automobile departed Kogut and the others ran into the street and yelled for help. Much excitement followed among the Polish residents of the neighborhood. Frank Glowaski, the husband of the wounded woman, was among the first to reach the scene. He found his wife unconscious on the floor and his little girl stroking the mother's face. An ambulance arrived a few minutes later and as Mrs. Glowaski was being conveyed to the city hospital her husband took the little girl home. Mrs. Glowaski died at the emergency room at the hospital.

Merchant Upbraids Police.

When policemen responded to the cries for help they were upbraided by Kogut for not having arrived sooner. The proprietor and other witnesses were so unnerved by their experience that it was some time before the police could get a comprehensive story of what had taken place.

Kogut said that the robbers had taken about $50 from his cash register but had made no attempt to rob any of the customers. Witnesses said that the robbers used a Dodge touring car on which there was no license tag. The only description of the robbers which the police were able to obtain was that they were all young men, and strangers in the neighborhood.

Soon after the hold-up the police arrested five young men in a saloon at Blair and Cass avenues and took them to the Carr Street Police Station where they were held on suspicion.

26 PER CENT INCREASE IN EXPRESS RATES APPROVED

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, Nov. 20.—The Public Service Commission today approved the application of the American Railway Express Co. to increase Missouri rates 26 per cent in accordance with the increase granted on interstate traffic by the Interstate Commerce Commission, which became effective in September.

The increases are to become effective Dec. 1, 1920.

CANADIAN WARNS LEAGUE TO AVOID INTERNAL AFFAIRS

N. W. Rowell, Answering Proposal to Make All Raw Materials Available, Says U. S. Would Object.

BELGIAN FAVORS INTERNATIONAL ARMY

Senator La Fontaine Declares World Is Not Yet Ready to Disarm—Plea for Revision of Article 18.

GENEVA, Nov. 20.—The old world and the new clashed today on the floor of the assembly of the League of Nations. Intimating that he voiced the sentiments of the United States along with those of his own country, Newton W. Rowell, heading the Canadian delegation in the temporary absence of Sir George Foster, warned the league not to interfere with international distribution, his remarks on which subject were occasioned by a plea on Belgium's part for "some arrangement by which no one nation should have priority over raw materials," simply because deposits of them chanced to exist.

Tomasso Tittoni, Chief Italian Envoy, speaking as a member of the league council in that body's defense, deprecated the categorical character of the Canadian's remarks which "immediately shut the door to all possibility of discussion and arrangement."

Rowell's speech was delivered in a very emphatic style that left no doubt as to the firmness of Canada's opposition to the Belgian delegate's formula that the earth is a vast territory, unique in its entirety, from which humanity, spoken as a whole, must derive full profit and advantage in equal manner. He insisted that the League's primary function was the preservation of peace and that economic dispositions came second.

Opposes Any Meddling.

Urging that for the discharge of its primary obligation the league must include all the great nations of the earth, Rowell said:

"If there is one idea held more tenaciously than another on our side of the Atlantic it is that we must retain control of our own internal affairs. You can never expect the great nation south of Canada to become a party to this league so long as there is any suggestion in the convention that you are going to interfere in the domestic affairs of that country. Therefore, I think it is unfortunate to throw out of this assembly and to the public any proposal to the effect that the covenant of the league covers the question of raw materials.

"To introduce it here and to obscure the primary function of the league is only to mediate against the league's efficiency and impair the position we hold in the public estimation of the world."

Rowell also criticised the Powers represented on the league council for failing to support with appropriate action that body's decisions, to which Signor Tittoni retorted that the members of the council do not consider themselves the mouthpieces of their Governments, but rather as magistrates seeking to carry out the highest principles of justice and right.

The Italian delegate's address, which was in effect the council's own view of its activities, drew the fire of G. N. Barnes of Britain because of its silence about the threatened war between Poland and Soviet Russia.

Barnes Against "Hush-Up."

"I protest," Barnes exclaimed, "against what I consider to be a policy of hush-up with regard to this question."

President Hymans inquired if the British delegate desired to put down a formal motion in this connection, but no reply was given.

A movement which is likely to result in several, perhaps all, languages of the nations represented here, being made "official" in league usage, but only one—French—being recognized as the universal medium in assembly debates, developed this morning at the plenary session. Eighteen countries, 13 Latin-American and the other five, Spain, Britain, Belgium, Denmark and Switzerland, moved an amendment to the provisional rules to the effect that Spanish be added to French and English as the assembly's official tongues. M. Tittoni and M. Branting of Sweden insisted that the motion must be handed over to the Committee on Organization without preliminary discussion by the assembly, and this was done after M. Viviani expressed France's entire sympathy with the proposed measure.

There is good reason to believe that Italy and Sweden will urge that their respective languages also be made official, and that since it will be obviously impossible because of the delay involved to translate every word uttered in the assembly into all these different languages the outcome will be that English will be dropped and only French retained. This will not mean that only French may be spoken, for, under the rules as they stand, any tongue may be employed, but simply that the speeches will be translated only into French instead of into both French and English, as at present. Save for a few Anglo-Saxon delegates, all the members of the assembly speak French, and the bulk of the speeches thus far have been made in that language. Hence English could be abolished without great inconvenience, whereas to add Spanish, not to speak of other languages, would tend to make the business of translation interminable.

Dutch Delegate Asks for Revision of Registration Article.

By the Associated Press.

GENEVA, Nov. 20.—The first formal step looking toward the revision of the covenant of the League of Nations was taken by the assembly of the league at today's session. The Dutch Minister of Foreign Affairs, H. A. Van Karnebeek, introduced a resolution for reconsideration of article 18, having to do with the registration of treaties.

The resolution provides that the reconsideration be conducted either by the assembly itself or by a committee, to make the meaning of the article clearer.

Tonkheer Van Karnebeek first called attention to this point at yesterday's session. He said there were several interpretations of the article, which, in brief, provides that treaties between nations shall not be binding until they are registered with the league, and proposed that it be studied carefully with a view to its clarification.

(The text of article 18 reads: "Every treaty or international engagement entered into hereafter by any member of the league shall be forthwith registered with the Secretariat and shall, as soon as possible, be published by it. No such treaty or international engagement shall be binding until so registered.")

World Military Force.

An international military force, with an international staff, was proposed to the assembly by Senator Henri La Fontaine of the Belgian delegation.

Senator La Fontaine had somewhat startled the Assembly by declaring that the world was not yet ready for disarmament.

"It is necessary to say frankly to the people," he said, "that the time for disarmament has not yet come."

Before the world could disarm, he added, "entirely different ideas than those that prevailed before the war must be inculcated and applied."

He proposed that the armaments and armies be comprised in an international force, with an international staff, ready to be used "in the cause of right." Such an organization, he said, could now give aid to Armenia.

Hope that "without too much delay" a way will be found for the entry of the United States into the League of Nations is given by the declarations of President-elect Harding, it was declared in an address to the assembly today by Tomasso Titoni, former Foreign Minister of Italy.

The league, added Signor Titoni, "will never be a League of Nations, until all the nations, without exception, are included in it."

NO VOUCHERS FOR PAYMENTS OF BILLION BY SHIP BOARD

Comptroller of Treasury, After Audit, Reports Disbursements of $1,113,700,345 Are Disapproved.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Nearly one-half of the total disbursements of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation, over a period of 17 months, amounting to more than $2,000,000,000, were unsupported by proper vouchers, according to the audit of the corporation's accounts submitted to Secretary Houston today by the Comptroller of the Treasury in his annual report.

The audit was made by direction of Congress for the period, October, 1918, to February, 1920, and showed that total disbursements of the fleet corporation were $2,732,915,218, of which exception to the payment of $1,184,326,243 was taken by the comptroller because of the "lack of supporting papers." Subsequent production of supporting papers, however, the comptroller said, resulted in a credit to the corporation of $70,625,898, leaving balance as of February as of $1,113,700,345 disapproved by the auditors.

The comptroller presented figures only up to February, but Martin J. Gillen, former special assistant to the chairman of the Shipping Board under Secretary Payne, declared before the Congressional Select Committee on Shipping Board operations in New York that last week that up to March 1, $2,700,000,000 had been submitted for the audit and payment of $1,500,000,000 had been disapproved because the vouchers were not supported by the necessary data.

25 Per Cent Not Explained.

Comptroller Warwick declared that "at least 25 per cent of all vouchers received were unsupported by documents or other papers explaining or justifying the payment."

"It would appear," he added, "as if the Emergency Fleet Corporation considered the approval of the resident or district auditor as sufficient authority or justification for a voucher, especially in reference to 'imprest funds.'"

Imprest funds are explained as funds established by the corporation and set up in banks adjacent to the plants of the ship contractors and expenditures were made from them under general orders of the corporation.

Effective Oct. 1, 1918, the Comptroller continued, the corporation accounts were to be rendered in accordance with the regulations promulgated by the Treasury, but "the audit of the accounts to February, 1920, would indicate that strict adherence thereto has not been made. Little improvement, if any, is noted in the February, 1920, account over the previous period."

Despite the Fleet Corporation's original desire to obtain an audit of its accounts by the Treasury Comptroller Warwick asserted "the corporation apparently found it well-nigh hopeless to bring together the scattered supporting papers necessary to a systematic rendering of its accounts."

"At least," he continued, "no accounts were submitted in response to the request of the department until the interchange of correspondence on the subject promised to reach an acute stage."

The audit was originally asked for by Chairman Hurley, Comptroller Warwick explained, but was declined because of the limitations imposed on the Treasury by law until July 1, 1918, when Congress directed the Secretary of the Treasury to make the audit.

"While there was no reason to impute other motives for the delay than those always afforded by the difficulties of bringing order out of conditions hitherto required to be orderly in accordance with given standards," the Comptroller continued, "the situation presented began to look like a disregard of the law, however excusable. Consequently I viewed it as a duty devolving upon my office to recommend to the Secretary of the Treasury that some action be taken to exact compliance with the law."

Differences of Opinion.

Differences of opinion arose between the treasury auditors and the fleet corporation, Comptroller Warwick said, over the corporation's practice of auditing accounts before payment, a method which was looked on with disfavor by the treasury.

"Apparently the audit before payment was satisfactory to the officers charged with the responsibility," he stated. "Under the system employed it would seem that evidence in support of disbursements was not required to accompany vouchers in all cases, and, presumably, such evidence was left in the hands of contractors and other payees, even if submitted in due form to resident and traveling auditors. That it was so submitted is not evidence before the treasury, and would mean little if shown conclusively.

"A prior knowledge on the part of corporation officers, unsupported by papers of record, would not establish a reason why an audit by the treasury after payment should follow blindly an audit by corporation officers before payment. By its action in requiring a treasury audit it would seem that the Congress sought to have the facts, so far as possible, presented to the Treasury Department and the completed record of operations placed in the files of the departments."

milk, 3 pounds of cane sugar, 3 pounds of salt, 3 pounds of malt extract, 3 pounds of lard, yeast and 11 gallons of water to one barrel of flour, 196 pounds. This formula will produce 285 loaves of bread that will weigh 16 ounces, net each 12 hours after baking. At 6 cents a loaf this amounts to $17.10. Deducting present price of flour, $8.40, there is a remainder of $8.70, which should be ample to take care of other costs and interest on investment." Ehlhardt employs union bakers, and said their present wage was not excessive.

Albert F. Welle, president of the American Bakery Co., which controls five of the largest local bakeries, said flour would have to reach a normal basis before bread prices could be reduced, and then it was likely that the public would be given the benefit in larger loaves at present prices. He could see no prospect of a return to the 5-cent loaf. The capacity of the five bakeries he represents is about 175,000, 14 to 15-ounce loaves a day, which are sold to the retailer at 8 cents and to the consumer at 10 cents.

Reductions by Small Firms.

Many neighborhood bakeries have announced reductions of 20 per cent in their goods, comprising bread, rolls, doughnuts and other sweets, in the last week.

Flour dropped below $9 a barrel at Minneapolis yesterday, the first time it has been below that figure in four years.

60-YEAR-OLD MAN, YIELDING ROBBERS NOTHING, IS SHOT

James Crossett, 60 years old, of 426 Market avenue, East St. Louis, was shot through the abdomen by one of two negro highwaymen who stopped him at Seventeenth street and Broadway, East St. Louis, at 5:40 o'clock last evening when he was on his way to work at the plant of the Valley Steel Co., where he is employed as stationery engineer. He was taken to St. Mary's Hospital, where surgeons said that his condition was critical.

When the negroes demanded his money Crossett took a purse from his pocket and handed it to one of them with the remark that it was empty. The robber examined it and finding that it contained no money, threw it away with an oath. The other negro, who had covered Crossett with a revolver, then lowered the weapon and fired a bullet into Crossett's abdomen. The wounded man fell and the negroes ran away. In the fall Crossett's head was cut. He has a wife and five children.

BRITAIN STANDS WITH FRANCE, PREMIER SAYS

Lloyd George Quoted as Saying That When Reparations Are Fixed Countries Will Be Elbow to Elbow.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Differences between Great Britain and France do not amount to a quarrel, and the views of these two nations have in no way prejudiced the alliance which held them together during the war, said Premier Lloyd George of Great Britain, in an interview at London yesterday with the correspondent of the Petit Parisien. Mr. Lloyd George declared that, regarding reparations, England would stand "elbow to elbow with France," but he insisted that the amount Germany will be called upon to pay should be fixed.

"There are always some people who pick quarrels," said the Premier, in reply to a remark by the interviewer that French public opinion was badly impressed by what France believed to be the British attitude on questions vital to this country. "There is no quarrel, however, and you have just told me there were no interests in the world, on either the French or English side, that can slacken the Franco-British brotherhood. I never thought otherwise."

Reparations Foremost Question.

The interviewer told Mr. Lloyd George the question of reparations took precedence over all others in France, and that in certain French circles there was an impression, either rightly or wrongly held, that the British Premier opposed the viewpoint of the French relative to the amount Germany should pay.

"I would say that this impression is wrongly held," said Mr. Lloyd George. "You say reparations constitute an essential point for France, and I would say it is also of paramount importance for us, since it is evident that the more France gets, the more England will receive.

"I will tell you exactly what I think. It is very simple—make Germany pay all she can. Yes, but how much? Have you a figure? I say the amount should be fixed. Why do I say this? Is it to please Germany? Oh, who could think so? I was a lawyer before entering politics, and when I confronted a debtor I had two courses to choose, either to enforce strictly the rights of my client and sell the debtor's house and furniture at the risk of getting nothing or next to nothing, or saying to him: 'You owe so much. How much can you pay at once? How much in a year or in 10 years? This latter method I found to be best, and this I advise following in dealing with Germany."

"But," objected the interviewer, "suppose you knew the debtor who displayed empty pockets was cheating?"

Check on German Claims.

Mr. Lloyd George smiled as he replied: "Would I believe a debtor without a check being placed on his statements? No, we must check up, estimate and fix the amount due. I always get back to that expression, 'fix.' Let us fix the amount, and when that is done Great Britain will be seen close beside France in demanding payment.

"I have, I think," continued Mr. Lloyd George, "testified by acts and not only by words, to my friendship and admiration for the French democracy. We fought together and conquered together, and must not renounce in peace the arrangements that in the past were dear to my heart. In return, the French people must not think I am become an enemy because I speak as a business man and as a realist. Friends should speak truth to each other and defend the system which seems best to conform with their common interests. Once the decision is reached, then we will stand elbow to elbow."

FRANCE TO PUT MONUMENT ON QUENTIN ROOSEVELT GRAVE

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Lieut. Quentin Roosevelt's grave at Coulance, has been acquired by the French Government, which will place over it a monument and build a road to it.

The ground in which the young aviator is buried was owned by the village blacksmith, and that required for the road by two other villagers named Turpin and Quenardel. All three are great admirers of Americans, and as proof of it, have given their ground so that it may become a perpetual memorial.

GARDNER'S CHICKENS TO FRIENDS

By the Associated Press.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., Nov. 20.—In preparation for his departure from the executive mansion on Jan. 10, Gov. Gardner is sending his large flock of pure-bred chickens to friends throughout the State. More than 50 crates, each containing two hens and a rooster, have been sent out by him.

Gov. Gardner's flock of pure-bred Barred Rock chickens has been a source of interest to visitors here. The Governor has found it necessary to give away the chickens before leaving the executive residence.

Socialist Campaign Cost $16,146.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The Socialist-Labor party today reported campaign receipts of $18,099 up to Nov. 12, and expenditures of $16,146. The report of the clerk of the House of Representatives stated that loans and donations had been made to party activities in Oregon, Michigan, Kentucky and Washington State.

President's Brother-in-Law Brought Into Ship Testimony

Former Washington Bank Employe Tells of "Loan" to R. W. Bolling, Board Treasurer.

Company Named as Paying $30,000 for Favors in Contracts, Denies Charge, Asks to Be Heard.

"Not a Grain of Truth in It," Bolling Says

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.

By the Associated Press.

"THERE is not a grain of truth in it," declared R. W. Bolling, brother-in-law of President Wilson, after reading statements concerning him made today in New York before the House Committee investigating Shipping Board operations by Tucker K. Sands of Washington.

Mr. Bolling said he expected to appear before the committee and would wait until that time to answer any charges or questions concerning his actions as treasurer of the Shipping Board.

of Washington "as its cashier." He also testified he had endeavored without success to secure Mr. Bolling's influence to have this case settled.

"This document says," Chairman Walsh informed the witness, referring to the photostat, "that $40,000 is to be divided among two in the following manner: $25,000 to be paid in one lot and equally divided in the sum of $6250 for each of the four of us—Sisler, Bolling, Cranor and myself."

"Mr. Craynor was to share in this commission, too, was he?" Walsh asked. "The representative of Mr. Downey?"

"Yes, sir."

"And you say, 'During the negotiations, Mr. Downey came to Washington. He ratified the agreement whereby $40,000 compensation was to be paid.'"

"I think I did," the witness replied.

Sands then testified he had purchased a lot from Bolling and that he still owed Bolling $900. He also testified to asking Mr. Bolling to intercede for him with the Department of Justice to get the case against him brought by the bank out of the Department of Justice. Mr. Bolling had refused, he testified.

He said he did procure a loan for Downey amounting to $100,000, which he said was "very favorable for the bank—that it was to be left on deposit."

Says He Gave Back Note.

Sands testified that, in all, he received in the form of notes from Downey $30,000. Asked why he did not get the balance of the $40,000 he alleged was promised him, he said Mr. Downey "raised such a kick about it that I rebated—well, gave him back one note and agreed to rebate $5000 more."

"Well," Walsh asked, reading from the photostat, "if he (Bolling) got no money, how came it you said in this document which you were asked to sign, 'it was always understood by Mr. Bolling and among us that Mr. Bolling was to receive $6250 from the proceeds of the discount of the notes, but for some reason he became worried and would not accept the balance of the $6250 still due. I had in the meantime advanced to him in different sums approximately $1800.'"

"That is correct," Sands replied.

The witness had testified that he "loaned Mr. Bolling $1800."

Replying to Chairman Walsh's quesitons as to which of his statements was correct, Sands said: "What I put in there is correct."

"Did Mr. Bolling ever repay you the $1800 he borrowed from you?" "I think he gave me back about $300."

"He still owes you the balance, then?" "Yes, sir."

"If you have no note or other evidence of that loan, how are you going to collect it if he refuses to pay?"

"Well," said Sands, "I do not ever expect to collect it. I didn't expect to collect it when I loaned it. I thought he would be entitled to that as his part of the commission."

Questioned by Congressman.

Sands said that Bolling did not say he would use his influence, and when asked by Congressman Kelley why he was to give him part of the money if he was not going to perform any service, Sands replied: "Well, he and Mr. Sisler worked together."

"Now, here are two men in connection with the Shipping Board," Kelley said. "They are not, however, connected with the letting of contracts. You agreed to pay them one-fourth of this sum, $10,000 apiece. Now, I ask you, what were they to do?"

"Not $10,000—$6250 apiece," Sands said. "Fifteen thousand dollars was to go to Mr. Cranor."

"Now, what was your understanding with Mr. Bolling as to what he was to do?" Kelley asked. "Mr. Bolling was not to do anything, any further than to help Mr. Sisler."

"What did you seek to blacken Mr. Bolling's reputation for, by consenting to this statement in this document?" "Well, he got about $1800."

"You said he borrowed that from you." "Well, I put it as a loan on my books, because I thought it would be better as a loan until we got ready to repay it."

"But it really was a part of this transaction, wasn't it?" "Yes, sir."

"Did you not tell Mr. Walsh it was not?" "No, sir, I did not say so."

"Then," Kelley continued, "he really did get $1800 out of the money you obtained from the discount of these notes?"

"The first proceeds, yes, sir," Sands said. "You swear to that, absolutely, that Mr. Bolling received $1800 out of the money you received from discounting the first note?"

Put It Down as Loan.

Sands then said he had put it down as a loan "because it would look better and not because it was any different."

Sands also testified he had paid Cranor $9000.

"Did you pay Mr. Sisler his?" Kelley asked. "I think I loaned him $5000 and I think I paid him $5000."

"What do you mean by 'loaned him five and paid him five?'" "I paid him five, around about five, in money, and then I loaned him."

"Out of the proceeds of this first note." "I don't know about the proceeds of the first note. I think I let him have about $5000 of the first note. Then I loaned him, for his company, which he has not paid me, $5000 more. He paid me $500 back on that."

Sands said the loan was a personal loan on his note. He also said Sisler was then secretary of the Shipping Board.

"And you paid it to him for his influence with somebody in the Shipping Board to get the contract for Downey?" Kelley asked. "Well, I cannot say that," Sands replied.

The witness said he still had Sisler's note for $5000 on which $4500 was still due, and that he could produce it.

Kelley asked Sands if Bolling's refusal to help him with the District Attorney at Washington had anything to do with Sands bringing him into the case.

"No, sir," Sands said. "I really regret very much bringing him in, because, if I may use the expression, I am really devoted to him. I hated above everything to bring him in, more than I can say. I am very fond of him today."

Denial by Company.

Testimony given today before the Walsh committee, naming the Downey Shipbuilding Corporation of New York in connection with alleged collusion to obtain contracts, was declared by officials of the corporation tonight to be "absolutely false."

Denials of the allegations and a request that they be immediately subpenaed to appear before the committee to disprove them were made in a telegram sent by officials of the corporation tonight to Representative Walsh. The telegram was signed by Wallace Downey, president; A. A. Cannon, treasurer, and J. C. Hunter, counsel.

"The Downey Shipbuilding Corporation did not pay any bribe of any kind or amount to any party or parties for procuring contracts," Downey said.

Bolling's Explanation Was Satisfactory to Benson.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Chairman Benson of the Shipping Board, in a formal statement regarding charges of bribery made before the Walsh committee in New York against R. W. Bolling, treasurer of the board, declared today that Bolling's explanation of the report was "perfectly satisfactory."

"While the attitude of the chairman of the Shipping Board is to render every possible assistance to the Walsh Investigation Committee," Chairman Benson's formal statement said, "and to do everything possible to aid them in carrying out the duties assigned to the committee, he feels that in view of the serious charges that have been made against a responsible official of the Shipping Board, in order to reassure the public mind at the earliest possible date, he should make a statement in regard thereto."

The chairman said that after he took office and Bolling was appointed treasurer, Bolling told him "the whole story of the alleged charges," made by Tucker K. Sands.

"His explanation was perfectly satisfactory to the chairman of the Shipping Board," Admiral Benson said. "In addition, after the same subject had been brought to my attention by Mr. McGann, the matter was discussed with Col. Goff, our general counsel, and together we directed that a thorough and complete investigation of the various allegations and charges against Mr. Bolling be made."

Investigator's Report Cited.

Attached to the chairman's statement was a copy of the report of the investigation made by the Division of Investigation, dated Sept. 23, 1920. It was signed by Frank Burke, chief of division, who said the inquiry had been as to "charges made that Mr. R. W. Bolling, now employed by the Shipping Board, had participated in commissions, said to have been paid by the Downey Shipbuilding Company to Tucker Sands."

"I saw Mr. Houston Thompson, vice-president of the Federal Trade Commission, and who was for some time up to the latter part of 1919 United States Assistant Attorney General," the report said, "who told me that Mr. Bolling came to him about two years ago and reported that an unsigned communication had reached Mr. Tumulty, secretary to the President, in which the writer charged that he had accepted part of $40,000 which was paid by Downey of the Downey Shipbuilding Co. to Tucker Sands.

"Mr. Bolling requested Mr. Thompson to make a very thorough investigation because of the fact he was charged with a serious crime and if he was guilty he should be punished; if innocent his innocence should be established. The letter, it seems, was either misplaced or destroyed so that nothing was done at the time."

After receipt of a second unsigned letter which "they believed emanated from the Sands family," Thompson said, Bolling had told him that Tucker Sands had made "a very urgent demand that he (Bolling) see the President and use his influence with the President to have the activities of the Department of Justice stopped and have the prosecution against Sands dropped."

"Sands at this time," the statement continued, "was under indictment by a Federal grand jury charged with violation of the banking act. On advice of Mr. Thompson, Mr. Bolling wrote a letter to Sands telling him that, while he regretted exceedingly that he had become involved with the Government, he could not and would not approach the President on any such proposition."

Investigation by the Department of Justice of the charges against Bolling was then ordered at Bolling's repeated request, Mr. Thompson said.

Check Stubs Produced.

Pre-war transactions between Bolling and Tucker Sands, which "aggregated not more than $300," were mentioned and in this connection Burke's report said Bolling had produced his check stubs and other documents, "which, after investigation, proved to be transactions outside of and prior to the date on which Sands charged that Downey paid over a sum of money, part of which he charged was given to Bolling.

Expert bank accountants from the Department of Justice traced out all checks, notes, drafts and other papers "that could possibly have any bearing on the case," the report said, and "failed to find anything that corroborated the statement of Sands," adding:

"In the belief of Mr. Thompson, it was blackmail engineered by Sands to force Mr. Bolling to intercede with the President to save Sands from further prosecution by the Department of Justice."

"In view of the fact that this matter had been investigated by the Department of Justice and nothing found incriminating against Mr. Bolling," Burke's report said, "I will consider this matter closed as far as the division of investigation is concerned, unless otherwise instructed."

Bolling later today in the presence of Admiral Benson made a public statement explaining his connection with Sands and the Downey Shipbuilding Co. He had been acquainted with Sands since 1913, he said, and had built a house for the banker in 1916, out of which grew an indebtedness, he said, from Sands to him, which amounted to $3000 in 1918.

"At that time Mr. Sands introduced Mr. Cramer (later identified as a representative of the Downey corporation) to me, asking that he get certain pieces of machinery—bending rolls they were—which the fleet corporation was to furnish the Downey Shipbuilding Co. in connection with the construction of vessels," Bolling said, "and which, while promised to them, were going to be shipped to some other shipbuilding concern. He asked me if I could help him have these bending rolls shipped to Downey.

Offered to Pay $500.

"Some time after that, Sands told me that he had received a fee for procuring these bending rolls from Downey and offered to divide it with me. I think the fee was $1000. I told Sands that under no condition would I accept any part of it.

"Sands then told me that, as he had never paid me any profit on building the house, I having waived same, he would like to pay me what I thought was a fair profit for the work which I had done. I told him that $500, I thought, would be very reasonable if he wanted to pay it. Even then he did not pay all of it, giving me $200 then and $300 later.

"That is about the story, except that Sands has left out that he still owes me $900 on the original note on that house. Mr. Sands has never given me another cent of money except his curtailment on the note, and I have his last letter saying he could not curtail the same."

DROP IN PRICE OF MEAT HERE THIS WEEK PREDICTED

Many Grades of Cattle, Hogs and Sheep Sold at National Stockyards Last Week at Before-the-War Prices.

Many grades of cattle, hogs and sheep sold at the lowest prices recorded since before the war, at the National Stockyards last week. A large number of these animals were sold to butchers for consumption in St. Louis, and dealers said the reduction should be apparent in the retail price of meat here early this week.

Some of the reductions were so great, and came about so swiftly, as to approach a condition of panic, straight heifers and "canners," for instance, bringing the lowest price since 1912. Hogs were lower than at any time since 1917, sheep reached the lowest price level since 1915, and lambs were lower than they had been since 1916.

Several Reasons Advanced.

Several reasons were advanced for the decline of the market. Shipments of animals to the market were larger than for several months, stock raisers sending many immature and half-fat animals to the yards. Then, too, the approach of Thanksgiving, as always, resulted in a boom in the poultry market, and a consequent falling off of the meat animal market. Exports to foreign countries have been light.

Choice beef steers sold on the hoof at a top price of $15.75 a hundred pounds last week, ranging downward to $14, as compared with a top price of $19.50 last year. Friday's best price on hogs was $11.70, as against a top price of $23.55 in August, 1919. Lambs sold for $21.25 a hundred pounds last January. Last week the top price was $11.50. Sheep brought $17 a hundred pounds in May, 1918. Last week the highest was $5, or less than one-third the high record.

The fall in price extended to practically every grade of meat animals. Butcher yearlings were $1 a hundred pounds under the price at the close of the market a week before, and were a flat $3 a hundred pounds lower than they were 18 days ago. Mixed steers and heifers were down to the price level of 1915. The bulk of cattle sold for canning purposes were $3 to $3.25 a hundred pounds lower than on Nov. 2, reaching the lowest price since 1912. Virtually the only class of animals that brought steady prices was that of veal calves.

NINE PERSONS KILLED IN FIRE IN NEW YORK APARTMENT HOUSE

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Nine persons, constituting every member but one of two families, lost their lives here early today in a fire which destroyed a five-story apartment house at 307 West 146th street. Fourteen families escaped.

Originating, city authorities say, in a baby carriage on the first floor of the brick structure, the fire swept upward through open stairways, cutting off escape through the halls.

All the dead were found on the top floor after the flames had been put under control.

U.S. MEDIATOR SAYS EMPLOYERS' ASS'N IS FIGHTING WAITERS

Gill Asserts It Prevents Him From Getting Strikers' Modified Demands Before Restaurant Owners.

"PHASE OF THE WAR FOR THE OPEN SHOP"

President Davis Says Proposition Contains "Joker" and Admits Organization Is Contributing Money.

Patrick F. Gill, a mediator of the Department of Labor, who was sent here recently by Secretary Wilson to investigate and, if possible, adjust the differences existing between the striking cooks and waiters and the hotel and restaurant owners, stated last night that the Employers' Association of St. Louis had systematically blocked his efforts to arrange a conference between representatives of both sides of the controversy and that there was little hope for mediation under the circumstances.

Gill declared that Albert J. Davis president of the Employers' Association, told him the association was indemnifying restaurant owners against loss while the strike endured and that the Employers' Association was interested in it because it was part of a nation-wide movement to establish the "open shop."

Statement by Gill.

"Davis has persistently declined my recommendations for mediation of the strike," Gill said, "and has refused to take any of my suggestions or plans for conciliation to the employers. He said the St. Louis Employers' Association was in this fight dollar for dollar with the hotel and restaurant owners as part of the nation-wide open-shop movement and was advancing money to the restaurant owners to defeat the strike, indemnifying them against loss through lack of business while the trouble was prolonged."

When asked if Gill had correctly quoted him, Davis said:

"I don't believe I used the expression 'dollar for dollar,' but I did say we were advancing money to the restaurant owners who could not afford to carry on the strike to a successful conclusion for the employers. Gill is not aiming at mediation. His sympathies are with labor, and in the case of the local strike, aims to re-establish the closed shop. He handed me a closed shop proposition in writing to lay before the resturant men and I rejected it."

Proposals of Employes.

Following is the written proposition, approved by the cooks and waiters, which Gill wanted Davis to approve, under which the strikers would return to work at once:

The restaurant company agrees to restore all former employes to their former positions without prejudice, except those guilty of overt acts.

There shall be no discrimination against any employe for being a member of a trade organization.

The company agrees to meet with a committee of its employes, or whoever they may select to adjust any differences that may arise in the future.

No employe shall be required to work more than eight hours within 10 hours in any one day.

Other Demands Listed.

Lockers shall be provided for the use of employes and a rest room with proper sanitation shall be maintained. There shall be no charge against any waiter or cook for the breaking of dishes.

Dinner parties of 20 persons or more shall be considered a banquet with extra pay.

Waiters shall not be required to wash dishes, sweep, dust, clean, or do such work as what is known as porter or bus-boy work.

Uniforms and aprons to be furnished and laundered by employers, and also suitable meals furnished to employes.

Each waiter shall be entitled to one full day off each week.

The wages to be paid shall be the same wages as in the former agreement.

Alleged "Joker" Pointed Out.

Davis pointed to the paragraph reading, "The company agrees to meet with a committee of its employes, or whoever they may select to adjust any differences that may arise in the future," as the "joker" in the proposition, designed to re-establish the closed shop, the word "whoever," according to Davis' interpretation, meaning a "union walking delegate."

Miss Bessie Brooks, president of the Waitresses' Union, said the proposition was a modification of the strikers' previous contract, and was asking only reasonable protection for the workers.

250 French Emigrants Swindled.

By the Associated Press

CHERBOURG, France, Nov. 20.—Two hundred and fifty emigrants bound for the United States are penniless here because the ocean steamship tickets provided them by the supposed agent of a navigation company in Paris, before they left by train for Cherbourg, proved to be forgeries. Manager Chapira of the American Society for the protection of emigrants, has asked the police to arrest a man charged with pocketing 300,000 francs, and delivering forged tickets.

CRIME INCREASE OVER 1916 SHOWN BY POLICE RECORD

Follow the cases of highwaymen and burglars into the courts and you will soon find out. How many are convicted and punished? You can't stop crime by encouraging it. The police have no moral support in their efforts to check crime. First offenders are shown too much consideration. Well, it is chiefly with first offenders that we have to deal.

"Take the payroll robberies. Nearly all payroll accounts are protected from theft by insurance. How many paymasters, carrying large sums of money from the bank to their place of business, are accompanied by armed guards? We cannot furnish policemen to watch payrolls. If we did we would not have enough men to patrol the city. It stands to reason that a man feels less responsibility when his property is protected by insurance. If he had to stand the loss he would take pains to see that the money was not stolen. The insurance companies did a big thing for the police when they changed their fire insurance policies so as to regard certain commercial enterprises as 'moral risks.' It did more to reduce arson cases than all the policemen of the United States could have done.

Effects of War Felt.

"The present crime situation is an aftermath of the war and will not continue. When other things return to normal there will be a falling off in crime. Only a small percentage of those arrested for burglary or robbery are men who saw service in the war. Many people seem to think that soldiers, after handling firearms in France and returning home with that experience, are responsible for the unusually large amount of crime. That is not so. The majority of those arrested never saw military service. It may be that they acquired the notion of packing a gun and sticking somebody up from accounts they had heard of exploits by soldiers in the war.

"We all know that primarily the object of the Police Department is to prevent crime, but when a situation arises that appears to be general throughout the country some mention should be made of what the police are doing in the way of catching criminals and recovering the property they have stolen. If the criminals are not punished in court that is not our fault."

"Can you outline specific cases in which you think a criminal has been dealt with improperly in the courts?" the reporter asked.

"As a striking example, take the case of Christy Dunn," replied Chief O'Brien. "He is a gangster and self-styled thief, who was shot Nov. 7 last when trying to hold up a saloon at High and O'Fallon streets. He has been arrested 33 times since 1913 and has been charged with everything, from murder to larceny, and yet he has served only part of a workhouse sentence. He was arrested for burglary and grand larceny in December, 1918, in connection with the theft of a wagonload of bags from the warehouse of the International Bag and Burlap Co and on May 19, 1919, was permitted to plead guilty to petty larceny and was sentenced to a year in the workhouse, and on Nov. 26 of the same year was released on parole. There are many cases like this."

The reporter then went to Circuit Attorney McDaniel, who represents the people in the courts in the fight against criminals, and asked him to comment upon Chief O'Brien's complaint that the courts are in part to blame for crime conditions. Said the Circuit Attorney:

Unrest Is Still Felt.

"Two years ago, when I was advocating the restoration of capital punishment, I told the legislators at Jefferson City that there would be a crime wave following the war and I was accused of insulting the American soldiers in France. Conditions pertaining to crime are no worse here than they are in any other city in the United States. It will continue until the readjustment period has passed and the present state of unrest is over. Crime conditions are abnormal now, just the same as everything else.

"The police make a mistake when they say the courts should co-operate with them. It is not the function of the courts to co-operate with the police or prosecutor any more than it is the purpose of the courts to co-operate with alleged violators of the law. The statutes provide for the paroling of first offenders and the power to exercise that authority is left to the discretion of the Judges. The records of the Circuit Court show that less than 10 per cent of the persons paroled have been arrested for second offenses, and I consider that a mighty good record. It indicates that those who have been paroled have either reformed or left the city.

"To say that a man has a police record does not mean that he is a criminal. Take the case of Chief O'Brien, when he was shot by one of three highwaymen. More than 300 suspects were arrested in connection with that shooting, and each one was booked by the police as 'suspected of assault to kill.' Now, it stands to reason, that as only three men figured in the assault, 297 of those arrested were innocent and yet they are carried on the police records to this day as having been arrested on a charge of assault to kill. A man might be arrested 50 times and yet when he is finally brought to the bar of justice for the first time it does not necessarily follow that he is an habitual crook just because the police have been arresting him every time they believed he was connected with a crime.

Positive Evidence Required.

"The police deal in mere suspicion, but the courts deal in law. The mere presumption of guilt will not convict a man in court. We must have the positive evidence and enough of it to remove any reasonable doubt as to the man's guilt. Sending a boy to the penitentiary on his plea of guilty to a first offense, when he can be sent to a reformatory or be paroled to responsible persons, is not going to stop crime. There is as much crime going on in other states that have no parole law.

"The courts are performing their duty with the highest regard for the public welfare, and are no more responsible for the present crime situation than they are for any other abnormal state of affairs. I know nothing about the police record of Christy Dunn. I only know that he was dealt with in court impartially and according to law."

Chief of Detectives Hannegan and Inspector Walsh, who were in Chief O'Brien's office when he made his statement to the Post-Dispatch, upheld his contention that courts are too lenient with offenders.

"The public does not understand the difficulties confronting the police," said Chief of Detectives Hannegan. "There is too much coddling of crooks. You ought to see the delicacies that are brought to prisoners. They are petted as though they were heroes. Students of crime have criticised the brutality of policemen, but they never say anything about the brutality of the crooks. The common law bond and parole systems are overlooked.

"You may consider me hard-hearted, but I believe, like Bill Pinkerton does, that the whipping post should be restored. There is only one way to minimize crime and that is to severely punish it so that will not appeal to so many people. There is a growing tendency in some circles to keep people out of the penitentiary. That is all well and good, but if we have to send some people to the penitentiary in order to set an example to others it ought to be done. It is much better to teach people to fear crime on account of the consequences than to feel sorry for them after they have made a misstep and tell a hardluck story just to get out of paying the penalty."

2 LEADERS IN ETHICAL CULTURE MOVEMENT TO SPEAK HERE TODAY

Prof. Snell of London and Dr. Wagner of Switzerland to Be at Sheldon Memorial.

Two leaders of the Ethical Culture movement in Europe—Prof. Harry Snell of London, and Dr. Jean Wagner of Switzerland—will speak at 11 a. m. and again at 8 p. m. tomorrow at Sheldon Memorial, home of the Ethical Society here, 3648 Washington boulevard. They will tell of the growth of the movement in Europe during and since the war, which, they say, has been very pronounced.

Dr. Snell, who is secretary of the Union of Ethical Societies of England, also is a noted speaker and writer on labor questions. Dr. Wagner is a member of the faculty of the University of Lausanne, and formerly was associated with Bjornsterne Bjornson, famous Norwegian author, from whom he absorbed many of his religious convictions.

The visitors, who are touring this country at the instance of the American Union of Ethical Societies, said upon their arrival that the war had greatly weakened most of the orthodox churches, and that the Ethical Socieities, whose members usually are people who have left the churches, had profited accordingly. Preceding the talks tomorrow night, a dinner in honor of the guests will be given at Sheldon Memorial.

LIBERTY CENTRAL TRUST CO. OF ST. LOUIS, TITLE FOR NEW BANK

To Apply at Once for Membership in Federal Reserve System, President Says.

The new bank resulting from the consolidation of the Central National and Liberty Banks will be designated the Liberty Central Trust Co. of St. Louis.

In making this announcement yesterday, J. L. Johnston, president of the Liberty Bank, said that the decision to operate the consolidated banks as a trust company was due to the fact that the trust company law in Missouri offers many advantages to large financial institutions.

He said also that the new institution would apply immediately for membership in the Federal Reserve System and that the new trust company would operate all departments common to all banks. The quarters will be those now occupied by the Central National Bank at Third and Olive streets.

GRAND JURY WILL CONTINUE ELECTION FRAUDS INQUIRY

Body to Renew Investigation of Alleged Primary Irregularities at 2 O'Clock Tomorrow Afternoon.

SIX BENCH WARRANTS ISSUED YESTERDAY

Men Named Will Surrender to Offer Bonds Signed by Gabriel Roth and Emory Chase.

The grand jury will resume its inquiry into primary election irregularities at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Since the beginning of the investigation Nov. 8 it has returned indictments against 29 election officials in five precincts of as many wards, the latest to be indicted being the six officials who served at the primary, Aug. 3, in the Fourth Precinct of the Fifth Ward.

Beach warrants for the six were issued yesterday. The men indicted are W. F. Rutherford, 107 North Sixth street, and F. A. Schwaner, 819 Pine street, Republican judges; Ruby Bass, Laclede Hotel Annex Republican clerk; Joseph Powers of 523 Chestnut street, and Tony Ortale, 523 Chestnut street, Democratic judges, and Ralph J. Ortell, 523 Chestnut street, Democratic clerk. The Garrick Hotel is at 523 Chestnut street. The precinct polling place is at 513 Pine street.

It was announced yesterday afternoon that the six would come into court and surrender at 10 a. m. tomorrow and their bonds would be signed by Gabriel Roth, Republican committeeman of the ward, and by Emory Chase, proprietor of the Garrick Hotel, where all the Democratic officials of the precinct lived at the time of the primary. Chase was a Democratic candidate for the Legislature in the November election and was defeated.

One reason for the delay in the surrender of the six officials was said to be that Schwaner, one of the indicted Republican judges, was in a hospital, but expected to be discharged today and it desired that the other indicted men should wait until he could join them.

Change of Ballots Charged.

It is charged in the indictments that in the Fourth Precinct, Fifth Ward, a comparison of the ballots with the returns signed by the election officials showed that votes had been taken from some candidates and given to others.

The total Democratic vote cast in the precinct for most officers was 215 and the Republican vote 67. The Republican returns showed large pluralities for the "Courthouse Ring" candidates.

Republican returns from this precinct showed that, for nominations for Circuit Judge, Killoren, Kimmel and Ossing, the "Courthouse Ring" candidates, received 60 votes each while the highest vote for any other candidate was 6 for Grimm. For the Court of Criminal Correction nomination Krueger, the "Courthouse Ring" candidate, was credited with 60 votes, while Parker was credited with 4 and Bates 3.

On some other Republican nominations the returns for the precinct were: Senator, Spencer 50, Davis 17; Governor, McJimsey 50, Hyde 17; Sheriff, Schmoll 50, Mohrstadt 17; Public Administrator, Slater 50, Weinbrenner 7, Hampe 3; City Treasurer, Schuler 61, Vitt 2, Brinkmann 2, Dunn 1, Grosby 1.

On the Democratic ticket for nomination for United States Senator the returns showed 160 votes for Priest and 40 for Long. For Governor the return was 170 for Mayer and none for Atkinson.

Officials Furnish Bonds.

The six primary election officials of the Second Precinct, Fifth Ward, indicted Thursday, came into court together yesterday and gave $800 bond each. They were accompanied by Patrick O'Neill, Democratic Committeeman of the ward, and the bonds were signed by Thomas Flynn of 5804 Prescott avenue, a retired building contractor.

The Second Precinct, First Ward, officials, who gave bond are: W. H. Schubert of 5040 Benedict avenue, and August Lesser of 507 East Gano avenue, Republican judges; J. J. Pfannebecker of 4517 North Second street, Republican clerk; Daniel Grady of 4914 North Broadway, and James Halinee of 509 East Gano avenue, Democratic judges, and Jeremiah Malinee of 507A East Gano avenue, Democratic clerk. The precinct polling place was at 4828 North Broadway.

A registration canvass made by employes of the Department of Public Safety showed that 23 persons were registered from the Garrick Hotel. At the time of the investigation, Oct. 7, Chase said the hotel had 12 guests.

The present grand jury's term will close Dec. 4. It is expected that in its final report it will recommend changes in the primary laws and will ask that the primary election investigation be continued by the next grand jury.

Meeting of Brotherhood Welfare Body.

The International Brotherhood Welfare Association will meet at Brotherhood Hall, Thirteenth and Pine streets, at 3:30 p. m. today The Rev. Howard Billman will speak on "The Church and the Hobo Problem." Discussion will follow.

SUES TO ESTABLISH FIREMEN'S RIGHT TO OVERTIME PAY

Counsel for Firemen's Union Files Claim of Former Member of Department for $4852.

A test suit to establish the right of city firemen to overtime pay was filed yesterday against the City of St. Louis by Edward W. Foristel, as attorney for the City Firemen's Union. While the amount specified in the suit is only $4852, being the claim of Otto Stieber of 912 Utah street, a former member of the department, Foristel estimated that the total involved is approximately $4,000,000.

Stieber's claim dates from August, 1914, when the new city charter became effective, until his termination of service in the department May 2, 1918. It is alleged that the city charter provides that, except in emergency, "not to exceed eight hours shall constitute a day's work for mechanics and laborers employed by the city." Under this provision the firemen, Foristel contends, are entitled to overtime pay. Stieber's claim is for 10,711 hours of overtime.

Foristel told a reporter that if the City Counselor would agree to dispose of all the claims on the result in Stieber's case no more suits would be filed. However, if this cannot be arranged each individual will have to make separate claim, he said.

According to the lawyer, the Firemen's Union is back of the litigation. There are 841 members of the Fire Department, practically all of whom are members of the union, the attorney said. He estimated that the average claim would be about $5000, dating from the time the charter has been in operation.

By the present arrangement the firemen are on duty continuously for 48 hours out of 72, with one day off every three days, Foristel stated. It is his contention that if the charter provision were faithfully observed the firemen would be on duty only 24 hours out of 72. He said they have been required to remain on duty twice the length of time that the charter provides, for which they have not been paid overtime.

In regard to the emergency provision, Foristel asserted that an emergency has to be proclaimed before firemen could legally be required to work overtime without extra pay. No such emergency ever has been declared, and it couldn't be except in cases of an epidemic, riot or general destruction in the city, he said.

LUNCHROOM DAMAGED BY FIRE IN BOILER ROOM

Several Firemen Temporarily Overcome in Fighting Flames at 315 Pine Street.

Fire of undetermined origin was discovered at 6:45 o'clock last night in the boiler room in the basement beneath the New Midday Lunchroom, 315 Pine street. Firemen were driven back by dense smoke when they smashed the glass in the front door, and several were temporarily overcome.

The building was closed for the day at 3 p. m., and the proprietor, A. D. Williams, informed the firemen that he was under the impression that the boiler fires had been extinguished before closing time.

The firemen were greatly handicapped by the great amount of smoke, due, it was said, to burning grease in the kitchen, and although the blaze was kept from spreading beyond the rear part of the building they had not been completely extinguished until five hours after the alarm was sounded. Williams said that he was unable to estimate the damage.

MAN, 70, DEAD IN BATHTUB, WITH HIS THROAT SLASHED

August Beermann, 71 years old, 4457 Athlone avenue, yesterday filled a bathtub with water, then stepped into the tub, and a short time later was found there dead by his wife. His throat had been slashed with a knife.

Policemen who investigated said he evidentally had slashed himself immediately after stepping into the tub. His wife said she knew no reason for his action.

Noted Architects, Guests Here, Praise St. Louis as a City of Homes

Officers and Directors of American Institute Tour City and County After Meeting With Local Chapter.

St. Louis presented itself most strongly as a city of well designed and well situated homes to visiting architects from all over the country who were here yesterday as guests of the St. Louis chapter of the American Institute of Architects, coincidental with the sessions Friday and yesterday of the officers and directors of the institute.

A Post-Dispatch reporter accompanied the visitors, who are among the leading men in the profession, on a tour of the city and nearby county points of interest, yesterday afternoon, and heard their comments. The prime remark was on the residences and the possibility for development of the residence district. Washington University, and especially its architectural school, received their share of praise.

The zoning laws of St. Louis were frequently and approvingly commented on, and the Municipal Theater in Forest Park was praised as a unique and worthy institution.

Constructive Criticisms.

There were few criticisms offered and these were of a constructive nature. The so-called "twilight zone" of one-time fine residences east of Grand avenue and west of the business district in the central part of the city was declared to be a blemish, and one architect expressed disappointment over what he termed the "magnificent" Public Library Building, Thirteenth and Olive streets, which has no pleasing vista in front of it.

Henry H. Kendall of Boston, president of the institute, praised the residence district and the School of Architecture at Washington University. "The work of Prof. Gabriel Ferrand, head of the school, is clearly shown in the work of the students," said Kendall, after the visitors had inspected the drafting rooms and exhibitions of the work. "I was impressed by the excellence of the draftsmanship and the fine training in color work.

"The development of King's highway is a great step, notably for the lengths of parkway. The city will be proud of this thoroughfare for all time. I was also very much impressed with the system of private residence places, such as Westmoreland, for these places, I think, are peculiar to St. Louis. Even a place like Vandeventer place provides a suburban community right in the city.

Twilight Zone" Will Banish.

"There are many beautiful houses. The number of fine churches impressed me. The civic theater and the golf links in the park are excellent things. Far-sighted business sense was shown in the arrangement of the General Motors plant at Union boulevard and Natural Bridge avenue, providing a grass plot in front of the buildings. This gives a present beauty and allows for future street widening. The natural growth of the city will take care of the problem of your 'twilight zone.'"

Robert D. Kohn of New York, one of the directors and former head of the Housing Department of the Shipping Board, said that St. Louis has an advantage a city like New York lacks, namely, a certain unity of situation, that, for instance provides a good residential district within 15 minutes of "downtown" by automobile.

"Your old private residential places remind me of the London squares," Kohn said. "The widening of Washington avenue is a good improvement which should be followed by others. The zoning law will help in improving the district through which this and other streets pass, east of Grand avenue. That section as it is now is deplorable. Do as we did in the East Fifties and East Sixties in New York, buy up whole blocks in this district and consolidate all the backyards into continuous parks or gardens; rearrange and improve the houses, then you will have rehabilitated the district.

Zoning Law Change Suggested.

"A clause in the zoning law similar to that in New York might be helpful. There we permit only buildings of certain heights on the sidewalk lines, but the rear of the buildings may reach considerably higher by a system of steps. For every foot the building recedes from the sidewalk line at the first step, it may go up three feet at the next step, and so on."

The comments of these architects were typical of the opinion of the majority of the visitors. Other remarks were:

"The St. Louis Country Club is one of the finest I have ever seen."

"We could never have an architectural club in New York like yours in Culver way; we have not the land in New York for such an institution for architects and draftsmen anywhere near the business region."

"The Washington University architectural school is a revelation to us. We did not know there was a school there doing such creditable work."

Broad Tour of Observation.

The tour of the architects led from the Chamber of Commerce, where the meeting was held, to Washington University, for luncheon, thence through the Westmoreland-Portland region, the northwest industrial district, Brentmoor, the St. Louis Country Club, the Architectural Club, for a reception and to the St. Louis Club for dinner. John Lawrence Mauran, former president of the institute, piloted the tour and Louis La Beaume, president of the St. Louis chapter, presided at the dinner.

Francis G. Shenahon of Minneapolis, Minn., an engineer, spoke at the dinner, urging closer relationship between engineers and architects.

INTERCHURCH MOVEMENT HAS $8,000,000 OBLIGATIONS

Presbyterians Set Aside Next Sunday for Giving of $1 Each by 1,600,00 to Meet Guarantee.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The Interchurch World Movement still owes $4,067,290 of the $6,501,261 it borrowed from the Bankers Trust Company on the guarantee of 100 of the boards and societies of the denominations participating in the movement. In addition to this debt, which the Bankers Trust has declined to extend, the movement has obligations of its own which bring the total up to approximately $8,000,000. To meet these requirements the various denominational organizations are instituting a vigorous campaign for the meetings of the pledges.

The largest of these pledges was that of the Baptist Church, North, which guaranteed $2,500,000. The Methodist Episcopal Church, North, was next in amount, with $1,000,000 by the Centenary Movement and $200,000 by the Board of Home Missions. Of the sum $1,000,000 has been paid. Presbyterians were third with $1,000,000.

It now appears that the promoters of the movement also went to institutions for the aged and to hospitals for guarantees. The New England Deaconess Association underwrote $26,000; the Wisconsin Deaconess Hospital at Green Bay, $5000, and an old folks home at Mexico, Ind., $2000. These have not been paid.

It is said the movement has received some gifts from religious bodies which guaranteed nothing, in recognition of the fact that they profited by interchurch publicity and efforts.

Presbyterians have named next Sunday as a day on which all of the 1,600,000 Presbyterian members in the church in the North will be asked to give $1 each toward this obligation.

LIEDERKRANZ JUBILEE CLOSES WITH BANQUET

Work of Society in Past Reviewed by Mayor Kiel and Other Veteran Members.

The Liederkranz Club last night concluded the celebration of its golden jubilee with a banquet at the clubhouse on Grand avenue, attended by 300 members. The celebration opened Friday night with a concert.

Music last night was furnished for the diners by a dance orchestra and a number of professional singers. The male, female and mixed choruses sang in an extensive program Friday night.

Mayor Kiel, a veteran member of the club, presided at the banquet last night and Louis Hilfer, secretary, was toastmaster. Hilfer spoke briefly, as did the mayor, both reviewing the work of the society in past years and its opportunity for service in the future. Otto J. Gossrau, president of the society, also spoke.

A feature of the dinner was the presentation of laurel wreaths to veteran members and to faithful officers. The oldest active member of the club, Adam Linck of 4022 Botanical avenue, was presented with a floral lyre. Linck is 87 years old. He joined the society when it was formed in November, 1870, and served 23 terms as secretary. He still is a member of the male chorus, appearing regularly at rehearsals and concerts. August Meyer of Webster Groves, was another veteran member to be honored with a wreath. He joined the society at its birth, but has not been active in the past few years.

The speakers recited the history of the society from its formation, with a small group of members, to today, when the membership is several hundred. Recently the membership was 800, but many have resigned.

The first home of the club was the People's Bank Building, Broadway and Park avenue. After moving from place to place, the club built its own hall at Thirteenth street and Chouteau avenue in 1880. Much of the musical history of St. Louis centered about this place. The present clubhouse was erected in 1907. Recently it was sold to Alhambra Grotto, a secret fraternity, and the Liederkranz will shortly vacate it.

At first the club was purely musical, but in late years the social end began to be given prominence, the society giving dances and social affairs as well as concerts.

Telegrams and letters from musical societies in all parts of the United States congratulating the Liederkranz on its half century of work were read by the toastmaster.

G. O. P. SENATORS LAY GROUND FOR CLUB OVER HYDE

15 Members of Body Take First Step Toward Combine by Agreeing to Let Lloyd Name Committees.

MAY GIVE BLOCK TO LEGISLATIVE PLANS

With Two-Thirds Rule, Combination Might Use Power to Get Jobs, as Was Case With Gardner.

Through an agreement reached yesterday afternoon at a conference of 15 of the 19 Republican State Senators at the Planters Hotel the success or failure of Governor-elect Hyde's legislative program was virtually placed in the hands of Lieutenant-Governor-elect Hiram Lloyd. The Senators agreed that Lloyd should be permitted to choose all Senate committees, which carries with it the selection of committee chairmen.

While every speech delivered in the secret caucus and every idea advanced adhered closely to a policy of unanimous support of the Hyde program of revision of the election laws, reduction of State and legislative clerical forces and the adoption of a fair redistricting bill, the caucus took the first and most necessary step in the formation of a combine which, unless overthrown, can speedily place in the way of the new Governor obstacles which will be embarrassing, if they do not actually defeat his purposes.

There was no indication that any of the Senators had any idea of obstruction, and it is entirely probable that none entertained such an idea, but the combine for which the groundwork was laid is almost exactly the kind of a combine which in other sessions of the Legislature has forced unwilling Governors to bow to its power.

Lloyd to Hold Power.

Lloyd as Lieutenant-Governor will preside over the sessions of the Senate. He is a legislator of experience, having served as majority floor leader for the Republicans in the House in one session and minority floor leader in another. In those positions he gained a reputation as a manipulator of politics and legislation which seldom has been equaled.

The organization of which Lloyd without question will be the head can use its power to rush through the Legislature the entire Hyde program. But it also can use its power to force from the Governor concessions to the Senators on matters of legislation and on all State patronage. Democratic combines of a similar nature in other Senates usually have been used for the latter purpose.

Hyde's preliminary announcement that he would not consider appointments until after his legislative program was out of the way, has made easier instead of more difficult the carrying out of an unfriendly plan by the combine, if it should decide upon one. On the other hand if he should abandon that announced determination and instead fill all the jobs immediately after going into office, an unfriendly combine would have little to use as a club over him.

Next Step for Combine.

The next important step in the formation of an effective combine would be the restoration of the two-thirds rule in the Senate, because it is not to be supposed that a combine of all the Republican Senators can be worked out. Combines seldom include more than a minority of the majority party, but that minority working with a few or all of the minority party is in absolute control of legislation.

The two-thirds rule, which was abolished by the last Senate, required a two-thirds vote of the Senate to take up any measure out of its regular order. Under it the Senate combine need consist only of one-third the membership of the Senate, including members of the minority who will work with it.

A practical illustration of the working of such a combine was given in the 1917 Legislature.

It was the first legislature in the term of Gov. Garnder, a Democrat. A majority of the Senators were Democrats. Gardner had a very ambitious legislative program. As was the case yesterday with Hyde and the Republican Senators, nearly all the Democratic Senators gave a very positive indorsement of the program before the Legislature met.

Gardner Submitted to Combine.

After the Senate was well under way, Senators in the combine began calling on the Governor with requests that he appoint to state positions men of their selection. The Governor had promised many of the jobs the combine was demanding to men who had been his supporters in the primary and to his personal friends. He indicated as much to the Senators. Then things began to happen to the Gardner bills.

Nearly all the important committees had as chairmen men who were in the combine. The Gardner bills were delayed in the committees and not reported out to the floor of the Senate until only a few weeks before the time for adjournment. Ahead of them on the calendar were hundreds of unimportant measures. If all had been taken up in regular order the Gardner bills would not have been reached before adjournment. The combine had sufficient strength to prevent the two-thirds vote necessary to take the bills up out of their regular order.

The Governor was faced, or at least the combine convinced him he was faced, with the alternative of acceding to its demands or losing the greater part of his pet legislative program. He submitted to the combine. It got the jobs and he got the legislation. A fighting Governor might break a combine, but to break one means a real fight and most Governors in the past have preferred to submit than to fight, because if the combine stands pat it has the power.

Hyde's Legislative Plans.

Hyde has announced as the two most important features of his legislative program amendments to the election laws to insure honest elections in St. Louis and Kansas City and a fair redistricting of the State. It is on the former that he faces the possibility of the hardest fight. The Rpublican organization in Kansas City wants amendments to the election laws, but the Republican organization in St. Louis is entirely satisfied with the present laws. Under them there has been no difficulty in rolling up big majorities, and in primaries there seldom has been a time when the organization could not control the selection of candidates. It failed in a few instances in the last primary, but that was unusual.

It is not improbable that Hyde will find the Senators from St. Louis opposed to changes in the election laws as applicable to St. Louis. There are six St. Louis Senators, four Republicans and two Democrats. They probably would have the support of the one Democratic Senator from Kansas City. If there exists a Senate combine of Republicans through which they can work, the Governor probably will be prevented from procuring any changes in the law so far as St. Louis was concerned.

Spirit to Carry Out Program.

If they agreed to change the Kansas City law the Governor would then be in the "hole" of having one kind of a law for St. Louis and another for Kansas City, which would be rather difficult of explanation in another election.

At the session yesterday, which was mostly executive, there was a decided spirit of decision to carry out Hyde's campaign pledges. Several Senators, including Senator Howard Gray of Carthage, declared that the Republican party for 35 years had been charging the Democratic party with all manner of cheap politics in the affairs of State Government, and that the party could not possibly hope to maintain control of the State if it was guilty of the same sort of politics.

Because of the absence of Senator O. A. Pickett of Trenton, the Senators agreed that they would not consider a caucus selection for President pro tem. Pickett is seeking the place. The discussion indicated that Senator Gray probably was the choice of a majority.

Inauguration on Jan. 10.

The Senators announced themselves in favor of the changes in the election laws, of a fair redistricting bill, of good roads legislation in connection with the $60,000,000 bond issue which would be in the interest of the State as a whole, and of consolidating or abolishing State departments which might be found to be duplicating activities or which might be found to be useless.

Lloyd, at the direction of the caucus, appointed Senators Gray, Anderson of St. Louis and Irwin of Jefferson City a committee to make preliminary arrangements for the inauguration of the new Governor Jan. 10.

Those attending the caucus were Senators William A. Collins of Sedalia, Howard Gray of Carthage, Seth M. Young of Hamilton, William C. Irwin of Jefferson City, Peter Anderson of St. Louis, Phil A. Bennett of Buffalo, William F. Depelheuer of St. Louis, E. E. Penzel of Poplar Bluff, David M. Proctor of Kansas City, Richard F. Ralph of Valley Park, Loren E. Seneker of Mount Vernon, Frank B. Warner of St. Louis, Conway Elder of St. Louis, W. F. Robinson of La Plata and Charles J. Belken of Fredericktown. Those unable to attend were Albert Chambers of Eldorado Springs, James N. LaFaver of Parnell, O. A. Pickett of Trenton and B. B. Tout of Archie.

Persian Here to Lecture on the Bahai Revelation

Philosopher in University of the Shah Will Speak at Temple Israel This Morning.

PROFESSOR FAZEL MAZANDRANI

Janabe Fazel Mazandarani, Persian philosopher in the University of the Shah, at Teheran, who is to lecture on the Bahai revelation at Temple Israel at 11 o'clock this morning, and fill engagements to lecture at several other places here this week, arrived in St. Louis last evening accompanied by his interpreter, Ahmad Sohrab. He outlined the principles of the Bahai revelation to a Post-Dispatch reporter at the Plaza Hotel, where he had taken rooms, as a religious philosophy, the purpose of which was to unify humanity along all lines—economic, social, political and spiritual—and its relation to Christianity as being strictly interpretative of Christ's teachings as they relate to the present age.

Prof. Manzandarani is of medium stature and possesses an engaging personality. He speaks scarcely any English, depending altogether on his interpreter for expression. The cards announcing his lectures that have been distributed describe him as a great Persian writer and sage; 'a fluent speaker" whose "face is full of light."

He is 39 years old, and, in his youth, was educated to become a Mohammedan Moolah, but later on became a Bahai, for which he was punished by the Turks with long terms if imprisonment.

Origin of Bahai Movement.

Facts concerning the Bahai Movement, as it is called, were given by Prof. Mazanandarani as follows:

"In 1844 there arose in Shiraz a young Persian know as the Bab, or Gate. He exhorted the people to purity of life and announced to them the coming of a great one with a universal message to mankind. The priests feared loss of their power, and so the Bab was accordingly imprisoned and shot at Tabriz in 1850. Before the Bab's death there appeared a rich and powerful man, who proclaimed himself a believer in the Bab's teachings.

"This was Baha'o'llah, who was banished and imprisoned, and who was succeeded after his death as head of the Bahai by Abdul Baha. The latter now teaches at the Temple of the Bahai, at Hafai, on Mount Carmel, Palestine, the seat of wisdom of the Bahai. There are now about 12,000,000 Bahai devotees, and pilgrims from all the world journey to Mount Carmel for spiritual inspiration."

The Bahai teachings attempt to co-ordinate the ethical principles of all religions for the unification of mankind, as races, into a united states of the world, Prof. Manzandarani explained.

Universal Patriotism Aim.

"So that all this petty patriotism professed by nationals shall be done away with and a universal patriotism inculcated, we also proclaim one God, one race, one religion, as all the deficiencies of mankind are the result of human imagination or political expediency."

He said the Bahai movement in the Orient had virtually emancipated woman until she is now clamoring for the ballot, and where there were no educational advantages for her hitherto, she is now accorded preference in the institutions of learning.

The Bahai's message to Christians, Prof. Manzandarani said, is to learn the Sermon on the Mount without creeds, rituals or formula; to interpret the miracles with reason, and to accept Zoroaster, Mohammed, the Buddha, Brahma, Confucius and the Bab as divines.

UNCLE OF U. S. ATTORNEY DIES

James P. Carroll, 69 years old, of 1609 Hogan street, who was treasurer of the State organization of master plumbers for more than 25 years, died yesterday at Alexian Brothers' hospital of a complication of diseases.

He was a native St. Louisan and had lived in the Hogan street house for more than 50 years. He installed the plumbing 40 years ago in the Federal building, Eighth and Olive street, in which his only nephew, James E. Carroll, now has an office as United States Attorney.

PRIVATE DETECTIVES MUST STAND TRIAL

Habeas Corpus Writ Denied Three Men Accused of Murder in Granite City.

Joseph J. Ople, manager of the Interstate Syndicate Employers' Service, a private detective agency in the Frisco building, and two of his former employes, Earl Miller and Leo Clyne, will be turned over to the authorities of Granite City in connection with the murder there of Clarence W. Turner last May 20, a writ of habeas corpus applied for in their behalf having been denied by the Missouri Supreme Court, yesterday.

Turner was killed by a bullet fired from one of two automobiles which passed through Granite City on their way from the Illinois plant of the St. Louis Coke and Chemical Company, where a strike of construction workmen was in progress. Turner was standing with a crowd of strikers when shots were fired from the automobile into the crowd. Turner was not a striker.

The Coroner's inquest developed that the automobiles were occupied by private detectives employed to break the strike. Ople was traced through the license number on his automobile and Miller and Clyne were arrested later. The three men were identified as occupants of the two automobiles by several eyewitnesses of the murder.

Following the issuance of warrants at Edwardsville charging them with the murder, the prisoners applied for a writ of habeas corpus and refused to go to Illinois, although request for their extradition had been honored by Acting Governor Crossley. They were subsequently released on bond pending action by the Supreme Court.

ATKINSON PROPOSES THAT STATE DEMOCRATS CONFER

Defeated Candidate for Governor Wishes to See Party Program Otulined.

John M. Atkinson, defeated Democratic candidate for Governor, in a letter yesterday to Chairman Yancey of the Democratic State Committee, urged the calling of a meeting of the Executive Committee, men and women, Nov. 30, to outline a definite program for the Democratic party in the state, including the attitude of the party toward the activities of the Republican administration which will be in power for the next four years.

He urged that Democrats in the Legislature should support all clean, progressive measures without regard to their origin, or whether they came from the Republican Governor or from a Democrat. He urged Democratic support for a revision of the election laws, particularly laws governing primaries. In this connection he urged that the Board of Election Commissioners or County Courts in the counties should be permitted to recount ballots if there was evidence of fraud.

Atkinson says Democrats in the Legislature should take a vigorous stand against "any vicious and corrupt gerrymander of congressional and senatorial districts" by the Republicans. The present inequalities of these districts, framed for partisan advantage by Democratic Legislators, are notorious.

He suggested that the action of the Republicans in the matter of districting, and in regard to home rule measures as to city police and election boards, will test the sincerity of the Republicans.

WOMEN'S EXPOSITION ATTENDED BY MORE THAN 60,000 PERSONS

More than 60,000 persons attended the Women's Exposition, given at the Coliseum last week under the auspices of the Board of Religious Organizations, according to announcement at the closing exercises last night. Proceeds of the exposition will not be checked up for several days, but officials said it was probable the returns would exceed expectations, as did the attendance.

The closing musical program last night was a concert by the Welsh chorus of Granite City, consisting of native Welsh singers employed in the Granite City tinplate and steel industries. When the doors closed practically everything offered in the booths was sold out.

KIDNAPER OF COUGHLIN BABY SENTENCED TO LIFE TERM

Solitary Confinement at Hard Labor Specified for Pascal—Murder Charge Suspended.

By the Associated Press.

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 20.—August Pascal, alias Pasquale "The Crank" in the Coughlin kidnaping case, was sentenced to life imprisonment this morning by Judge Swartz, in Norristown court. Pascal pleaded guilty at his trial to charges of second degree murder and kidnaping for extortion.

He stole Blakely Coughlin, the 13-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Coughlin, from their home near Norristown on June 2 last and smothered the infant under his coat. He was sentenced on the kidnaping charge. Sentence was suspended on the second degree murder charge.

Judge Swartz told Pascal he was sorry he could not sentence him to death. The second degree murder sentence will be considered if Pascal is ever released.

Pascal stolidly heard the sentence. "I'm glad it's over," he said to the Sheriff; "I am sorry I did not get the chair; I don't want to live."

Separate and solitary confinement at hard labor in the Eastern State penitentiary at Philadelphia was specified for Pascal. He will be taken to the penitentiary next week.

RUSH ORDERS FOR RED CROSS BUTTONS TO MEET DEMANDS

Though New Issue Does Not Bear "1921" on Face, They Are "Official," Chairman Says.

The first supply of Red Cross membership buttons ordered for the 1921 roll call in the St. Louis chapter have been exhausted and a new rush order had to be placed to provide for the enrollments of the week. The new buttons were made so hurriedly that they do not bear the 1921 stamp on their face, but are "official" regardless of that fact, according to Chairman Frank V. Hammar of the Fourth Roll Call organization. Persons need not hesitate to accept these buttons, Hammar sand, because none of last year's buttons are in existence now, and if they were they could very easily be distinguished from this year's.

Splendid results were shown in yesterday's enrollment by all the divisions, it was reported at Roll Call headquarters in the Kinloch Building, and the prediction is that the total for the campaign will nearly double that of last year. The letter carriers are bringing in the first definite information, and say they meet with very few refusals.

A request was issued by the Roll Call Committee that all persons who have enrolled wear their buttons and display the Red Cross signs in the windows of their homes to show that they have co-operated in the roll call work of the week.

ARMY APLICANT TELLS OF ESCAPE FROM JAIL "UP HOME"

Youth From Louistana Arrested "Only Once," Says He Followed Prisoners Out; He Is Held in Jail.

Allen Smith, 19 years old, of Homer, La., arrived at Jefferson Barracks yesterday to be enlisted in a recruiting company following his application for enlistment at Kansas City, Mo., earlier in the week. As is usual in such cases, he was taken before an officer to be questioned.

"Ever been arrested?" asked Capt. Mitchell, the officer in charge.

"Only once," Smith replied.

"Where?"

"Oh, up home. They picked me up for passing a check another man had given me the latter part of October and put me in the county lockup. There was three crooks in the jail and they dug a big hole under the jail wall. When they were ready to leave they got on the outside and called, 'Come on, kid. Ain't you going to?' I said I reckon I would and crawled out. I wasn't going to stay in there for forgery when I didn't make out the check. I could 'a told them who gave it to me, but I didn't want to give him away."

Capt. Mitchell ordered the youth held until city detectives could be summoned to the barracks. The boy repeated his story to detectives and they took him to Central Station, where he was locked up.

WEBSTER COUPLE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN KILLED BY GAS

Chemical Analyses of Stomachs of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond E. Jarrett Reveal No Traces of Poison.

The deaths of Raymond E. Jarrett and his wife, Mrs. Lydia Jarrett, whose bodies were found Wednesday in their home in Webster Groves, were not due to poison in any form, according to the conclusions of chemical tests made in the laboratory of the St. Louis University Medical School.

After the result of the analysis was announced to Coroner Denny of St. Louis County, yesterday afternoon, he said he believed the deaths were caused by gas fumes. Two gas grates and one illuimating gas jet were burning in the two connecting rooms which the Jarretts occupied, and the doors and windows were closed tightly. Under these conditions, the Coroner believes, the oxygen in the air became exhausted and a portion of the gas escaped without being consumed. The inquest was continued until this morning at 10 o'clock.

The funeral of the Jarretts was held yesterday afternoon under Masonic auspices, and the bodies were buried in Oak Hill Cemetery. L. J. Jarrett of Marshalltown, Ia., father of Jarrett, and three brothers of Mrs. Jarrett were present.

License Refused to Youthful Pair.

Cletus Cottom and Mabel Stevenson, both of Cutler, Ill., were refused a marriage license yesterday in East St. Louis because of their youthful appearance. Cottom gave his age as 21 years, and Miss Stevenson said she was 18 years old.

$1500 IN DIAMONDS, THREE CASES OF LIQUOR STOLEN

Lawyer Surprises Burglars at Work in His Home—They Escape in an Auto.

When Otto F. Karbe, an attorney, returned with his family last night at 8:45 p. m. to his home at 1720 Nicholson place, which he had darkened an hour earlier, upon his departure for an automobile ride, he found the house ablaze with light.

As he entered the front door, burglars who had been ransacking the rooms, ran out a rear door, entered an automobile they had left in the alley and escaped.

An incomplete inventory showed that they had obtained diamond rings valued at about $1500, two cases of whisky and one of gin kept in a closet and that they apparently were about to carry off a third case of whisky when interrupted.

Ten Years Younger Than His Years

Doesn't it make you feel good—cause you to straighten up and feel "chesty"—when someone guesses your age at ten years or so younger than you really are? You look into your mirror, smile with satisfaction and say to yourself: "Well, he didn't make such a bad guess, at that."

The point is: You're no older than your vitality.

If a man is strong, vigorous, mentally alert, fine and fit at 50 he has a better chance of living up to 80 than a man of 30 who is weak and run-down has of living up to 60. While none of us can stay the years nor stop time, we should all make an heroic effort to successfully resist the effects of time by ever keeping our vitality at par.

When you sense a feeling of slowing down of your physical forces—when your stomach, liver, kidneys and other organs show signs of weakness—when you notice a lack of your old time "pep" and "punch"—in other words, when you feel your vitality is on the wane, you should commence at once to restore your energy, strength and endurance by taking

LYKO

The Great General Tonic

This master body-builder will help you keep young in spirit and mental and physical action, because it will assist Nature in maintaining your vitality at par. It enriches the blood, restores worn-out tissues, soothes jangling and over-wrought nerves, induces sound refreshing sleep, sharpens the appetite, tones up the digestion—in short, will put new life, new vigor and new vim in every fibre of your body.

You will be surprised how much better you'll feel after taking a treatment of LYKO, if you are tired and worn out, nervously and physically exhausted. It's mildly laxative—keeps the bowels in fine condition. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

Natural Forest in Park Not to Go for Golf Course

Virgin Section in Southwest Corner of Forest Park, Laying Out of Which Had Been Started, to Be Retained.

Following complaint by several citizens that on recent visits to Forest Park they had observed evidence of ruthless desecration in the natural wooded section in the southwest corner of the park, a Post-Dispatch reporter investigated and found that the virgin soil had been trimmed from the clay subsurface in huge spots of a 20-acre area, and the wild undergrowth which formerly had surrounded giant oak and hickory trees had been removed, leaving the ground bald.

It was estimated by Martin Kumaus, a landscape gardener employed in the park, that at least 2000 wagon loads of wild rose bushes, wild plum, wild crab and scrub oak had been taken from the woods. He said the work had been done under the direction of Joseph Williamson of 5633 Wells avenue, former manager of the municipal golf links, and that Williams had marked about 600 large trees for destruction in the same section with the intention of laying out a municipal golf course in that corner of the park.

Williamson, when interviewed at the Sunset Hill Country Club, where he has been employed since Oct. 1 as golf course superintendent, admitted that he had ordered the removal of the soil and undergrowth, and had marked the trees for destruction.

Planned Change in Course.

"It may look somewhat dilapidated now," he said, "but all it needs is some grass seeding. I wanted to improve the golf course north of Art Hill and used the soil taken from the woods to make a new putting green. It was my intention also to change the 18-hole course so that eight holes would lie in the section from which I took the soil. I put the proposition up to Ernest Strehle, General Superintendent of Parks, and he told me to mark the trees that I desired removed. When he saw the number of trees I had marked he told me to dismiss the idea of changing the course.

"In my opinion there is too much traffic around the southeastern part of the present golf course, and I had planned to swing the course around so that it would border on Skinker road and Oakland avenue. I had no thought of destroying the natural beauty of the park, and was under the impression that the section I had selected was one that would not be missed. It lies in the center of a 120-acre forest tract and the entire area from which I had removed soil was less than one-sixth of the whole section. To me it seemed only a matter of a little landscape work. I believed that grass and new underbrush could be planted and that within a year the bare spots would be covered.

"I was in charge of the Forest Park golf links for 19 months and resigned Oct. 1 to take up a contract with the Sunset Hill Country Club, which meant more money for me. Strehle never objected to the removal of the soil and my leaving the city's employ had nothing to do with the dispute about changing the golf course."

Strehle denied giving his consent to the disturbance of the natural section of the park.

"I did not know the work was being done until a few days before Williamson resigned," said Strehle. "I did know that the soil proposition had been a problem in the development of the golf courses, but as I am not a golf expert, I gave that matter little attention. To tell the truth, I did not know where Williamson was getting his soil from until I observed the bald spots in the wooded section of the park and then I gave orders that no more soil was to be removed from there and directed the landscape staff to sew grass seed and transplant shrubbery from the municipal nurseries at Chain of Rocks at the earliest convenient time.

Bald Spots to Be Filled Up.

"The only time I ever discussed the golf links with Williamson was when he suggested that he be permitted to remove some trees so that he could change the 18-hole course. when he had tagged the tress and I saw that he wanted to cut down about 600 I told him the proposition could not be considered."

Fred W. Pape, Commissioner of Parks and Recreation, said that he observed the removal of soil a few days after Williamson had resigned and immediately issued orders that the work be stopped.

"At that I do not consider the damage done to be of a serious nature," he said. "The trees from around which soil had been cut do not depend for nourishment on their surface roots and the spaces about them will be filled up in time to prevent them from weakening. I do not approve of interference with what is left of the natural park."

MAIL CAR ROBBERS BURNED $5,000,000 IN SECURITIE

Postal Inspector Makes First Announcement of Amount Stolen at Council Bluffs.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 20.—Bonds and securities burned by the men who robbed Burlington train No. 8 in Council Bluffs last Saturday night, totaled more than $5,000,000, according to an announcement here today by Postal Inspector Glenn.

At the same time he announced that the solvency of two national insurance companies, which insured the bonds, probably would be seriously impaired as a result of the robbery and its resultant loss.

This is the first intimation since the robbery of the amount involved. This figure places the robbery as the reatest ever staged n the history of the American Postoffice Department.

W. Noel, Postoffice Inspector from t. Louis, said this afternoon that Merl Phillips, in one of his numerous onfessions, told of having seen among the loot taken in the robbery three drafts, one for $40,000, one for $25,000 and one for $15,000. He said they were burned with the other securities.

Formal charges were filed in Federal Court at Council Bluffs this afternoon against the five men and one woman in custody. They are: Merl Phillips, Orville Phillips and Fred E. Poffenberger, charged with breaking into and robbing a United States mail train of registered mail, Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Daly and Hugh Reed, charged with hiding stolen Government property and aiding in the secretion of the stolen securities. Preliminary hearing will probably be held in one week.

300 BIRTHS AND 184 DEATHS

There were 300 births and 184 deaths recorded in St. Louis last week. Twenty-one persons died of pneumonia, 22 of heart disease, 14 of Bright's disease, 15 of cancer, 12 of diphtheria and six of tuberculosis. There were seven accidents, three suicides, two deaths from unknown causes and one of criminal carelessness.

FUNERAL OF H. I. DRUMMOND

Former Head of Tobacco Company Buried in Alton.

The funeral of Harrison I. Drummond, former vice president of the American Tobacco Co., who died in New York Nov. 8, was held yesterday in Alton, where he formerly lived. He was 52 years old and was at one time head of the Drummond Tobacco Co. of St. Louis. His death was caused by injuries inflicted by a street car, by which he was struck on the evening of election day, Nov. 2.

POOR DEMAND CLOSES SIX SUGAR REFINERIES

Plants of American Company at New York Suspend Work Temporarily.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—All six refineries of the American Sugar Refining Co. have been closed as a result of slight demand for the commodity, it was announced here today. An official of the company, explaining the shutdown, said:

"We have ample stocks on hand and are prepared to make prompt delivery of all grades of refined sugar. Refineries have been closed temporarily due only to lack of demand from the trade."

Tin Plate Plant Employing 2500 Men, Closed.

By the Associated Press.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 20.—Indefinite suspension of work at the Yorkville (O.) tin plate plant of the Wheeling Steel and Iron Co. was announced by officials of the concern here yesterday. The suspension, effective immediately, will affect 2500 men.

Studebaker Corporation Discharges 2000 Employes.

By the Associated Press.

SOUTH BEND, Ind., Nov. 20.—Temporary cessation of buying is the reason given by the officials of the Studebaker Corporation for the curtailment of their working force by discharging 2000 men today.

Pennsylvania to Reduce Shop Force in Ohio.

By the Associated Press.

DENNISON, O., Nov. 20.—Three hundred men employed by the Pennsylvania Railroad Co. at its shops here, 10 per cent of the force, will be indefinitely laid off Nov. 25, it was announced today. Several yard crews were laid off today because of reduction in freight traffic.

STOCKHOLDERS GET NOTHING IN SALE OF D. & R. G. ROAD

Line Sold for $5,000,000 to Western Pacific to Satisfy Bank's $36,000,000 Judgment.

By the Associated Press.

DENVER, Colo., Nov. 20.—On the fiftieth anniversary of the organization of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad Co., all the property and holdings of the organization were sold today to three men representing the Western Pacific Railroad Corporation, for $5,000,000. The purchasers also assumed obligations of the Denver & Rio Grande amounting to $141,175,000.

The sale completely wipes out the stock of the Denver & Rio Grande, amounting to $87,775,670, according to John F. Bowie of New York, general counsel for the Western Pacific, and one of the three purchasers. The others associated with him were John B. Marsh and Ralph M. Arkush, both of New York.

The road was sold to satisfy a judgment of $36,000,000 obtained by the Equitable Trust Co. of New York as trustee for holders of bonds issued by the Western Pacific Railroad Co. and guaranteed by the Denver & Rio Grande. The sale is subject to confirmation by the United States District Court.

Following the sale Bowie announced that although the Western Pacific Railroad Corporation now owns the Western Pacific and the Denver & Rio Grande railroads, the lines would be operated separately.

NEW CORONER, DR. EDWARD RICHTER, GOES IN TOMORROW

Retiring Official, Rudolph S. Vitt, Thanks People and Organizations for Assistance.

Coroner Rudolph S. Vitt, who retired from public office yesterday to make way for Dr. Edward Richter, the successful candidate for that office at the recent election, issued a statement acknowledging the cooperation of all persons and organizations, particularly the local Safety Council, which has assisted in improving the industrial and public highway conditions in the interest of public safety. The Coroner-elect will take office tomorrow.

"During the four years prior to my becoming Coroner," said Dr. Vitt, "there was an annual average increase of 65 inquests per annum. If this same ratio of increase had continued during my term, I would have had 2048 more inquests, each representing a human life.

"This reduction in inquests is remarkable in view of the tremendous increase of public highway hazards due to motorized traffic and increased population. The number of inquests to date this year is 535 less than the same period four years ago. This is largely due to the splendid work of the Safety Council which has devoted so much time to educating the public and industries in the principles of safety and accident elimination."

In the four years of his term of office there were 521 homicides, 570 suicides and 1614 deaths from accidents.

Mrs. MacSwiney to Testify Dec. 3.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Mrs. Muriel MacSwiney, widow of the Lord Mayor of Cork, will testify Dec. 3 or 4 before the commission of the Committee of 100 investigating the Irish question, it was announced here today. Hearings have been suspended over Thanksgiving. Miss Mary MacSwiney, sister of the late Lord Mayor, also is expected to offer evidence. The British branch of the Women's International League has offered to send as witnesses a group of English women who recently investigated conditions in Ireland.

The Aeolian-Vocalion

The Phonograph that is supreme in tone reproduction

Splendor of tone-quality is the real test of musical expression. To a true artist in music technique, the mastery of his instrument, is merely a foundation. What makes him an artist is his ability to use tone-color to express a mood, paint a picture or tell a story. The Vocalion reproduces with fidelity all the beauty of tone that the artist has entrusted to the records that he has made. But that isn't all. By means of the Graduola the Vocalion enables you to control, to vary tone-color—to shade the music from pianissimo to full volume. You play along with the artist whose rendition is being reproduced. You place your interpretation on the picture that he paints, the mood that he expresses, the story that he tells.

Aeolian-Vocalion
With the Graduola

This Vocalion is full cabinet size and can be chosen in either mahogany or oak, beautifully finished. It is equipped with an improved automatic stop, the Vocalion Universal tone-arm, playing all makes of records, and that wonderful feature, the Graduola. A small cash payment delivers this Vocalion to you, and the balance can be paid for on terms as low as $6.50 a month.

Aeolian-Vocalion
Full-size Cabinet Model
$110

A genuine Vocalion with speed regulator, an improved type automatic stop, and the Vocalion Universal tone-arm, which makes possible the playing of all makes of records (without Graduola.) Choice of mahogany or oak cabinet. A small cash deposit brings this Vocalion to your home, and the balance can be taken care of on terms as low as $5.50 a month.

FOUR BOYS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS SEE POST-DISPATCH PLANT

Prize Will Be Awarded to One Who Best Describes Visit in a Composition.

The Rev. F. W. Grampp of the Methodist Church of Vinita Park, St. Louis County, yesterday afternoon took a class of four Sunday school boys through the Post-Dispatch plant, as a preparation for a prize contest in which a book will be awarded to the boys writing the best composition on the subject of the visit. Other Sunday school classes are to visit the Post-Dispatch in the future, as the competition is open to all classes.

The boys, members of the Gleaners' class, are Rogers Lance, Walter Boeckstiegel, Raymond Lewis and Lawrence Berner. In a similar contest held recently the Sunday school classes of the church visited the city jail.

COMMUNITY IDEA GIVEN TRIAL AT CLEVELAND HIGH

Suggestions Made in Post-Dispatch Last Sunday Followed and Results Are Declared Successful.

The idea of making community centers of the city high schools was given a tryout at the Cleveland High School Friday night, and patrons and teachers yesterday united in saying that the first experiment had been a decided success.

More than 2200 persons were present as spectators and participants in a varied and original program that included dancing, music, drills, dramatics and speaking. The entertainment was prepared and carried out, Principal Maddox said yesterday, precisely along the lines suggested in an article in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, in which interviews on the subject with a number of educators were given.

The affair should not be confused with conventional school entertainment, for it was distinguished by many features that belong to the social center, or community center plan. For example, while the "grown-ups" were in the auditorium listening to speeches, 250 of the young people were having a dance in the school gymnasium, the music being furnished by the 30-piece school orchestra.

Advertised by Circulars.

As suggested by school principals in last Sunday's Post-Dispatch, the show was staged by the Parent-Teachers' Association, which proposed to make the occasion a test of whether the community center idea could be successfully developed there. Accordingly, circulars were printed, describing the nature of the event, and these were distributed throughout the neighborhood and given to students to take home.

People began arriving as early as 7 p. m. By the time the school orchestra began its 30-minute concert at 7:30, the lower floor of the auditorium was filled, and at 8 o'clock, there was not a vacant seat in the auditorium, which seats 1950 persons.

The concert was followed by an exhibition of folk dancing, as taught in the school, by 30 girls in gymnasium costumes. Then the Cantanto Club, a girls' chorus of 25 voices, sang a few numbers. The next thing was a reed drill by a team of 36 girls from the Gardenville Grammar School. Dressed in white middies and blue bloomers, with red ties, and drilled to precision, the squad went through a series of pretty evolutions that drew loud approval.

The entertainment was going so well by that time that F. W. Koch, a member of the Parent-Teachers' Association, made a 10-minute talk, saying that the association had planned the affair to learn whether it was possible and desirable to make the school a community meeting place. The response strongly indicated that the audience approved the plan.

Mock Trial Scene.

Then followed what some considered the prize number of the evening. It consisted of a "Better Speech Play," prepared and given by students under the direction of Miss Marguerite Johnson, teacher of English at the high school.

It was a mock trial scene, in which "the four Verb brothers, Do, Be, Go and See," were charged with committing assault and battery, with intent to kill, upon "Mother Tongue." Four witnesses were brought forward by the prosecutor, "Mr. Nice Usage." They were "Miss Cultivated Person," "Mr. Business World," "Miss Class Criticism" and "Mr. Smoke M. Out."

"Miss Cultivated Person" testified that the four prisoners had a very bad reputation in the circles in which she moved. She had known them a long time, and avoided them whenever she could. She said that "Go" had a son by the name of "Went" who also frequently created a disturbance and annoyed her acquaintances.

"Business World" added his condemnation to the indictment. He said he had once employed the four brothers, but had discharged all at the end of the first week because they had cost him a number of valuable contracts by their misconduct. They were never to be trusted in letters, he said.

Other Witnesses Heard.

The bad behavior of the "brothers" in classroom was described by "Miss Class Criticism," who said they were continually tripping up the pupils, and said she had even seen an English teacher floored by one of them. "Smoke M. Out" added the last chapter of condemnation. He said there was no trusting the accused "Verbs" anywhere. They had cut capers around the Postoffice, in the newspapers, and on nearly every platform in the country, he said.

"Insincerity," who was the "Verbs'" lawyer, protested that the whole thing was a "frameup" against his clients, but the evidence was so overwhelming that the defendants decided to change their plea from not guilty to guilty. This confession failed to soften the heart of Judge "Good Form," who sentenced all four to be hanged.

At the conclusion of the play, members of the Senior class and their invited guests left the auditorium and repaired to the gymnasium, and the dance began. The older folks stayed in the auditorium, and heard an address by Major Thomas J. Dixon, an army chaplain, on "America and the Battle of Verdun."

Two Beautiful Bungalows

Two modern frame bungalows, four rooms and bath each, are now available.

These houses are ready for immediate occupancy and at a surprisingly low cost. The initial payment can be made to suit your convenience. And the terms on which these houses are offered give you the best proposition ever offered the public.

The cozy homes are located on Pennsylvania and Lohmeyer avenues, and are within two blocks of the Manchester car line.

Considering the location, the construction of the homes and the improvements in the neighborhood, the price is extremely reasonable.

These bungalows will be open for inspection all day Sunday. A representative will be on the ground to take you through these homes and to explain the terms which can be arranged.

Cosmetics Not Needed Peel the Skin Instead

One reason mercolized wax is so strongly recommended is that it really takes the place of several different cosmetics, saving time, patience and expense. It is better than any cleansing cream, better than any massage cream, and better than any rouge, for accomplishing the results for which such articles are used. As the wax actually absorbs an old, faded or discolored cuticle a little each day, the underlying skin which gradually appears is clearer, softer, healthier-hued and more youthful than any cosmetic-made complexion. Spreading on a thin coat of this wax at night, washing it off mornings, in a week or so produces a marvelous transformation. Just one ounce of mercolized wax, obtainable at any drug store, will do the work. There's nothing better to remove freckles, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, blotches, pimples or blackheads.

For wrinkles and loose, saggy skin, a face bath made by dissolving one ounce of pure powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel, is the best thing that can be recommended. This has remarkable astringent and tonic properties.

Hyde Chooses Secretary.

LAW ENFORCEMENT BUREAU SUPPLANTS MORALITY SQUADS

Capt. Stinger of Newstead Avenue Station to Have Free Hand in Conducting Police Innovation.

WILL ASSUME DUTY OF CITY "CLEANUP"

Work Will Be Independent of Districts and as Many Men Will Be Assigned as Are Needed.

Police Capt. William Stinger will be in command of a law enforcement bureau of the Police Department, which will take over the work of the existing morality and gambling squads, and which will have charge of the enforcement of the State bone-dry prohibition statute here.

The establishment of the new bureau was announced yesterday by Chief of Police O'Brien, in accordance with a plan suggested by him to the Police Board yesterday, and approved by the Board. This move follows the chief's order, issued yesterday, for an immediate and thorough "clean-up" of the city, with especial attention to so-called soft drink saloons, poolrooms and dance halls.

The work of the bureau will begin as soon as Stinger can organize it. He is to give up his present duties as district captain at the Newstead avenue station, and will direct his new city-wide work from an office on the second floor of that station. He will work independently of district captains, and will "clean up" any condition of law violation which he finds in any part of the city, after which he will notify the district captain, whose duty it will then be to see that the violations are not resumed.

Present Squads Abolished.

He will have as executive aids Detective Sergt. William Walton, now head of the automobile squad, and Detective Sergt. Charles Kelly, now head of the morality squad. The existing gambling squad and morality squad are abolished by the Chief's order. The new bureau will have as many men as are needed for enforcement work, together with clerical help and automobiles.

To fill the vacancies caused by the new arrangements Capt. John Hoffman is transferred from the Carr street district to the Newstead avenue district. Lieut. Joseph Gerk, night chief, is transferred to the command of the Carr street district and Lieut. Frank Nally of Central district is to serve as night chief. Lieut. Wade Mathews of Central district, now head of the gambling squad, is made Lieutenant of the Central district station.

After issuing the order Chief O'Brien said to a Post-Dispatch reporter:

"When I made a tour of Eastern cities with Chief of Detectives Hannegan last year I found that in nearly all of the cities the work of suppressing gambling and vice had been consolidated under one bureau.

"The department here has been working toward some such arrangement for some time. We feel the need of it now since the State prohibition law has been upheld by the voters. This law will soon go into effect and it will be up to the police department to see that prohibition is rigidly enforced.

"It is necessary for the department to be prepared for this emergency. I took the question up with the board at yesterday's meeting and recommended the formation of a composite bureau. The suggestion was quickly adopted.

"My office receives many written complaints as to gambling houses, poolrooms and other objectionable places. Until now it has been the custom to refer these to different bureaus. Under the new system they will all go direct to Capt. Stinger. He will have all the men he needs to investigate the places complained of. After he has cleaned up a place he will report to me and I will forward his report to the captain of the district. The captain will then be expected to see that the place remains closed or operates within the law. If a captain fails in this duty charges will be preferred against him."

Capt. Stinger is 52 years old, and lives at 1206 Oakley place. He has been in the Police Department 31 years, having been appointed probationary patrolman in 1889. He was promoted to the rank of sergeant in 1911, to liuentenant in 1918, and to captain last year.

He said yesterday that he would have preferred to remain in command of his district, but that he intended to do his full duty in his new place, and that he was pleased at the confidence shown in him by the Police Board, in his selection for the place.

Will Have a Free Rein.

"I don't owe anything to anybody in this town and nobody owes me anything," he said. "That vives me a free rein. I can go ahead and see that the clean-up is accomplished.

"This ob came to me unsolicited. I didn't know a thiny about the arranfement until shortly before noon today, when the Chief called me into his office at headquarters and told be I had been selected. I asked no questions. That's not my way of doing business. He told me what he wanted done, and I'm going to see that its done right."

Capt. Stinger added that he oelieved the Newstead avenue district, in which he has been captain for a little more than a year, was about "as clean as the police can make it."

Stinger, as asergeant, and later as a lieutenant, was head of the gambling squad, working from headquarters. He was also in charge of raids on immoral resorts. In some cases, he and his men wrought havoc with the furnishings in the establishments which they raided. In gambling raids, tables and other parts of the gambling outfit were chopped up. Stinger's activity and vigorous methods caused many complaints to be made to headquarters, but he was upheld by his superiors.

Suits were threatened against Stinger and the Board in several instances.

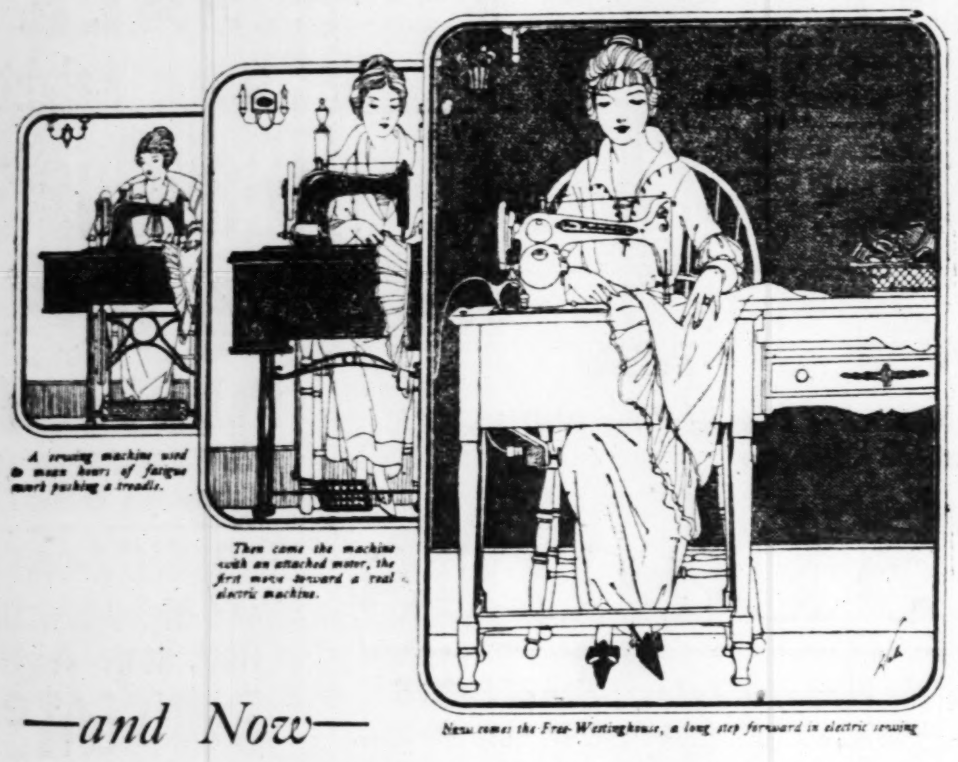
The Free-Westinghouse
ELECTRIC SEWING MACHINE



A sewing machine used to mean hours of fatigue work pushing a treadle.

Then came the machine with an attached motor, the first move toward a real electric machine.

Now comes the Free-Westinghouse, a long step forward in electric sewing

—and Now—
A New Kind of Electric Machine!

Not just another electric sewing machine, but an entirely new kind.

You don't need to attach a motor to the Free-Westinghouse. The motor is built into it and machine and motor are one.

You don't need to bother with a treadle or pedal controller, which must be taken out and put back every time you use it. A touch of your knee regulates the speed, and the knee-control is a permanent part of the machine and always in place.

Moreover, you do not need to put the Free-Westinghouse out of sight when you're through sewing. Just close it up and you have a good-looking writing desk or serving table in oak or walnut, as you prefer—a piece of fine furniture that will fit in anywhere.

The Free-Westinghouse isn't alone a better electrical machine—it's a far superior sewing machine—with many unique advantages.

A few minutes' demonstration of the Free-Westinghouse will convince you that these are real facts. Come in and see it.

LACLEDE ASKS FOR RATE OF $1.25 FOR HOUSEHOLD GAS

Company Advances Plea of Threatened Insolvency in Requesting Permission for Raise of 40 Per Cent.

PREVIOUS PETITION DESIRED $1 SCALE

Operating Expenses Now Declared Higher While Coke, Byproduct, Is Said to Have Fallen.

On a plea that present rates mean insolvency, the Laclede Gas Light Co. yesterday asked the Public Service Commission to authorize a charge of $1.25 per 1000 feet for gas to household consumers. The present price to household consumers is 85 cents, so that the increase asked is 40 cents, or 47 per cent.

The application is an amendment to one pending before the commission in which the Laclede Company asked that the rate to householders be $1.

Announces Its Earnings.

The company in its present application declares that in 1919 it earned only 1.06 per cent on its outstanding common stock of $10,700,000 par value. It declares that the Commission's failure to grant recent applications for increases promptly has not only denied 2000 stockholders a reasonable return on their investment, but is threatening the very solvency of the company.

It also recites that its gross operating expenses will be increased $3,086,491.05 in 1921 and that the rates asked would yield only 7.28 per cent return on a "low valuation."

The chief elements of gas plant operation are coal and oil. The company declares that its present contract for coking coal is $4.643 per ton, but that its contract for 1921 is at the rate of $9.538, which would account for $2,891,910 increase in operating expenses. Its present contract for gas oil is stated to be 6.26 cents per gallon, while the price contracted for 1921 is 10.8 cents, which would mean an increase of $822,567 in operating cost. It states that its revenue also has been decreased recently by a decline of $5 a ton in the market price of coke, which is a leading by-product.

These factors, the company declares, will increase its 1921 cost of production of gas from 47.91 cents per 1000 feet, to 71.86 cents per 1000 feet.

The company was charging 75, 55 and 45 cents for gas in 1918, the consumer paying one of the three rates on the basis of his total consumption. Householders always have paid the highest rate, being small consumers. In June, 1919, the company asked to be permitted to increase its rates to 90, 70 and 50 cents as an emergency measure. This was contested by the city on the ground that the company in its prosperous years should have conserved its resources for lean years instead of expending large earnings in dividends. The commission set the rate at that time as 85, 60 and 50 cents, to expire on July 31, 1919, when the rates would revert to the old lower schedule.

Valuation Is Mentioned.

At the expiration of that time the Laclede asked that, not only should the rates not revert to the old schedule, but that they be still further increased to $1, 75 and 65 cents. The city then stated to the commission that no valuation of the actual value of Laclede properties ever had been made, and that any attempt to fix rates without knowledge of exact valuation on which a return was permissible, was unfair to the public.

The commission then ordered the Laclede Co. to value its property, the company recently reporting that the cost of reproduction of the plant would be $69,490,010.11, and that the original cost was $42,354,195.94. The city complained that these figures were figures taken from the company's books, an improper valuation method and the commission has withheld granting of further advances pending investigation of the valuation by its engineers.

SEAT IN CONGRESS FROM 11TH DISTRICT COST HAWES $592

Dunn and Hampe, for City Offices, Spent $1176 and $1321, Respectively, as Shown by Reports.

Harry M. Hawes, Democrat, spent $592 to be elected Congressman from the Eleventh District, according to his statement filed with the Recorder of Deeds yesterday. Of this amount $500 was donated to the District Congressional Committee and $25 to the Cox-Roosevelt-Long-Atkinson Club. The remainder was expended for advertising and "tickets to Democratic dances and parties."

John W. Dunn, Republican, who was elected City Treasurer, spent $1176, of which $500 was given to the City Committee and $250 to other organizations. The remainder was used for advertising.

Otto A. Hampe, successful Republican candidate for Public Administrator spent $1321.25, of which $500 was donated to the City Committee.

Dr. Louis R. Padberg, defeated Democratic candidate for Coroner, reported that his expenses were $505, of which $250 was given to the City Committee.

APOLLO CLUB WILL BEGIN 27TH SEASON TUESDAY

John Hand, American Tenor, Will Make St. Louis Debut at the Odeon.

The Apollo Club will open its twenty-seventh season with a concert Tuesday night at the Odeon, presenting John Hand, an American tenor, new to the local stage, who made his debut in New York during 1918, with the Society of American Singers.

He is to sing the "Cielo e mar" aria from "La Gioconda," and two groups of songs, as follows: "Baciami," Tosti; "Sotto il ciel," Sibelia; "Recompense," Hammond; "Hymn to Creation," Beethoven, and "The Crying of Water" and "Hymn to the Night," by Campbell-Tipton.

The male chorus, directed by Charles Galloway, will sing "The Pilot," by Fique; "Spanish Song," Neubner; "Margarita," Chadwick; "Twilight," Dudley Buck, and "Up and On," by MacFarlane, with an incidental solo by E. F. Dunker.

OFFICERS FOR NEW PEACE TIME ARMY BECOMES PROBLEM

Gen. March, However, Looks for Little Difficulty in Obtaining 280,000 Privates to Fill Ranks.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—Little difficulty in obtaining the 280,000 men necessary to make up the peace-time army authorized by Congress is anticipated, Major-General March, chief of staff, said in his annual report made public today by the War Department. The problem of obtaining the 17,717 officers needed for the reorganized army is difficult, however, and was rendered more so, Gen. March said, by the delay in the enactment of legislation governing the reorganization of the army.

"The magnitude of the problem of selecting the additional officers required to complete the permanent complement," said Gen. March, "and the tremendous effect which will inevitably be exercised upon the future efficiency of the entire army by the character and qualifications of the new officers to be selected is indicated by the fact that the actual strength of the entire army in commissioned officers on April 6, 1917, was but 5959, of whom about 650 held provisional appointments."

Further Complications.

The General added that the problem was further complicated by the resignation of 1647 regular officers in the fiscal year ending last June 30, the period covered by his report.

Approximately 15,000 applications from former officers and reserve officers for transfer to the regular establishment were received by the War Department before the lists were closed, the General continued, and the task of selecting from these applicants, the 10,000 additional officers needed to fill out the army quota is still under way.

Reviewing the work of American military forces abroad, Gen March dsclosed that the cost of maintaining the American army of occupation on the Rhine up to last June 30 had been $257,000,000 which Germany is obligated to pay under the terms of the armistice. Of the total due, the General said, slightly more than $24,000,000 had been paid or liquidated, leaving approximately $222,000 due the United States from Germany.

The American occupation in Germany, the General added, has been "clean, dignified, just and forceful, free from tyranny and characterized by a minimum of friction with the inhabitants."

Success Due to Americans.

"Its success has been largely due to the high character and common sense of the American officer and soldier," the General continued. "They have lived up to their instructions to make the government firm, just, dignified, in accordance with the laws of war and the best traditions of the American army. The American people may well be proud of their conduct and their accomplishments."

Taking up the disposition of war material and the liquidation of contracts, the report stated that after the signing of the armistice the department was confroned with the gigantic task of settling 26,000 separate businesses aggregating a total of approximately $4,000,000,000.

"The work," Gen. March said, "is rapidly being brought to a conclusion, with a celerity, an equity and an economy that makes it one of the outstanding accomplishments of the war, 25,115 contracts involving obligations to the amount of more than $3,100,000,000 having been settled up to June 30, 1920, involving payment of $412,400,000, or 13 per cent of the original obligations."

The report concluded:

"In all of these activities with which the regular army has been chiefly charged, both officer and enlisted man have displayed that high sense of loyalty, pride, justice, firmness, dignity and responsibility that has always won them the respect, admiration and friendship of every nationality with which they have been associated."

BOARD MEMBER PROPOSES CHANGE IN HIGH SCHOOL HOURS

Stephen H. Wagner Would Have Classes From 9:15 A. M. to 3:15 P. M. to Lessen Car Traffic.

A movement to change the school hours of the six St. Louis high schools so that pupils will assemble for classes a half hour later than required under the present schedule, as an aid to relieving congestion on the street cars west of Grand avenue during the morning rush hours, has been launched by Stephen M. Wagner, member of the Board of Education, and is receiving considerable support from heads of downtown business and mercantile establishments.

Studies in the high schools now begin at 8:45 a. m. and classes are dismissed at 2:45 p. m. The change proposed by Wagner will be for a schedule of classes from 9:15 a. m. to 3:15 p. m. There are approximately 12,000 pupils attending the six schools, and it is estimated that a third of these use street cars in reaching the schools.

Wagner's proposed plan will be considered by the Committee on Instruction of the board at its next meeting, and the committee's recommendation probably will be acted on by the board at the next regular meeting, Dec. 14.

During the year 1919 the Post-Dispatch printed 36,671 Houses, Flats, etc., For Rent ads—12,385 more than the FOUR other St. Louis Newspapers combined.

840 WORKMEN LAID OFF BY TWO EAST ST. LOUIS PLANTS

One Concern Also Goes on Three-Day Week Schedule, the Other Increased Day From 8 to 10 Hours.

Two East St. Louis plants yesterday announced reductions in their working forces, which entails the laying off of 840 men. The Missouri Malleable Casting Co., Seventeenth and Brady avenue, announced that it had reduced the number of its employes from 1100 to 300 men, and is giving the latter only three days' work a week.

L. C. Murdock, vice president of the Hammar Bros. White Lead Co., St. Clair avenue and the Louisville & Nashville tracks, announced yesterday that the company had put into effect a "retrenchment" plan, whereby 40 of the 160 men employed there have been laid off, and the working day of the remainder extended from eight to 10 hours. The work formerly done by four men now will be done by three, he said.

TO CAMPAIGN FOR $500,000

Campaign headquarters have been opened by the Southern Presbyterian Church at 209 Commonwealth Trust Building for the direction of a State campaign for $500,000 for the benefit of the church educational institutions. The institutions which will participate are Westminster College and Synodical College, both at Fulton, Mo., the School of the Ozarks, Hollister, Mo., and the Theological Seminary of Louisville, Ky.

John M. Atkinson of St. Louis is campaign chairman; Rev. E. F. Abbott, D. D., Fulton, Mo., is chairman of the Executive Committee; J. G. McConkey of the Federal Reserve Bank, St. Louis, chairman of the Administrative Committee, and Tyre C. Harris, Fulton, Mo., treasurer. Edward H. Foot of New York is campaign director.

Wouldn't That Yale-Harvard Attendance Make a Fight Promoter Turn Long Green With Envy?

HARVARD'S STRONG OFFENSE DEFEATS YALE ELEVEN, 9-0

Three Goals From Field Give Crimson Victory in Annual Grid Contest.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW HAVEN, CONN., Nov. 20.—Harvard had an offense which carried through to a finality; Yale had none worthy of the name. And this, in few words tells the story of Harvard beating Yale by a score of 9 to 0 in their yearly gridiron clash before a Bowl full of cheerful thousands in this city of Elms today.

Three goals from the field by the drop-kick method, two by Charley Buell, who was intrusted with the delicate ask of directing the Crimson forces, and one by Capt. Arnold Horween accounted for the nine points, and each came as the final punch to a well-directed scheme of attack which aimed for just that purpose if the running game failed. The running and forward passing game did fail twice inside Yale's 10-yard line, even at the five-yard mark because it was not quite strong enough to break down a remarkably strong line defense by the Blue. But Harvard was equipped with the necessary weapons to score by one means if not another, and this, after all, is the mark of a finished team.

Yale Weak on Offensive.

Yale was pitifully weak in offensive tactics against the defense they were called upon to face, and while "Mac" Aldrich tried two long shots at goal from near the center of the field, both were of the despairing kind, and both fell far short of the mark.

Otherwise, Yale never even threatened the Crimson goal line, never got near enough to strike with definite purpose. While the game for three periods and well into the fourth was of a kind to keep Harvard men on the anxious seat against a possible fumble or the breaking loose of Kempton or some other Yale man for a long run, the fact remains that the Blue never really threatened.

Harvard boasted a team of equal power and greater finish, and the ultimate result measured accurately the difference between the two. No amount of fight and spirit of which the Yale eleven had full measure could offset the stronger equipment and quite as much fight and determination.

Gaston and Kempton Are Banished for Indulging in Fistic Personalities

In truth, there was a little too much fight of the prize ring kind on both sides, even though it was limited to one unfortunate case. Gaston of Harvard and Kempton of Yale were banished from the field for indulging in fistic personalities. This marred an otherwise clean, if rather rough, and hard-fought game. Gaston was the aggressor and deserved the punishment more than Kempton. There is such a thing as patience ceasing to become a virtue. Harvard men had been worrying the Yale quarterback all the afternoon by charging through to "clean up" the secondary defense, and finally toward the end of the third period Gaston, who had just been substituted for Kane, put on the final touch with so much roughness that Kempton lost his head and responded in kind.

Tom Thorpe, the umpire, in a fearless way, imposed the quite necessary punishment, but it seemed a pity that Kempton, who had done so much to keep Yale in the running, and whose long football career has been so free from incidents of this kind, should be ordered off the field in his last game.

Buell Kicks Field Goal.

This incident out of the way, it should be told that Harvard scored its first goal from the field toward the end of the first period, when Buell sent the ball spinning over the bar from the 32-yard line, following a punting duel which gradually worked the ball into Yale territory.

The second score came at the very end of the third period. A steady advance of 46 yards carried the ball to Yale's 5-yard line and when the Blue stopped three mad rushes for a net loss of 2 yards Buell tried a drop kick from the 17-yard line and failed by inches from a difficult angle. This gave Yale a chance to punt out of danger, but Harvard struck right back and finally got near enough for Arnold Horween to drive home a pretty kick from the 38-yard line.

The final score came about the middle of the fourth period. Another steady advance by the Crimson carried the ball deep into Yale territory, but when the running game failed against the rock-ribbed defense, Charley Buell dropped back to the 18-yard line and once again sent the ball true to the mark. That over, Harvard men felt reasonably safe for the first time and, while Yale, in sheer desperation, opened up a rather haphazard forward pass attack, completing four in 13 tries, this "last resort" measure failed, as other means had failed, and so the Blue went down to defeat for the second year in succession.

Old Eli Gained Only 48 Yards on 27 Rushing Plays During Entire Battle

And now to confirm by figures, which they say never lie, the opening assertion that Harvard had an offense and Yale had none. Here they are:

Yale in 27 rushing plays gained a scant 48 yards, an average of less than 2 yards per rush. Harvard, on the other hand, in 67 running plays gained 191 yards and made seven first downs to only three for the Blue.

To add substance to this comparison, odious as it may be for the losing team, Harvard completed eight of [illegible] forward passes for a total gain of [illegible] yards, while Yale completed only four of 18, and these when all else had failed, for a gain of only 49 yards.

Harvard mixed up the forward passing game with the running attack for consistent advances. Yale used the overhead play only as a last resort. Furthermore, the Harvard forward pass formations were much better covered and the plays much better directed. It worked in as a distinct part of the attack, and for that reason accomplished a more direct purpose.

Yale End Play Improves.

In all other respects there was little or nothing to choose. The Yale team improved over the Princeton game in several important details. The end play was much better, tackling, so loose against the Tigers, was reasonably sure and deadly, the plays was well up to the average, if not above it.

Harvard's defense also was sturdy and dependable, so much so, that it made Yale's offense look more impotent than it really was. The forwards charged through so fast that practically every Yale play was hurried or so quickly stripped of the interference that the runners had little or no chance. In truth, Harvard's general scheme of defense was as nearly perfect as a defense could be.

Tom Dickens, who started the game at tackle in place of Into, added remarkable strength to the Yale team. He was a power in himself and must be ranked second only to Stan Keck, of Princeton, among the best tackles seen in the East this year. He was a bulwark against close formation plays; was down the field with his ends under punts; truth, he was all over the gridiron, tackling with deadly sureness.

Callahan Inspiring Leader.

Capt. Callahan was only a shade behind him in defensive work. He fought with head up every minute of the time and once again it seems a pity that such an inspiring leader and brilliant player should lose to Princeton and to Harvard two years in succession—his four big games.

Tom Woods again stood out on the forward line for Harvard, but not quite to the same extent as he did against the Tigers. It was hard, in fact, to pick out any man on the Crimson eleven for extra credit, as each one played his part so exactly and so well along the lines mapped out that chief credit must go to all as a team, even while each deserved much, individually.

Charley Buell, of course, was the outstanding star for Harvard, not only because of his two field goals which he executed with such neatness and dispatch, but because of his sound tactics and the dashing way in which he kept his men at work. He was a field general this afternoon who takes rank with some of the best Harvard has ever had.

Kempton Life of Yale Team.

Owen, too, deserves particular mention. He was a better ground gainer than Horween, while his punting on the whole was well up to the average. He did not get unusual distance, but he did get height and placed the ball fairly well.

Kempton was the life of the Yale team, while in the game. He made two or three sensational runs and once almost got loose for a touchdown. Aldrich was disappointing on running plays, but more than did his part in punting, and on the secondary line of defense. In fact, his defensive play saved Yale time and again and assuredly prevented Harvard from running up a bigger score.

Final Whistle Blew as Workman Started Pass That Won Game

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 20.

THE Ohio State-Illinois game resulted in application of two rules which are little known to most followers of football. One is that when time is called after play has been started, the offensive team must be allowed to complete it. In the final play of the game the whistle blew just as "Hoge" Workman drew back his arm to make the forward pass which scored the Ohio touchdown and won the game. While the allotted fifteen minutes of the quarter ended with the whistle Ohio was permitted to complete the play, kick the goal, and consequently win the game in what actually was an extra period of play.

At another point in the game, Illinois rushed the ball to Ohio's one-yard line. On the fourth down Crangle crashed into the line a little high. He was held motionless a moment, still standing up, and then, as the players separated after the whistle, he fell over the goal line for what appeared to the spectators to be a touchdown. The rules provide however, that when the ball ceases to be in motion it is "down" and Ohio was given the ball on downs on its own one-yard line.

Notre Dame Wins From N. W. U. and Remains Unbeaten

Gipp, Sensational Halfback, Aids in 33-7 Conquest Over Big 10 Team.

EVANSTON, Ill., Nov. 20.—After Northwestern University's football team had held the Notre Dame eleven scoreless for the first quarter, the visitors threw in first-string men and later added Gipp, sensational halfback, to the lineup, whipping the Western conference aggregation 33 to 7. It was the third victory this season for Notre Dame over a conference team, Purdue and Indiana being the other victims.

Northwestern started the battle with a perplexing array of forward passes, in addition to trying two field goals, which were failures. Notre Dame was somewhat dazed by the speedy introduction, but toward the end of the first quarter, the machine that succeeded in beating the Army began to hold and show improvement. After the regulars were sent in two Notre Dame men went across for touchdowns in the second period, making another in the third and two in the fourth.

Gipp was then sent into replace Mohardt near the end of the third period. In the last quarter Gipp adopted the aerial style of playing to counteract the forward passing of Northwestern, and succeeded in getting across two more touchdowns, although the goals were failures.

More than 18,000 people witnessed the contest.

Score by periods—

Notre Dame	0	14	7	12—33
Northwestern	0	0	7	0—7

JACK JOHNSON WILL BOX TWO FIVE-ROUND BOUTS ON TURKEY DAY

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., Nov. 20.—Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion, who is serving a sentence in the Federal Prison here for violation of the Mann act, will go into the ring again at the penitentiary here Thanksgiving day in two 5-round bouts, Warden A. V. Anderson announced today.

The first bout will be with "Topeka Jack" Johnson, negro, and former trainer of Johnson. The second opponent of the former champion will be Frank Owen of Chicago, also a former sparring partner of Johnson, it was announced. Three preliminary fights have been arranged.

The fight is scheduled to begin at 1 p. m. Thanksgiving day and will be witnessed by the convicts and only a few selected officials and newspaper men, the warden announced.

DE ORO DEFEATS LEAN IN ANGLE TOURNAMENT

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Alfred de Oro, New Yorker, went into a tie for first place with John Daly, New York, in the preliminaries for the national three-cushion billiard championship today when he defeated Jess Lean, Denver, 50 to 26 in 58 innings. De Oro had a high run of 7.

In the first afternoon game Charles Morin, Chicago, defeated Charles McCourt, Cleveland, 50 to 37 in 67 innings. Both had high runs of 4.

De Oro is credited with the best game of the tournament at present, played in 43 innings. Kieckhefer and Layton are tied with the high run score of 8.

Ragtime Tourney Started.

A two-man ragtime bowling tournament with two turkeys as the prizes was started yesterday on Peterson's alleys. The event is open to any two tenpinners and is three games total pins to count. The event will run until Wednesday night.

Bezdek Switches Team.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Nov. 20.—Announcement was made here today that Harold Hess, captain of the Pennsylvania State College football squad, will be on the line against the University of Pittsburg here on Thanksgiving day. Hess played fullback in previous games.

Cornell Runners Win.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 20.—Cornell won the intercollegiate cross country run here today with 55 points. Princeton was second with 56 points and Massachusetts Tech was third with 90 points. Romig of Penn State was the individual winner. His time for the 6-mile course was 32m. 1s.

Davey's 37-Yard Goal From Field Wins for Badgers

Chicago Surprises by Putting Up Sensational Fight Against Richards' Team.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Allan Davey sent a drop kick spinning through the uprights in the final quarter today and gave Wisconsin three points to none for Chicago in a game in which Chicago gained honors for its valiant fighting, although forced to surrender the victory to the Badgers.

Every maroon play was characterized by daring and determination which brought cheers from the 30,000 spectators in appreciation of the efforts of Coach Stagg's men to close their unsuccessful season with a comeback which would have been unparalleled in recent Western conference annals.

The latest superiority of Wisconsin began to show in the second half, however. Forward passes which Chicago previously had broken up easily began to nestle safely in the arms of Crimson sweatered athletes and the slashing off tackle dashes of the Badger halfbacks brought additional yardage.

Williams Makes Big Gains.

About the middle of the final period Wisconsin recovered the ball on its own 45-yard line. Williams, whose leaping runs had brought many gains to Coach Richard's team, dodged and twisted around end for 30 yards, and after forward passes had failed, Davey dropped back to the 37-yard line for a kick. McGuire, the Chicago tackle, leaped high to block, Davey's toe met the ball and sent it end over and squarely between the uprights for the only points of the game. It was the second victory he had brought Wisconsin this season, his kick beating Minnesota 3 to 0 a few weeks ago.

The Maroons uncovered a group of ancient tricks which brought Coach Stagg a reputation for foxiness a decade ago, working onside kicks and several end around criss-crossed.

The victory placed Wisconsin in second place in the conference race, which ended with today's games, with a record of four victories and one defeat.

The lineup:

Wisconsin.	Position.	Chicago.
Tebell	Right end	Clarke
Stark	Right tackle	McGuire
Margolos	Right guard	Pheney
Bunge	Center	Rober
Brader	Left guard	Hartong
Weston	Left end	Strohmeier
Barr	Quarterback	Tatge
Williams	Right halfback	Rouse
Sundt	Fullback	Timm

Score by periods:	1	2	3	4
Wisconsin	0	0	0	3—3

Wisconsin scoring: Field goal—Davey. Officials—Referee, Haines of Yale; umpire, Hoagland of Princeton; field judge, Knight of Shurtleff; head linesman, Young of Illinois Wesleyan.

Risley's Field Goal Wins for Indiana.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Nov. 20.—Indiana defeated Purdue, 10 to 7, this afternoon in a hard fought contest. A goal from placement by Risley in the fourth period gave the Crimson eleven its victory, both teams having previously scored a touchdown.

Score:

Purdue	0	7	0	0—7
Indiana	0	7	0	3—10

MILWAUKEE DEFEATS ST. LOUIS COUNTRY DAY ELEVEN, 14 TO 7

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 20.—Milwaukee Country Day School's football eleven defeated the St. Louis Country Day School team, 14—7, in the second annual gridiron clash between the two institutions. St. Louis played its best game of the year, but Milwaukee's greater weight turned the tide.

The St. Louis line played brilliantly and the Mound City machine had all the better of the argument in the first half. In the first period Childress scored the St. Louis touchdown and Morey kicked goal.

In the second half the advantage shifted to Milwaukee's side and long end runs enabled the home team to tie the score and take the lead in the third and fourth periods.

St. Louis tried hard to even the count, playing a wide-open game and attempting pass after pass. Childress and Labaume starred for the St. Louisians.

CHAMINADE TRIUMPHS OVER ST. CHARLES, 54-0

Chaminade's football machine traveled in high gear yesterday afternoon and trounced the St. Charles team, 54 to 0, at the Chaminade campus. J. Wentker, Zittel, Kane, Jacobi, Gass, Welz and Crewe scored touchdowns, Zittel having two to his credit. Carl Wentker kicked six of the eight goals after touchdowns.

Four forward passes, Kane to Welz, netting 25 yards each, featured the Chaminade attack. Jacobi did some good tackling, his admirers counting 14, which they declared were perfect. Gass, the other tackle, was credited with eight. Kane and Zittell made brilliant runs around the ends.

CALIFORNIA RUNS OVER STANFORD ELEVEN, 38-0

BERKELEY, Cal., Nov. 20.—University of California's undefeated football juggernaut rambled over the Leland Stanford Jr. University team today to a 38-to-0 victory and the championship of the Pacific Coast conference. California, as a result, probably will be the selection of the tournament of Roses Association to meet an Eastern team at Pasadena New Year's day.

Oklahoma Eleven Held to 7-7 Tie By Kansas Aggies

Farmers Score First and Then Concentrate on Blocking Sooners' Attack.

OKLAHOMA CITY, Ok., Nov. 20.—Ben G. Owen's 1920 Sooners have lost their all-victorious opportunity. They lost it this afternoon when the fast Kansas State Agricultural eleven invaded Soonerland and held their heavy opponents to a 7 to 7 tie.

The Oklahomans played good football at times, but could not put forth the necessary punch when a yard or two more would have meant a touchdown and six additional points for the Owenites.

A strong south wind made punting dangerous and White, giant Oklahoma City lad, averaged only 18 yards on his boots that in other games this year have averaged around the 45-yard mark.

The Kansas Aggies scored first just before the end of the first quarter. White punted 22 yards to Hinds who signaled for a fair catch. It was the Aggies' ball on their 48-yard line. A pass from Cowell to Sebring netted 14 yards and first down. Goerke made eight yards through the line and then plunged through for one more. Hinds went around right end for five yards and first down. Axline failed to gain, but W. Cowgell passed to Randell for 10 yards and first down. Goerke went through for five yards, then for two and first down with the goal to go. Swatek was off-side and Oklahoma was penalized half the distance to the goal line.

Pass Nets Touchdown.

First down again for the Aggies, but they were penalized five yards for offside. Then Hinds passed to W. Cowell for six yards and the second touchdown the Kansas Aggies have made this year against a Missouri Valley team. Huston kicked goal.

The Aggies were satisfied they had scored another touchdown and against the leaders of the Valley Conference. From then on they were more careful of the defensive. The second quarter started with the ball on Oklahoma's seven-yard line. Hill went around left end for six yards. Marsh had been sent in to relieve Capt. Luster and Pott Johnston had been appointed acting field captain.

Swatek went through the line for two yards and first downs, placing the ball on Oklahoma's 47-yard line. Then Phil White heaved a 38-yard pass to Tarzan Marsh, who advanced the ball 12 yards further before being downed, placing the ball on the K. S. A. C. 10-yard line. Hill plunged for three yards and Marsh went around right end for four more. White bucked center for one and the ball was on the K. S. A. C. one-yard line.

Swatek Scores for Sooners.

Swatek was called upon to cross the line, and followed Paul Johnston through left tackle. Davis kicked goal.

Here the scoring ceased. But it looked as though the heavy Owen machine had really started its usual traveling—with the opponents making the first touchdown. But, although the Owenites were able to push the ball down to the K. S. A. C. 11-yard line, the Sooners could not advance it any further and the Aggies were given the ball.

The Sooners' third opportunity to tally came in the middle of the third period, when the Oklahomans worked the ball down to the Aggies' two-yard line and were held for downs. Huston kicked out of danger for the Northerns. The Kansans were able to advance the ball during this period into Oklahoma territory only once. During the final quarter both teams fought fiercely, the Sooners taking the long chance and the Aggies playing a conservative defensive game, keeping the ball between the two 30-yard lines practically all of the time. The game ended with the ball in Oklahoma's possession on her own 25-yard line.

The lineup:

Oklahoma.	Positions.	K. S. A. C.
Luster	Center	Leasbring
Johnston	Left tackle	Stauffer
McKinley	Left guard	Hahn
Hamm	Center	Clelland
Edmondson	Right guard	Huston

Steketee's Field Goal Wins for Michigan, 3-0

Defeat Was Sixth Successive One of Season for Minnesota Eleven.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Nov. 20.—Minnesota rounded out the most disastrous football season in her history today, when Michigan snatched a 3 to 0 victory, marking the Gophers' sixth successive big ten conference defeat this year.

Tonight, the "little brown jug," emblematic of gridiron supremacy, is on its way back to Michigan. The jug, which became a trophy back in 1903, was recaptured by Minnesota last year after it had been in Michigan's possession 10 years.

Left halfback Steketee turned the tide for Michigan, by booting a place kick between the uprights from the 28-yard line in the second quarter.

Michigan came within striking distance after an exchange of punts. Capt. Arntson of Minnesota, circled Michigan's right end, fumbled on being tackled and the Wolverines recovered the ball on the Gophers' 15-yard line.

Michigan lost on two end plays, but put the ball directly in position for the kick from placement.

It was home-coming day for Minnesota, and many veterans of the famous 1903 Gopher eleven were in the stands, more than 20,000 persons viewing the game.

For Minnesota, Oss figured prominently, with Eckberg, Brown, Nolta and Gruy also showing good form.

Michigan presented a well balanced machine that appeared to outweigh the Gophers. Steketee, Usher and Nelson were stars for the Wolverines.

FORWARD PASSES BEAT DETROIT ELEVEN, 7 TO 3

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 20.—Springfield Y. M. C. A. College defeated the University of Detroit today in a spectacular contest, 7 to 3. Detroit scored on a field goal by Right Halfback Lauer in the first period. Two forward passes in succession, one for 28 yards and the other for 40 yards, in the second period, gave Springfield its touchdown. Right Halfback Cammack kicked goal. Springfield's forward passing game was bewildering to the Westerners.

AMES PUTS UP PLUCKY FIGHT, BUT LOSES, 14-10

AMES, Ia., Nov. 20.—The University of Iowa's eleven proved its superior strength here today by defeating Iowa State College, 14 to 10. The contest was not so one-sided as all predictions had indicated. Iowa's game, although fast and strong, was marred by constant fumbling. Ames put up a plucky fight, and played a good part of the game in Iowa's territory. Iowa made its touchdowns in the second and third quarters; Ames made a field goal in the second quarter, and a touchdown in the final period.

NEBRASKA EASY WINNER OVER MICHIGAN AGGIES

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 20.—Sensational runs during the first half helped Nebraska defeat the Michigan Aggies, 35 to 7, here today. Vern Moore, Nebraska halfback, made three end runs in the first period for 25 yards each. In the second period Fullback Dale broke away and ran 58 yards for a touchdown. Both teams resorted to forward passes in the last half, Michigan outplaying Nebraska in aerial football. Nebraska's interference was the best of the year. Michigan's scoring was made in the last period by straight football.

PRINCIPIA TROUNCES KIRKWOOD TEAM, 41-0

Principia's football machine romped over the Kirkwood eleven, 41 to 0, at Kirkwood, yesterday afternoon. Carson and Brownell each made two touchdowns, with Reihman and Wernintine scoring one each. Crouch kicked five goals after touchdown. Carson took a forward pass and ran 55 yards for one touchdown and Reihman ran 20 yards after picking up a fumble. The County champions, Webster, defeated Kirkwood, 7 to 0.

Nebraska Runners Win.

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 20.—The Nebraska cross country team of five men won today from the Kansas University five. Best time for the five miles was 22m. 46 1-5s.

Centre College Easily Defeats V. P. I., 28 to 0

"Bo" McMillin Is Star for "Praying Colonels" in Tilt With Virginians.

LOUISVILLE, KY., Nov. 20.—Centre College's "Praying Colonels" outclassed and defeated the Virginia Polytechnic Institute eleven here this afternoon by the score of 28 to 0 in a game featured by the generalship of Captain "Bo" McMillin, who, despite an attack of malaria, arose from a sick bed to oppose the Virginia team.

The first period, which resulted in no scoring, was a nip and tuck affair with McMillin studying the play of the Virginians and planning his attack for the next period. In the second quarter, Centre scored two touchdowns, after ripping holes in their opponent's line and dazzling them with forward passes.

McMillin was the brightest star of the game on several occasions. He essayed an end run, but when his defense crumbled and left him at the mercy of an onrushing Virginia tackler, he coolly tossed the ball to one of his forwards, completing a delayed pass and turning loss into big gains.

Virginia showed much strength when her goal posts were threatened, stopping repeated line bucks, but the superior play of the Kentuckians told on them and the inevitable happened.

Centre scored her other two touchdowns in the third period, with McMillin gaining much of the ground with forward passes. Weaver, Centre's all-American center, kicked four goals, bringing his total to 86 consecutive boots after touchdowns.

Lineup:

Centre.	Positions.	V. P. I.
Robb	Right end	Carpenter
Montgomery	Right tackle	Crisp
Roberts	Right guard	Sheretz
Weaver	Center	Hardwick
Ford	Left guard	Resh
McMillin	Quarterback	Lybrook
Armstrong	Right halfback	Wallace
Tanner	Fullback	Martin

WEBSTER CHALLENGES HIGH SCHOOL CHAMPIONS

Webster Groves High School's football eleven, unbeaten in local scholastic ranks, has issued a challenge to the Interscholastic League champions for a post-season contest, to be played Dec. 4 for the city and county high school football title.

Coach Roberts' machine trounced Kirkwood, 7 to 0; University City, 7 to 0; Clayton, 21 to 0; St. Charles, 12 to 0, and held Yeatman to a 13—13 tie, spectators agreeing that the county eleven had the better of the argument. The Washington U. freshmen and the Western Military Academy scored 14—0 victories over Webster.

PENNSYLVANIA CRUSHES COLUMBIA ELEVEN, 27-7

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Pennsylvania crushed Columbia, 27 to 7, here today in the first game between the institutions in 15 years, before a crowd of more than 30,000, at the Polo Grounds. Pennsylvania surged over the Blue and White defense, played brilliantly and scored their four touchdowns in the last three quarters.

The winners carried the fight to Columbia at all times save for a brief span in the third period, when the New York eleven flashed an open attack that carried the ball across the line.

Score by periods:

Pennsylvania	0	14	6	7—27
Columbia	0	0	7	0—7

Ames Wins Cross Country.

URBANA, Ill., Nov. 20.—Ames today won the annual conference cross country from a field of entrants of 14 universities. Ames, which won the run last year, had five entrants and finished with a total of 22 points. Illinois placed second, Ohio third, Purdue fourth and Wisconsin fifth.

Taylor Defeats Cutler.

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—Jack Taylor defeated Marty Cutler in a one-fall match here last night, securing the first fall in 45 minutes. The pair wrestled until midnight without another fall, when under the terms of the match the contest was ended.

Dope Figures 2 Ways on Pikers and Billikens

Missouri Games Indicate Washington Superiority; Rolla Scores Favor St. Louis U.

Football authorities always have discouraged bringing comparative scores into usage for picking gridiron winners. Time and again the "dope" has gone wrong after games in point have indicated certain winners. However, no matter who wins the Thanksgiving Day conflict between St. Louis and Washington University elevens, the comparative basis is sure to be wrong.

The Billikens and Pikers have had two common foes this season. Judging on a line through the University of Missouri team, the Washington varsity is about four touchdowns better on the defense and 10 points on offense. The "Bills" were badly walloped 44 to 0, while the hilltoppers were nosed out 14 to 10.

Then consider Rolla as a basis of comparison. The Miners were trimmed by Washington 21 to 0, and two weeks later succumbed to Coach Rademacher's men, 28 to 0. That would indicate that the Blue and White eleven is a touchdown stronger.

Figures Don't Mean Much.

Of course such lines of reasoning are inaccurate and must be thrown out. St. Louis U. played the Tigers early in the season when they were "soft." The state school players had been working since the first of September and had a large advantage in condition. On the other hand the Pikers met Rolla in their first game and also were not a well organized unit.

Several St. Louis University followers attended the Missouri-Washington game at Columbia and were told by Tiger players that the Columbians played better football against the Billikens than against the Pikers. If this is the truth of course the Washington advantage through Missouri would have to be greatly discounted.

Whatever is the comparative strength of the two elevens, it is a certainty that the Turkey day battle presents an entire new aspect of the case. St. Louis U. has always felt that a victory over the West Enders would make an otherwise dreary season bright. The Billikens generally fail to report until late and this season they have not shown a great deal of aggressiveness in their games. However, it is a certainty that they will show fight when battling for the city championship.

Last year the Pikeway outfit entered the game as odds-on favorites. Yet neither team had scored until the fourth period was half spent and then Washington was able to urge over a 7-to-0 victory. The year previous St. Louis was picked to win by a landslide. However, the Red and Green fought as never before and looked good in its defeat.

Football relations were reopened between the two schools in 1915. Since that time an annual game has been played, and only once have the Billikens finished on top. The total now stands four victories for Washington out of the five meetings. The Pikers have never been able to forget that 61-to-0 trimming that they received the year of the break between the schools.

PIKERS AND BILLIKENS TO BE THEATER GUESTS

The Washington and St. Louis University football teams, principals in the big Thanksgiving day clash at Francis Field, will be the guests of the Delmonte Theater Tuesday evening. The Washington U. squad will occupy all the box seats on the right side of the theater, while St. Louis will be on the left.

One hundred seats in the front rows will be reserved for St. Louis rooters, while another hundred will go to picked Pikeway cheerers. The performance will be stopped at 9 o'clock and the stage given to the rival cheer-leaders, who will hold a competitive contest.

KEEN KUTTER ELEVEN BEATS BUTLER BROS.

The Keen Kutters eleven swamped the Butler Bros., 7 to 0, in the Saturday Division of the Municipal Soccer League tilt at Fairground yesterday. Sprinz scored three goals, while Drew and Stahlhuth each shot two. In the other contest, Eden Seminary vanquished the Bell Telephones, 2—0. Gabler 1 and Nies scored the points.

St. Thomas Team Wins.

Two games were played in the Carondelet division of the Parochial School League yesterday. In the first game St. Thomas trampled over the St. Agnes eleven, 6 to 0. In the other game St. Mary and Joseph trounced the St. Frances de Sales, 2 to 0. Niels and Bevers shot for St. Mary's, while Hennessey and Fevers scored for St. Thomas.

In Beating Illinois Ohio State Certainly Went About the Task in a Workman-Like Manner

FORWARD PASS IN LAST TEN SECONDS WINS FOR OHIO, 7-0

Workman's 37-Yard Throw to Myers Gives Buckeyes Undisputed Big Ten Title.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

URBANA, ILL., November 20.—The football supremacy of the Western Conference went the same way as the presidential election and the baseball championship, this afternoon, and tonight 3000 frenzied undergraduates are parading the streets of this town singing "Fair Ohio."

Ohio State remembered how Illinois snatched a victory during the last 13 seconds of last year's game, and that is why every Buckeye adherent glories particularly in today's 7 to 0 victory.

This victory was no commonplace one. It came during the very last ten seconds and the play that decided the issue was in progress when the head linesman sounded time. The play was one last superhuman effort to break a scoreless tie and the 24,000 spectators who witnessed the wonderful contest stood in silince as it was being executed.

The Scarlet and Gray had just essayed two forward passes on the Illinois 42-yard line and both of them had been interrupted by blue jerseyed arms. The entire conclave knew that the final moments were at hand and Ohio's efforts seemed hopeless.

"Hoge" Workman resorted to the air once again and calmly he stood behind his fighting forwards and searched for a receiver. Thirty-seven yards down field "Truck" Meyers was waiting unwatched and a beautiful heave was directed to him. Illinois secondary defense men dashed to stop the progress, but he picked the ball from the air and raced down the north sideline for a touchdown. The game was over when Myers placed the ball behind the goal posts and the Ohioans were tumbling out of their stands as Stinchcomb kicked the seventh point.

The Well-Known Pandemonium.

Then came pandemonium. Sixty minutes of tenseness had been too much and the reaction came in buckets full. The victors' cadet musicians reversed their great blue capes so as to show the scarlet and gray lining and proceeded as a flaming procession followed by thousands of wild and howling Ohioans. Cheer leaders claimed the Illinois goal posts and directed the march. For 20 minutes the trumpeters trumpeted and drummers drummed while students yelled. Ohio had revenge. Victory came as defeat had come last year.

Ohio deserved to win because it looked like the better team. Illinois fought nobly and it must be recalled that Capt. Depler, the Orange center, was unable to play because of injuries. Carney, Illinois candidate for all Western end, played less than one-third of the game and this broke up the famous Walquist-Carney passing combination. But then that is football, and the fact remains that Welce's warriors looked better than their opponents during the major part of the game.

Figures are lifeless things and they often miscarry gridiron facts, but a statistical account of today's game just about tells the tale. Ohio made six first downs while Illinois made four; Ohio gained 132 yards on rushing while the locals gained 95; the winners completed two passes for 52 yards and Illinois one for 18 yards. On returning kicks and on punting, the Buckeyes held a similar advantage over the men of Zuppke.

Both Teams Brilliant on Defense; Stinchcomb Shines for Ohio Machine

The finest thing about today's battle, because battle it was, was the superdefensive of the contestants. The tackling was fierce and when a man went down he rarely advanced the ball an inch farther. The blocking was definite and that accounts for the fact that only eight first downs were made through line play. And although the 22 collegians fought as hard as athletes ever have fought, the game was a clean one. Only 10 yards in penalties were inflicted, each eleven being guilty of one off-side offense. There was no piling, cutting or holding; there was nothing but football at its finest.

Little Pete Stinchcomb, Ohio's rare left halfback, was the spirit of his team and as well he was the outstanding athlete on the field. Pete electrified the stands with his great broken field running and his cut-ins through tackle. Blair, another Buckeye back, who frequently plunged through the Illini defense for telling gains, was the only other Columbus player who could gain. Wilaman failed at carrying the ball and Workman disappointed with his passing failures. The sophomore quarterback had been heralded as a ball tosser, but Zuppke's linemen were in on him and hurried his heaves so that only two out of nine were completed; while three were intercepted.

Defensive was at its height during the first period and it seemed as if neither team would ever be able to gain consistently. Illinois' line was a wall and Ohio was able to gain only six yards during the quarter, while the ultimate losers smashed for about 22, making one first down when Walquist hit tackle for 11 yards. There were 10 punts during the 15 minutes and Workman held an advantage in the toe duel over Hellstrom.

Involved Plays Tried.

With the straight line efforts failing in this period, both quarterbacks pulled involved multiple shift plays out of their trick boxes, thereafter. It seemed foolhardy to do this with the lines breaking through time and again and to this can probably be attributed the reason for rushing failures. The back fields were not fast enough and the attacking lines strong enough to hold off the opposing forces.

Stinchcomb was at his best during the second period and almost gave his team a touchdown. He received a punt on his 20-yard line and returned 10. He then skirted right end for 18 yards and first down. Ohio was held here and forced to kick, the boot going out of bounds on the Orange 5-yard mark. Hellstrom then kicked to midfield and on the next play the redoubtable Pete wriggled through the entire Zuppke defense for 29 yards, putting the attack on Illinois' 11-yard line. Three line bucks made first down and the Scarlet and Gray was only six yards from the promised land.

Final Standings In Big 10 Race

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—The final standing of the Western conference football teams follows:

TEAM.	Won.	Lost.	Pct.
Ohio State	5	0	1.000
Wisconsin	4	1	.800
Indiana	3	1	.750
Illinois	4	2	.667
Iowa	3	2	.600
Michigan	2	2	.500
Northwestern	2	3	.400
Chicago	2	4	.333
Purdue	0	4	.000
Minnesota	0	6	.000

The first line smash netted 2 yards and the second effort gave the same result. Ohio had two downs to make two yards, but the Illini tightened and after Williaman and Blair had hurled their hulks at the blue stalwarts the ball was still a yard away. Hellstrom then kicked out of danger and the half was over.

Stinchcomb's Gerat Run.

Ohio chucked off another opportunity at the start of the third period and this slip took some of the fight out of the Buckeye men for the plays that immediately followed. Illinois kicked off and Stinchcomb received the ball on his 3-yard line. Beautiful interference formed ahead of him and he headed down field in the crest of a phalanx of red jerseys. At his 40-yard line a Zup hit him, but he got away. In midfield, another lined at him, but he stepped high and eluded. Not until he had run 57 yards was he downed by two Illnois men when he endeavored to cut down the center of the field.

Illinois took time out after this play, but a team discussion could not even concentrate the defense. Blair and Stinchcomb shot out to end and cut in through the tackles for 18 yards in three line smashes. Blair was off on another run, but he fumbled on the Illinois 20-yard line and the ever alert Bobby Fletcher was on the oval. From that time until the last seconds of play Ohio did not threaten. That fumble took some of the snap out of Wilce's men.

Ohio Holds on One-Yard Line.

Illinois' opportunity started late in the third. Bob Fletcher received a punt in midfield and returned 10. His brother, Ralph, then added five, after which Ohio held for one down. The Orange tried its first pass of the game on the next play, and it was successful, a Walquist-Doepel heave being good for 18 yards, and first down on Ohio's 16-yard mark as the period closed. Ralph Fletcher ran from a pass formation through tackle on the following play, and was not stopped until he reached the four-yard mark. Illinois took three of these yards on the first play and had three bucks for the lone yard.

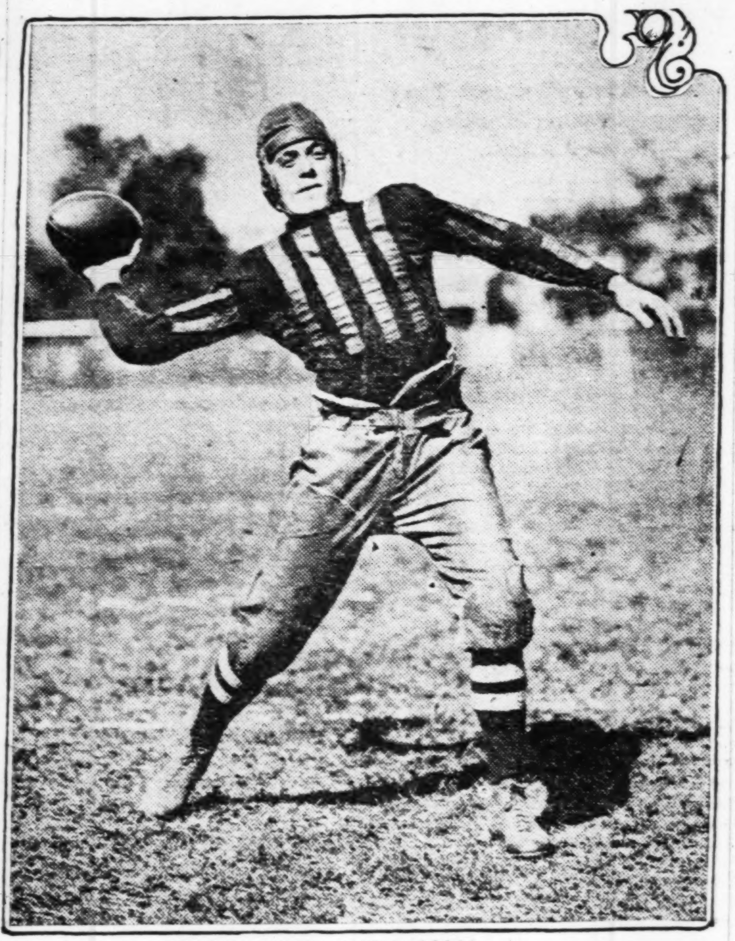
Then came the battle. After each down 22 fighting humans were all tied up in a knot and the spectators had to wait until they were untied by the officials before learning the result. On the last effort Illinois had two feet to go, and when the ball was pulled from the mass it was still six inches from the telling line.

That was Illinois' chance, and it slipped away. Up in the stands they continued to sing and cheer, and they hoped against hope that history would repeat itself. But history wasn't repeating today.

Very late in the game Stinchcomb returned a punt to his 30-yard line. Then came two nice runs by Blair for first down on his 45-yard line. Over to the sidelines Stinchcomb walked and watched the teams line up. Just why Illinois players paid no attention to him will always be a mystery, but Pete simply waited for Workman to toss a lateral pass to him, and then he traveled 10 yards before he was stopped.

Two more passes were then tried, but they failed, and then came the play which ended the game, and at the same time gave Ohio the football supremacy of the Western conference.

Ohio State Quarterback Whose 37-Yard Pass Defeated Illini



CAPT. HARRY WORKMAN ...

"Hoge" Workman Had To Win Football Letter To Get Into Long Pants

COLUMBUS, O.

NO wonder the Workmans are football stars.

"You gotta make your football letter before you can wear long pants," is the standing edict in the Workman family from "Pa" Workman at Huntington, W. Va.

Consequently, all five of the Workman brothers have sparkled in gridiron togs in high school before they were out of knee breeches.

Harry "Hoge" Workman is the brightest luminary in Ohio State's present galaxy of stars. This sophomore quarterback already has won brimming meeds of praise from football critics. He is rated as the best exponent of the forward pass in the West. His brother, Noel, also a sophomore, is on the receiving end of passes, as an end on the varsity.

Bradley Workman, the third brother, is playing football at Marshall College. Two younger brothers are in Huntington High School, earning the right to wear those "long ones."

INTERLAKE YACHTING BODY MEETS DEC. 4

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 20.—The annual winter meeting of the Interlake Yachting Association which is composed of boat and yacht clubs on the Great Lakes, will be held in Toledo Dec. 4, according to an announcement today by Commodore F. W. Wakefield of Vermilion.

The meeting is held primarily for the election of next year's officers, although there is to be considerable discussion over plans for holding the 1921 regatta.

The regatta was held at Erie, Pa., last year. Consensus of opinion of members is that it will be transferred back to Put-in-Bay, the meeting point for a number of years.

EDWARD GRAHAM, STAR TRAPSHOOTER, IS DEAD

WAUKEGAN, Ill., Nov. 20.—Edward Graham, one of the best known professional trap shooters in the country, died at his home at Long Lake, near here, today, after two years' illness.

With his younger brother, Jay Graham, he participated in trap shooting contests throughout the United States and abroad. Six years ago he won the international handicap match at Stockholm, Sweden. He also captured prizes in Canada and South America.

Toronto Eleven Wins.

KINGSTON, Ont., Nov. 20.—The University of Toronto eleven defeated the McGill University team, 11 to 6, here today, and won the Canadian intercollegiate football championship of 1920.

Hoppe Challenges Belgian Cue Star

Stipulates, However, That Match Must Be Played Before First of New Year.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Willie Hoppe, champion balk-line billiardist, has issued a formal challenge to play Edouard Horemans, European champion, to decide the world's championship, it was announced today. The challenge specifies that the match be played before Jan. 1.

The defi was presented by R. B. Benjamin, Hoppe's business representative, who said that before Hoppe was at liberty to play Horemans, he must defend his title in accordance with rules governing championship competition in this country, against Welker Cochran and Jake Schaefer, who won first and second places in the preliminary round of the national tournament at San Francisco. The final round will be played here Dec. 6, 7 and 8. After that date, should Hoppe successfully defend his title, he will be ready for a match with the Belgian.

F. J. L. Derks, Horeman's secretary, was not sure today whether the Belgian expert would be ready to play the match by that time. He wanted time for Horemans to familiarize himself with the rules, cushions, tables and other conditions of the game that are somewhat different in this country from those prevailing in Europe. Furthermore, Horemans has contracts to play 10 exhibition matches, which might interfere with his playing Hoppe before the end of the year. Altogether, no formal reply was made to the challenge. Derks assured Hoppe's manager that the Belgian would be glad to meet the American champion at the first convenient opportunity.

Special Bowling Match.

A special bowling match will be staged this afternoon on the Benton Park alleys between the United Bakers and the leading five tenpinners from the Master Bakers' Bowling League. The United Bakers will line up as follows: Werder, Boehlau, Rodenberg, Feucht and Jaby. Their opponents will have Spann, Hartman, Schuetz, Obermeyer and Walters. The match is for three games, total pins to count.

Promising Bouts On Week's Cards At Local Clubs

Shannon and Cole to Furnish Headliner at Armory Tomorrow Night.

White to Box Winner Of Shannon-Cole Go At the Armory, Nov. 29

ROGER CORNELL, matchmaker of the National Sporting Club, announced last night that Charley White had accepted terms to meet the winner of tomorrow night's Shannon-Cole bout at the Armory Nov. 29. White asked for a guarantee of $1500, with an option on a percentage of the total receipts. Cornell wired back last night agreeing to the terms.

White is scheduled to meet Champion Benny Leonard at Jersey City Dec. 10 and Shannon will try to trim Charley so he can ask to be substituted for White in the Eastern contest, or at least bolster his right to a bout with the lightweight champion.

What promises to be two of the most interesting feature bouts arranged by local boxing promoters in some time will be staged by local clubs this week. Tomorrow night at the Armory, Eddie Shannon of San Francisco opposes Billy Cole, claimant to the city lightweight title, while on Wednesday at the Coliseum, the Future City offers Kid Regan and Kid Bandy as its main event.

The contest between Regan and Bandy at the Coliseum will be for the local championship in the 126-pound class. Fur should fly, as Bandy at present is enjoying his best local campaign, while Regan will try to do a "come back," following his knockout by Pete Herman and Joe Lynch last season.

It will be the first appearance for Regan in a local ring since he was stopped by Lynch. In fact, he has fought only one bout since that time. That was at Beardstown, Ill., on election day when he won in 10 rounds from Allen Dale of Beloit, Wis. Bandy has been boxing regularly, his last appearance resulting in a victory over Harry Kabakoff.

In Shape, Says Bramell.

Tommy Bramell, the best trainer in the city, has been handling Regan this fall, and is out with the assertion that the South Sider will surprise when he steps into the ring at the Coliseum. Bramell says that Regan has developed a left with a kick in it, and also has improved his defense.

The weight for the contest is 126 pounds. This will be easy for Regan, who normally is a 124-pounder. However, Bandy will have to train down to the figure, as most of his battles have been at 128 and 130 pounds.

While the Regan-Bandy bout no doubt will draw the larger crowd because of the large followings owned by both boxers and their earnest work in all their contests, the Shannon and Cole contest probably will not be far behind in real thrills. Cole has had trouble in obtaining engagements with local lightweights and is out to show that he is the best in his class in the city.

Shannon a Real Scrapper.

In Shannon, however, he is picking out a tough customer. Shannon, who styles himself Irish lightweight champion, made his debut here several weeks ago when he handed the rushing Jack Lawler an artistic lacing in eight rounds. He is clever and a straight puncher. The bout tomorrow night will be a mix-up between two boxing artists.

The remainder of Roger Cornell's card is as follows: Ivan Candler vs. Eddie Taylor, 145 pounds; Jimmy Kerns vs. Lawrence Mattman, 130 pounds, and Grub Whalen vs. Artie Hanley, 135 pounds. All these bouts are for four rounds.

For the semi-windup, Tommy Sullivan has matched two sluggers, Joe McMullen and Orb Jolly. This clash should be as hard fought as the main event. An opponent is sought for Willie Reith for the six-round preliminary. McAtee and Haney are being considered. Young Ramsey and Willie Blue, 108-pounders, furnish the four-round curtain raiser.

Walter Heisner will referee both shows.

SCOTT HIGH NEGOTIATING FOR CALIFORNIA GAME

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 20.—Scott High School football team, holder of the intersectional scholastic title by virtue of defeats handed three Eastern teams in three successive years, is negotiating for a postseason game with Los Angeles, Cal., on Christmas.

Signing of the final articles of agreement hinges on the outcome of the game today between Scott and East Tech of Cleveland. Another postseason game will be played should Scott win today's encounter. Haverhill or Newton teams of Massachusetts will be booked here Dec. 4.

MUNICIPAL OFFICIALS SUSPEND 3 PLAYERS

Three players were suspended last week by officials of the Municipal Soccer League. Ed Temperle of the Kohlmans was set down for two weeks for arguing with the referee. Nichols Hawkins, Beils, was suspended one week for fighting, and Albert Weber of the Keen Kutters, indefinitely. J. H. Veidt of the Mahons escaped with a warning.

F. Clark of the Trumbulls was reinstated following a two-weeks' suspension.

AN EXPLANATION.

THE good die young, 'tis often said,
By all that fact is understood.
That must be why so many try
Their best to keep from being good.
—Detroit Free Press.

OFT have I heard it said or sung,
And yet I know it isn't so,
It cannot be the good die young—
I passed my childhood years ago.
—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

WE do not doubt the maxim's truth,
We'll let it pass for what it's worth,
But if it should be right, for sooth,
This is our second time on earth.
—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

IF it be true the good die young,
I wonder how it came about,
Methuselah remained unhung
For he was sure a rare old scout.

THANKSGIVING.

What is left of the gridiron season will come to an end next Thursday. Some will be thankful that they are not maimed or crippled, while the maimed and crippled will be thankful that they are not dead.

The League of Nations was called to order with Uncle Sam on the outside looking in. It is a sad spectacle to see our revered Uncle playing no more important part in the affairs of the world than leader of the knothole gang.

The Public Service of Nevada in ordering the railroads to cut dining car prices cites the case of 30 cents for an order of prunes. As the feller says, one waiter couldn't carry 30 cents worth of prunes.

Thirty-five cents for a baked apple is another case cited by the Commish. Even Adam's apple that started the world off on the wrong foot wasn't worth that much.

MUNICIPAL BASKET BALL MEETING NEXT TUESDAY

A meeting of all those interested in the organization of the Men's Municipal Basketball League will be held Tuesday at 8:30 p. m. at the Grand Avenue Community Center, 1401 South Grand avenue.

Through the courtesy and co-operation of the authorities of the Armory and Washington University, the facilities of these two places have been extended to the Municipal Athletic Association for basketball purposes.

Leagues will be organized for Senior and Junior teams, the latter being open to players 17 years of age and younger.

It is expected that the season will start early in December and it is therefore very important for everyone to attend the initial meeting.

MID-WEST OFFICERS HOLD MEETING TODAY

The officers of the Middle West Bowling Association will hold their annual meeting at the Marquette Hotel at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Officers for the coming year will be elected, while the site for the 1921 tournament will be selected. Three cities are after the next championship, among them being Kansas City.

Several changes in various rules also are expected to be put to a vote of the delegates this afternoon.

Petersons Roll Man o' War.

The Peterson Stars will roll the Man o' War team in the second half of their home-and-home bowling match at Peterson's alleys this afternoon. The Man o' War squad won by more than 200 pins last Sunday on the Washington drives.

Low Scores Rule In Middle We Bowling Tourne

Transportation Delays Ha Chicago Bowlers—Wiesner Lead Early Field.

Low scores prevailed last night the five-man team competition the Middle West Bowling Asso tion tournament on the Washin alleys. Chicago teams were dela and were still on train when the were scheduled to be toppling pins. They rushed to the alleys their arrival and the Wiesners, wi 2688 were high for the evening.

J. Kreith, with 598 led the Wi ners, winding up with 237.

The St. Francis Hotel team of Paul, was second among the fi night's competitors, the quintet g ting 2624.

Chicago has a heavy entry and the Windy City bowlers, despite the poor start, were free in predicti that quintet from Chicago wo capture the championship.

Several of the Chicago teams w unable to arrive in time to bowl midnight and a special rolling wa arranged for them. This squad in cluded the Brucks, last year's A. B. C. champions, who were schedul to roll at 7:15. Shortly after they were scheduled to take the runwa a telegram was received announ that they were en route, but migh not arrive until the wee small hour

The Brucks' work will be watch with interest, as last year they a eraged over 2800 in their tourname competition.

ule on Soleing Club Nearly Cost Whitney a Title take by Referee in Trans- ississippi Twice Gave Champion's Foe a "Life."

UESTION STILL RAISED

her Golf Rules Indicate That Both Whitney and Bockenkamp Were Disqualified.

t is surprising the vast number very good golfers who are un- iliar with many of the important s of golf. One which has been subject of much discussion is regarding the "soleing" or nding of the club in a bunker or rd.

hazard is defined by the rules being "any bunker, water (except al water) ditch, bush, sand, path road." "A bunker is a depres- in the ground where the ral soil is exposed and some- s top-dressed with softer soil or d."

he rule concerning a ball in a rd provides that "nothing shall done which can in any way im- e its lie; the club shall not touch ground (or sand) nor shall any- g be touched or moved before player strikes the ball, subject to following exceptions:

1. The player may place his t firmly for purpose of taking nce.

2. In addressing the ball, or in ckward or forward swing, any ass, bush or other growing sub- nce or the side of a bunker, all, paling or other immovable bstacle may be touched.

3. Steps or planks placed in the zard by the Greens Committee or access to such hazard may be moved and if a ball be moved in doing it shall be replaced with- ut penalty."

A bunker is always a hazard, but hazard is not always a bunker ce a hazard embraces also a pond, e, ditch and other things. All fers know that they cannot sole ground their club in a hazard and ping in mind the fact that a nker is a hazard they should know t the rule likewise applies to a nker.

How the Rule Applies.

The main difficulty has arisen in case where a ball lies within a nker, yet on the turf or grass and t directly on or near the sand. r many years an erroneous im- sion existed that the rule ap- d only to the sand in a bunker d that otherwise a player was free ground his club. The fact is that club cannot be soled on any part the depression whether there be s or not. By "depression" is ant that portion of the bunker ow the surface of the surround- ground. Therefore if a ball lies n the side or bank of a bunker d above the surface of the sur- nding ground, the player may e his club.

The Case of Bockenkamp.

This rule came up for interpreta- n at a critical stage of the finals the 1919 Trans-Mississippi Cham- nship between Nelson Whitney and hard Bockenkamp at the St. Louis ntry Club. Coming to the rty-sixth hole Bockenkamp was up. His second shot found deep bunker in front of and 10 t below the green. His ball rest- on the grass a few inches away m the sand.

Before he played his third shot m the bunker he asked an offi- of the association in charge of tournament, whether or not he ld sole his club and it was ruled he could. Whitney did not ques- n the decision although it was error. Bockenkamp then just ely missed halving the hole ich meant the match) although had previously forfeited it when soled his club in the bunker.

Again at the second extra (the rty-eighth) hole, Bockenkamp's l lay in the identical position in bunker guarding the green. Bock- amp, having in mind the decision the previous hole, without hesita- soled his club and played the t. According to the rules, he lost hole and the match right here, again Whitney made no protest. hole was later halved and the tch proceeded to the fortieth where Whitney finally won.

"Right" Man Finally Won.

Had Bockenkamp won either the ty-ninth or fortieth hole he would ve been declared the winner, plac- g Whitney in the strange predi- ment of losing a championship ich he had really won. The rec- s show that this match was final- decided on the fortieth green, but ally" Whitney won at the thirty- nth.

More Varieties of Soling Rule.

There are still a few other angles m which this unusual situation ld be viewed and while we are ling in so-called technicalities, take the rule book and discuss further.

Going back to the thirty-sixth hole ere Bockenkamp first soled his b in the bunker, Whitney's silence submission to the referee's de- on may well be considered as a ver of the penalty against Bock- amp. If so, under another rule tney lost the hole and the cham- ship, as witness Special Rule 2 Match Play, as follows: "A com- itor shall not waive any penalty urred by his opponent under pen- y of the loss of the hole." Under same circumstances at the thirty- nth hole, Whitney again, by his nce, might be deemed to have ved the penalty against his op- ent, and if so, he lost that hole

Were Both Men Disqualified?

d digging deeper, we find this (Special No. 3 for Match Play): petitors shall not agree to ex- the operation of any rule, under penalty of disqualification." Question: Did Whitney and Bockenkamp, by their silent acquiescence in the violation of the rule concerning the grounding of the club, in effect, agree to suspend the operation of that rule? If yes, they were both disqualified. Then, with both finalists disqualified, who won the championship?

Oklahoma Should Clinch Valley Football Championship, Thursday

Game With Drake, on Form, Appears to Be Certain to Result Favorably to Sooners—Turkey Day Battles Will Practically End One of Most Interesting Seasons in Years.

By John E. Wray.

WITH the playing of a few important games scheduled for Thanksgiving day and the Army-Navy game of next Saturday, one of the most successful football seasons in the history of intercollegiate sport will end.

The year has been notable for the great strides made in the employment of the forward pass, which came into its own as never before. It may almost be said that advancing the ball by rushing, once the bulwark of the game, has become a secondary factor in winning games. On one Saturday it was noted that every important game of the country was decided by ability to advance by means of the aerial route.

The conservatism of Yale, Harvard and Princeton, which for years was unshakable, has disappeared. This season saw all three schools employing the overhead game as a main element of attack, and not as a mere deception to open the enemy defense.

The games on the Turkey day schedule include several of interest to St. Louis, particularly the Kansas-Missouri game at Columbia, the Washington-St. Louis University game at St. Louis, the Georgia Tech-Auburn game and others noted elsewhere.

Heisman Must Make Good.

The Pennsylvania-Cornell battle in the East, while a struggle of beaten teams, will be interesting, as both elevens have shown improvement. It's up to Coach Heisman to show cause why he should keep his new job as Pennsylvania coach in this game.

The Pittsburg-Penn State is the heavy artillery of the Turkey day schedule. Both are unbeaten this year and both have overwhelmed powerful foes. On their comparative showing against the University of Pennsylvania, Penn State is a touchdown or two better than Pittsburg and seems to have a tighter defense. Penn State is coached by Hugo Bezdek, former baseball manager of the Pittsburg Baseball Club, and, with Charlie Moran, the umpire, is one of the few baseball experts to make good as a gridiron teacher.

Georgia Tech, which has been under critical fire ever since its game with Pittsburg resulted in severance of athletic relations, will send its strong team against the Alabama Polytechnic Institute at Atlanta. Football fans in some localities may wonder why this game is mentioned as of importance, but the fact is that Alabama Poly, although it lost a game to Georgia this year, has one of the most formidable physical machines developed in the county. Its 77-0 defeat of the good Washington and Lee team and its 56-6 defeat of Vanderbilt indicates its power. It won from Georgia Tech last year and is likely to do so again next Thursday. It took the unbeaten Pittsburg team's life to win, 10—3, after being behind most of the game, score 3—0.

The Alabama team, better known as Auburn, has a line that from tackle to tackle inclusive the line averages 210 pounds per man

Notre Dame Faces Stout Foe.

The Big Ten season is over; but Notre Dame and the Michigan Aggies, and Detroit and Rutgers will supply some good football Thursday. Notre Dame is an unbeaten team and its walloping of the Army team entitles it to recognition among the country's leading teams of 1920.

In the Valley Conference the Missouri-Kansas struggle will be of note, although neither is a title factor. The Oklahoma Sooners, unbeaten in the Valley conference, oppose the Drake University team which owns but one victory out of five tries—that over Washington. Drake is a tough nut, but it is not good enough to measure up with Oklahoma, unless it gets a world of breaks and favorable officiating—something that is said to happen whenever Drake plays in Des Moines.

Washington and St. Louis will hold their annual struggle. Although the word "struggle" is unquestionably correct, both teams invariably fighting hard for this victory, it is doubtful if the Billikens can develop sufficient power and team work to stop the Washington stalwarts. Washington played well against Missouri and looks like a much better eleven today than it did earlier in the season. If it shows the form against St. Louis that it did against the Tigers, it would win by two or three touchdowns. Missouri beat St. Louis U., 44—0. Missouri was lucky not to be beaten by Washington, but won, 14—0. On this form comparison doesn't appear possible. St. Louis has received several severe druggings this year, and its defense does not appear to be "there." However, if Rademacher can close the gap from tackle to tackle he has other material for a good eleven.

Centre Has an Easy Match.

Centre College, which closed a heavy schedule with an easy game against Georgetown, Kentucky, disappointed its admirers, who expected it would tie or beat Harvard. Its greatest humiliation was the overwhelming defeat a week after the Crimson game, when Georgia Tech ruined the Danville team with four touchdowns.

This interesting eleven will be watched closely next year, to see what Coach Moran can do with an enrollment of 300 students. Some of his stars will be finishing their college terms and it will be up to Moran to fill the gaps. Some very good scouting will be needed in all probability.

Kelley Declines Offer From Phils

St. Paul Manager Who Has Won 4 Flags in 14 Years Will Remain in A. A.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 20.—Mike Kelley, manager of the St. Paul American Association club, tonight declined an offer to manage the Philadelphia National League club next season.

This announcement was made by Kelley after a conference with owners of the St. Paul club. Kelley already had signed a contract to manage the Saints next year when he received the Phillies' offer from President W. F. Baker at Kansas City recently.

"It was an attractive offer but I have decided to stay with St. Paul for another year at least," said the manager of the Saints after the meeting. "I have an ideal position here and I feel I owe it to St. Paul to remain."

During a total service of fourteen years with St. Paul, Kelley has won four championships in the American Association.

SYRACUSE DEFEATS COLGATE, 14 TO 0, IN ANNUAL GRID CLASH

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Nov. 20.—The Syracuse-Colgate game, the annual classic of Central New York football, was won by Syracuse for the fifth successive time here today. The score was 14 to 0. Two perfect forward passes by Abbott were the main contributing factors of the victory of the Orange.

Millers Oppose Scullins Today

First Place in St. Louis Soccer League at Stake When Pair Battles.

First place is at stake in the St. Louis Soccer League today in the clash between the Scullins, present pacemakers, and the Ben Millers, U. S. F. A. champions. In the other clash, the improved Screw Co. eleven opposes the Innisfails, who have yet to win a contest this season.

In order to gain first place before the initial U. S. F. A. cup games, scheduled for Thanksgiving day, the Millers must defeat the Scullins today. At present Tate Brady and his aggregation has a margin of one point over the title winners of last season.

Both managers will have their strongest possible lineups on the field. The addition of Tommy O'Hanlon, former St. Leo star, to the Scullins, has greatly strengthened Brady's halfback line. Failure to score goals has been the chief drawback for the Millers to date. The champions have tallied only four times.

The Screw Company is favored to win from the Irishmen because of its great showing in the past two weeks. However, Foley's men have tallied only one goal in six games this year, and there's no telling just when the eleven will get going. No matter what happens, a lively battle will be fought.

First game starts promptly at 2:15 o'clock with 35-minutes halves. Phil Kavanaugh and Paul McSweeney will referee.

Hunter Licenses to Women.

MERCER, Pa., Nov. 20.—Hunter licenses have been issued to 50 women, ranging in age from 18 to 45 years. Hunters' licenses to date have been issued to over 15,000 persons to hunt in Mercer County.

Cleveland Favored To Trim Central and Capture Flag

Tie for High School Championship Will Result if South Siders Lose Thursday.

The worst the undefeated Cleveland High School team can do in the interscholastic championship race this year is to tie for first place, and the worst can only come about if the Central eleven can come back with a much-improved team and beat the South Side aggregation in the Thanksgiving day battle.

Central was defeated by Yeatman by one touchdown, but since has beaten Soldan and McKinley. Against Soldan Central looked decidedly better than it did against Yeatman, and last Saturday showed a fairly good eleven in beating McKinley, 20 to 7. In fact, Coach Walker's charges came closer to true form last week than they had at any other time this year. If the men improved at the same rate they have thus far, the Turkey day game should be very interesting.

Cleveland Well Balanced.

Cleveland has played consistent football all year. The line is heavy and the backfield fast. The South Side team also boasts several outstanding stars. Halfback Siebert is a real asset. He is a reliable line plunger and can be counted upon to boot a field goal at crucial moments. Schlapprizzi, who was last year an all-interscholastic end, has been playing the backfield and has shown exceptionally well in this position. Quarterback Scannell is undoubtedly one of the best field generals in the circuit, and besides these, the line has seven sterling men who play well together.

Central has Halfback Trumm, Fullback Floun, Quarterback Fisher and Anzalone, end, who are almost, if not just as good as their South Side rivals in their positions, but Central lacks the balance that Coach Fenenga has given his men. For this reason Cleveland is favored to capture the title Thursday. But Central, by showing the spirit that the mid-city team usually attains around this time of the year, may upset the dope.

Soldan to Play McKinley.

Soldan meets McKinley in the other Thanksgiving game. Soldan has a team that has been disrupted by injuries. The backfield mainstay, Fullback Hirsch, turned in his clothes two weeks ago and it is not yet known if Halfback Fischlowitz will be in the game.

McKinley should show better against Soldan than it did against Central last Saturday, for it will not be facing as strong a line. Capt. Harlow, who plays the pivotal position, has been sent to the backfield to fill Hirsch's shoes, and although Fisk, a guard, plays a good game at center, it is hard to fill his place at guard.

McKinley fell before Central by the score of 20 to 7, whereas Soldan held the Red and Black to a one-point victory. On the face of this, it looks as though McKinley will be the winner. Soldan has lost three games and McKinley has lost twice.

NEW RECORD EXPECTED IN 250-MILE AUTO RACE

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 20.—Unusual speed in the 250-mile championship automobile race on the Los Angeles Speedway Thanksgiving day was predicted by Frederick J. Wagner of New York, official starter, as a result of his first inspection of the track and the entries.

Wagner said he believed there was "a very good chance of the winner neatly cracking" the world's record of 103.6 miles an hour for 250 miles, made on the track last winter by Jimmy Murphy.

Players, Not Governing Body, Must Keep Baseball Clean, Evans Declares

Umpire Assails Bonus System as Unwise in That It Tends to Encourage Men to Irregular Methods to Aid Others in Accomplishing Prescribed Feats for Special Pay.

By Billy Evans.

American League Umpire.

(Copyright, 1920.)

THE honesty of baseball largely rests with the player.

Just now there is a great deal of talk about reorganization of the governing body of baseball. Perhaps that is essential for the welfare of the game, but I have my doubts.

Regardless of how baseball is governed, the big duty to the game rests with the players. The fact that the national commission was the controlling body in baseball in 1919 did not cause a few players to fall from grace because of the lure of money. Those players would have probably done the same thing, regardless of who was the governing body.

Baseball is a national institution. It is the favorite sport of millions, many of whom take an active part. The professional ballplayer, the big leaguer in particular, is supposed to be the last word. Because he can play the game to a high degree of efficiency, he is able to command a fancy salary. Because of his great ability, he is the object of much hero worship and becomes the idol of thousands of fans. I cite no particular case, because every big leaguer of ability has his following, who swear by him and what he does. Certainly such players owe a big duty to the public and the game. That duty is to keep the game clean. As a body they should refuse to tolerate a player under even the slightest suspicion.

Bonus System Unwise.

Personally, I believe one of the worst features connected with the game is the bonus system often incorporated in a player's contract. A club owner agrees to give a pitcher a certain additional amount if he wins 20 games, so much more if he wins 25, and if he wins 30 the bonus promised is perhaps twice that promised for 20 victories. Likewise, a bonus is offered to a player based on his batting average. If he hits .275 he is to receive a certain amount, if he hits .300 the bonus is perhaps doubled, and so on.

On the surface such proceeding may seem perfectly proper. In a way it is, but it seldom works out, since it offers the opportunity for wrongdoing. I have in mind a case that concerned Harry Hooper of the Boston club. Several years ago Hooper, it seemed, had a contract with the Boston Red Sox that called for an additional $1000 or $1500, provided he hit .300. If there ever was a high-class fellow connected with baseball that individual is Harry Hooper. The incident I relate will bear out my statement.

Case of Harry Hooper.

It seems the average published a few days prior to the close of the season gave Hooper an average of .296, making it appear that with an ordinary break in luck he would hit the required .300 and get his bonus. Just prior to the start of the final game the players had it doped out that it would be necessary for Hooper to get two hits in four times up to reach his goal. I was umpiring the bases that afternoon and several ballplayers, half in jest and half serious, remarked:

"Hooper gets all the close ones today."

"I don't know of any player for whom I have a greater regard than Hooper, because he is always fair. Personally, I was hoping he would get his two hits, as I wanted to see him win the bonus. The mere inference that I might help him out riled me after I had heard the remark a couple of times, and rather heatedly I replied:

"Well, I hope Harry gets his two hits, but he don't need to look to me for help. I shall call them just as I see them."

Now, Hooper is a fast man. In that game he hit two slow grounders to the infield and gave me two close plays at first base. Each time I called him out, although the margin was perhaps a mere half step. At the time it seemed that each decision would cost Hooper about $750, as he made only one hit in four times up and, according to the unofficial averages, that would cause him to finish just under the .300 mark. The Boston player, coaching at first base, protested each ruling, as did some of the crowd who were pulling for Hooper, but nary a word came from Harry.

After the game some Boston players made some unkind remarks about my decisions. As I reached the Boston dugout I bumped into Hooper. I felt rather badly about the affair, and tried to express my regrets by remarking:

"Tough luck, Harry, to lose out by such a narrow margin."

How Hooper Saw It.

Before I had a chance to say a word as to how close the two plays were to being hits, he replied:

"I didn't get away from the plate very fast or I would have beaten both infield hits. They had me each time."

That was rather a big thing for a player to say to a fellow who had apparently relieved him of $1500 by giving two decisions against him, where the deciding margin was a fraction of a second. Happily, the unofficial averages were slightly incorrect. The official figures gave him a rating slightly better than .300.

Every ball player wants his teammate or member of a rival team to win his bonus, if the winning of it does not work a hardship on anyone. The ball player naturally is always with the player against the owner. Such contracts cause players, perhaps, to misjudge a fly ball, or make a third baseman play deep so the batter will have a good chance to beat out a bunt, or have the catcher tip the batsman off as to what is being pitched, or to make the pitcher throw nothing but fast ones. Bonus contracts sow seeds of evil and should be eliminated, because they are all wrong.

It is impossible to do anything crooked in baseball without having the secret leak out. After the second game of the 1919 series in Cincinnati there were enough rumors afloat to have caused someone to take some definite action. The club house is the place to settle a lot of things and settle them for all time. Therefore, I again remark that the honesty of baseball rests with the player, and it is the duty of each individual to assert himself when things do not go to suit him.

For several years the player will be the target for suspicion because of the actions of a few. It is up to him to so conduct himself that there will be no room for criticism. Last season after Babe Ruth had made 49 home runs a considerable time elapsed before he made the fiftieth. Much money was wagered on that feat. The ever suspicious freely claimed that Ruth wasn't trying to hit that mark. I was delighted when he cracked out his fiftieth wallop and made a few more for good measure. The life of a ball player or umpire, in fact, anyone connected with the game, has always had enough rough spots, because they are public characters and therefore targets for abuse. The recent scandal isn't going to help their status. So it is largely up to the player.

Judge Landis Makes First Official Move As Baseball Chairman

CINCINNATI, Nov. 20.

THE first official baseball call of Judge K. M. Landis, in his capacity as chairman of the National Baseball Commission, was to Cincinnati today. He conferred with August Herrman, former chairman of the National Commission, relative to the removal of all baseball records, that accumulated during Hermann's tenure of office, to the new headquarters of the commission in Chicago.

Judge Landis celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday today. He declared he expected to live to be at least 95 years old and that he expected to spend at least 30 years more on the Federal bench.

DARTMOUTH DEFEATS BROWN AND DEPARTS FOR GAME AT SEATTLE

BOSTON, Nov. 20.—Less than two hours after it had defeated Brown here this afternoon, the Dartmouth College football team was on its way to Seattle, to meet the University of Washington eleven in a game to be played next Saturday. St. Paul, Minn., is the first stop scheduled for the party, numbering 21 players and coaches. There they will be entertained by the St. Paul-Dartmouth Alumni Association. The team is due in Seattle on Wednesday night. Dartmouth's victory was its first over Brown in 15 years.

The Green battled hard for its 14 points, all of which were made in the first half, but was forced to fight even harder to stop the plucky Brown eleven from wiping out the lead. Spectacular forward passing, punting and broken field running by both teams marked the whole game.

Score by periods:

Dartmouth	7	7	0	0—14
Brown	0	0	6	0—6

Store's Sales Force at Dinner.

The sales people of the Hess & Culbertson Jewelry Co. enjoyed a combined business and pleasure session at the American Hotel Annex last night. After a dinner there were discussions of the various problems which will confront the store during the holiday season. Heads of various departments explained their stocks in relation to gift purchasing. Leo J. Vogt was chairman. Amusements were provided after the business session.

MRS. JULIA M. WALSH GIVES $10,000 TO ST. LOUIS U. FUND

Becomes First Woman Member of Founders' Fund, and Name Will Go on Bronze Tablet.

Through the sending of a check for $10,000 to the St. Louis University centennial endowment fund the past week, Mrs. Julia Maffitt Walsh of 434 Westminster place has qualified as the first woman member of the University Founders' Fund, the contributors to which are to have their names commemorated upon a bronze tablet at the entrance to the administration building of the institution.

The Founders' Fund Committee, just organized, and which will have charge of the larger donations to the fund of $3,000,000 necessary for the development and support of the university, consists of John S. Leahy, chairman; John Boyce, Paul D'A. Cooke, John G. Lonsdale, Joseph Lumaghi, Birch O. Mahaffey, Raymond F. McNally, Hugh W. Powers, O'Neill Ryan, Philip Scanlan, August Schlafly, Walter Schnaider, Harry Scullin, Martin Schaughnessy, Dr. John M. Simon, J. Sheppard Smith, F. Thornton, Edward Walsh Jr. and George W. Wilson, treasurer of the Centennial Endowment Fund.

Western Union Employes on Program.

Western Union employes, under the direction of Mrs. E. C. Reily, will present an entertainment next Saturday night at Sacred Heart hall, Twenty-fifth street and St. Louis avenue. Dancing will follow the program.

Do You Know a Baby Who Is Sick With Constipation

Tell the mother to give half a teaspoonful of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

NO thoughtful mother with children in the house will risk being without a good, reliable laxative. It will save many a serious illness, many a doctor's visit.

When the baby cries and is fretful, when the boy has no appetite and won't play, when the girl is listless and feverish, when there are complaints of headaches and colds, the mother can suspect constipation. Give Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in the small dose prescribed on the bottle, when you put the child to bed, and with morning the ailment will have disappeared,

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a popular compound of Egyptian Senna and other simple laxative herbs with pepsin and pleasant-tasting aromatics. It acts gently and mildly, and children take it without objection. A sixty-cent bottle is enough to last an average family many months. The ingredients are endorsed in the U. S. Pharmacopoeia, and last year American mothers bought over eight million bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin from druggists. It is the largest selling liquid laxative in the world, and few cautious families are ever without it.

TRY IT FREE

Send me your name and address and I will send you a free trial bottle of my Syrup Pepsin. Address me Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 513 Washington Street, Monticello, Illinois. Everybody now and then needs a laxative, and it is well to know the best. Write me today.

New Type of Towboat Makes the Old River Men Throw Up Hands

Innovation to Replace Long-Used Sternwheel Craft Will Result in Waste of Money, Veterans Declare.

By Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines.

IT is not easy for us today to clearly visualize commerce as it was carried on 60 years ago. At that time the locomotive and the steamboat were only partially developed. The railroads in particular presented a striking contrast to the railroads as we know them. The automobile and the tractor were undreamed of. Freight was slowly and inexpensively transported, and the length of the average shipment was less than half the average shipment of 184 miles.

THIS is the third of a series of five articles by Gen. Frank T. Hines, late Brigadier-General, chief of the Inland and Coastwise Waterways service of the War Department, analyzing the relation of the Federal Government to the national inland waterway traffic situation. Two more articles by Gen. Hines will follow in the Post-Dispatch.

At that time waterways were used relatively as much as were railroads for carrying freight. Our more important rivers, particularly the Mississippi and its tributaries, furnished a path for hundreds of boats carrying passengers as well as freight, while over artificial canals was carried a large proportion of the coal and similar coarse commodities moved.

The mule-drawn canal boat will illustrate the reason for the popularity of waterway transportation during the first half of the past century. A barge carrying upwards of a hundred tons could be pulled along through the water just about as fast as the same mules could pull two tons over a highway. Here we have a fundamental reason for the continued interest in inland transportation by water—the fact that under favorable natural conditions the waterway offers a remarkably cheap method of transport. Had the railroads not been developed as more flexible and quicker avenues of traffic, and freed from the physical limitations of the waterways, it is probable that the canal and the navigable river would continue today to limit and direct the movements of traffic.

Fortunately, however, we are no longer obliged to depend for transportation service on the course of natural and artificial waterways to such an extent as was necessary a half dozen decades ago. Thanks to modern mechanical developments, the railroad of today can cross mountains and bridge valleys, carrying goods swiftly in every direction. Yet in many instances transportation expediency was given precedence over strict utility. So, to a possibly too large extent, the possibilities of transporting freight more cheaply, if slower, over the splendid network of waterways bequeathed us by nature have been neglected.

Equipment Not Improved.

Examining into this situation more closely, it becomes evident that one of the outstanding reasons why waterway traffic had gradually died out until it had all but disappeared a few years ago, is the fact that, while the railroads were branching out in every direction and improving their mechanical equipment, while the auto truck was being perfected and placed on the highway, the equipment for transporting freight by water remained practically unimproved.

Even the horse-drawn trolley car has long since passed into oblivion, yet today a large portion of the soft coal supplied to the nation's capital is still hauled by mules a distance of 178 miles over a canal built under the direction of George Washington. On other waterways where mechanical propulsion is used, the boats show in general little improvement over those in service at the beginning of the Civil War, while some of them appear to even antedate that period. Certainly we would not be justified in expecting from the railroads the same efficient service which we now enjoy, with railway traction in the stage of development of a half century ago.

Yet this was, practically speaking, the situation with regard to waterway floating equipment which the Government was obliged to face in 1917, when it became necessary to harness the waterways for war-time service. To reverse the picture, it is only necessary to imagine a country with a fairly elaborate system of railroad tracks of which it was very much in need, but having available only a small number of locomotives and freight cars of a type long since discarded in other countries. When the demand for additional transportation facilities could no longer be ignored, there was only one procedure open for the Government—to build as necessary in the national defense the boats which private capital had failed to provide, in order that full advantage of transportation by water might be had.

Fortunately, as later developments indicated, the Railroad Administration, when it saw the necessity for building these boats, was not satisfied to hastily follow existing precedent in constructing vessels of designs identical with those remaining in service on inland waterways. It chose, rather, to achieve ing a single stroke all that has been neglected during the 50 or 60 years past, in order that types of equipment might be supplied which would place the waterways on an operating basis relatively as efficient as that of the railroads.

Boats Carefully Designed.

This construction program was not started until the summer of 1918. While at that time a year or more of war was still anticipated by even the most optimistic, we now know that it would scarcely have been possible to have built and placed in service even the cheapest and most hastily constructed boats, in time to have been of any real valus before the armistice. It is therefore fortunate that these boats, while of no strictly war-time service, were so carefuly designed and built as to be of very decided assistance in the advancement of transportation by water.

For service over the New York Barge Canal route between Buffalo and New York City, a fleet of 92 boats were designed and contracted for, consisting of 51 steel barges, 21 concrete barges and 20 combined towboats and cargo barges.

The new Barge Canal itself, while much superior to its predecessor, the Erie Canal, still has some serious limitations which restrict the extent of its value as an avenue of commerce, and which, in turn, restrict all through water movements between Buffalo and New York City.

The maximum dependable depth of the water through the canal is eight and a half feet—quite sufficient for normal waterway usage, yet excluding deep-sea vessels. A number of bridges along the route are but 15½ feet above the high-water line, thereby limiting freeboard and superstructure of canal craft. The most serious restriction, however, is the size of the locks, approximately 300x42 feet.

All of these dimensions had to be taken into account in designing a fleet of boats for this Buffalo-to-New York service. As a result, the unit decided upon as most effective was one 150x20 feet and drawing a maximum of nine and a half feet. This made possible the passage of a compart group of four boats through the canal without breaking the tow formation for lockage, but required the use of one of the barges for propulsion.

For the later purpose the principle of the barge-towboat, which had been very successfully used in Europe, was adopted. This made possible the entire elimination of tugs, except for supplementary emergency use, and permitted the utilization of every square foot of the locks at each lockage; in other words, so far as the size of the boats is concerned, enabling a Americanize Him, by Giving Him Citizenship, Close Up the Reservations and Force Him to Live With White People and in 10 Years the Problem Will Be Solved, Says Gen. Pratt—Denounces Those Who Encourage the Renaissance of Indian Art.

"LO, the poor Indian, doesn't half express it. Driven forcibly from his ancient home, corralled on a reservation, robbed of his rights and finally reduced to a state of practical peonage, he is deliberately kept in a state of savagery and denied the privileges of citizenship and the protection of the courts in the land which originally belonged to him."

This is what the white brother has done for the Indian, in the opinion of Brigadier-General Robert H. Pratt, who for 25 years was head of Carlisle School, and who, the Indians themselves say, knows more about them and their problems than any other paleface living. He has been in St. Louis attending the convention of the Society of American Indians, and during his visit talked to a Post-Dispatch writer about the wrongs of the Indians, and what he believes should be done about them.

It was a crime in the first place, he said, to segregate them on reservations, and it is a greater crime to keep them there, maintaining them in tribal ignorance and barbarism, encouraging them in their savage customs and traditions and denying them the rights and opportunities which we extend to every foreigner who comes to these shores.

Plan for Their Amalgamation.

"My solution of the problem is simply this," he said: "There are in this country about 3000 counties. There are 330,000 Indians. That is a little more than 10 to each county. I would distribute them throughout these counties, finding them homes and occupations. In 10 years the Indian problem would have disappeared.

"The Indian, unlike the negro and Japanese, is assimilable. There is no prejudice against him. He can marry a white woman and settle down in a white community, meeting white people on the basis of equality. And, indeed he should, for he is the real aristocrat of America—the blue-blood of his country.

"He is good material for citizenship and for industry—far better, in fact, than many of the European immigrants which we accept in such large numbers. There are now more than 1000 Indians living in various parts of the country, practicing medicine and law, teaching in schools and holding important positions in the business world. I might remark that there is one in the United States Senate.

The Public Schools the Key.

"All the Indian wants is as fair a chance as we give to the foreigner who comes from over the seas. The way to do this is to abolish that monstrous system which is named the Indian Bureau, give Indian youth a chance to enter the public schools and encourage them to leave the reservations and become a part of the general population.

"Did it ever occur to you," asked the venerable General, "that the Government discourages the Indian from doing the very thing which we are demanding of foreigners, namely—become Americanized? Not a day passes but that some public speaker or writer warns our immigrants to become Americanized and adopt our ideals. Yet the Government is ruthlessly preventing the Indian—the first American of all—from doing that very thing.

"Indians are encouraged to stay on reservations, to remain with their tribes, to hold on to their tribal customs and traditions."

Gen. Pratt's criticism of the Indian Bureau, that division of the Department of the Interior which governs the Indians, was unsparing and bitter.

"It is a cruel, senseless system," he said. "It has no interest except that of perpetuating itself, and maintaining jobs for its 7000 employes. Instead of educating the Indian, it encourages him to stick to his war paint and feathers. Instead of making doctors, teachers and business men, it makes blanket weavers, basket makers and bead workers."

Ethnological Hobbyists Scored.

He included the Bureau of Ethnology in this condenmation. "It has worked actively for 40 years," he said, "to prevent the escape of the Indians from tribal life to citizenship. It revels in war dances and ghost dances, in Peynote seances and all the other Indian peculiarities. It encourages these customs, because they are the meat on which ethnology (the science of races) lives."

And while on the subject the General added his opinion of those sentimental persons "who encourage the so-called 'renaissance of Indian art,' and thus would have the Indians evolve from nomadic game hunters to miserable basket weavers and makers of other curios, instead of becoming useful and happy citizens—and this simply to gratify their own artistic and scientific whims and fancies."

It is all very picturesque and pretty to see the Indian squaw working at her basket or blanket, crooning Indian songs, until one learns that the basket or blanket weaver is making $5 to $7 a month, and probably is hungry, Gen. Pratt said.

"Those very people who can grow most eloquent now about the wrongs done the red man in stealing his land and driving him out of his home, know the least about the present vicious system of victimizing him by keeping him in poverty and ignorance," he declared. "Our interest in the Indian is confined to the pretty schoolbook stories of Pocahontas and the like, and does not extend to the 330,000 human beings that our Government is wronging every day that it keeps them on reservations."

Indictment of Indian Bureau.

Contrary to the idea of some average citizens, an Indian may leave the reservation any time he gets ready. The Indian Bureau, however, according to Gen. Pratt, discourages this at every opportunity, advising young Indians to remain with their tribes.

The purpose of the bureau in doing this, he said, is simply to perpetuate its own existence, because if the Indian should go out and become a part of the general population, taking up occupations and business and becoming citizens, the need for the bureau, with its 7000 jobs, would disappear.

There are between 85 and 100 agencies, he said. The agents in charge are practically supreme. They can give orders and the Indians may obey. He told of a recent alleged instance in which two intelligent young Indians complained to the agent that they were being deprived of their water rights. The agent promptly locked them up, he said.

The agency system, he declared, offers numerous opportunities for graft and abuse, and these opportunities are not lost. The agents have charge of the issuance of Government rations to Indians who are incapable of supporting themselves. The rations which the Indians actually receive are almost always so meager as to keep them constantly hungry, he said.

The Indian Agents are Czars

He told of how Dr. Carlos Montezuma, an Indian who is a graduate of Illinois University and a practicing physician in Chicago, recently visited members of his tribe on a reservation to confer with them on improving their condition. Dr. Montezuma was arrested at the order of the agent.

"These agents are czars," he said, "with almost absolute power over thousands of helpless men, women and children. The system is irresponsible. The agents are constantly changing. For that matter, the Commissioner of Indian Affairs and the Secretary of the Interior change with every few administrations."

Gen. Pratt said that the Government treaties with the various tribes, providing for the maintenance and establishment of public schools, have been shamelessly violated, just as other Government promises to them have not been kept. The Government has not established the number of schools which it pledged itself to establish, and the ones in existence are, for the most part, of wretched quality, he said.

He exhibited a report which he once made on the situation, pointing out that the Government was spending about one-tenth of what it had promised to spend on schools. Four entire tribes—the Utes, Shoshones, Bannocks and Northern Arapahoes—with 1300 children of school age, had no school whatever at that time, and the Navajos, with 3000 children of school age, had an average school attendance of 10 children.

Large Incomes Bad for Them.

The Indians' land and water rights are constantly being encroached upon by adjacent white settlers, who, he said, give the excuse that the Indians won't work the land, so they will. Even now, he said, an effort is being made to induce the Mojave Apaches to move from their reservation on the Verdi River, in Arizona, to a poorer country in the Salt River Valley. Incidentally, Gen. Pratt remarked, a dam which the Government promised this tribe 12 years ago has not yet been built.

Of course, not all the Indians are poor. Some have large incomes from the sale of land and from oil discoveries. This, Gen. Pratt said, has

St. Louis-to-Brazil Air Service Not Visionary, Flying Officials Declare

Staff of Brig.-Gen. Mitchell Has Worked Out Problems in Aeronautics That Show Commercial Routes Can Be Operated Practically and Profitably.

By the Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.

"ST. LOUIS to Rio by air; regular sailings; faster, cheaper, safer than the rail-water route."

Sounds visionary? Yet that sort of advertisement, in the confident belief of Air Service officers who look upon aviation as something more than a mere appurtenance of the army, will be a stock feature of the newspapers of the future, attracting no more comment than do the present announcements of train schedules and the sailings of ocean vessels.

Visionary? Not half so visionary as the aspirations of the Wright brothers seemed to many people but a few years ago. Not so visionary as a prospectus of the steam engine or the electric telegraph, prophesying the development which has taken place, would doubtless have seemed to readers contemporary with the invention in its early stages.

Attached to the office of Brigadier-General William Mitchell, one of the high-ranking officers of the Air Service, is a sort of research department which busies itself with the solution of problems in aeronautics. Some of these are problems which have already arisen; others are problems of the future. Not merely military questions, but also suppositious projects for commercial utilization of the new science of flying, come up for discussion and decision. A wealth of information is being collected and stored away.

Forward-Looking Service.

The topics cover a wide range, for of all the branches of the army, the air service, in the very nature of the case, is the most forward-looking. The future of the cavalry, so to speak, is behind it, and the same is true in lesser degree of the infantry and artillery, but the realm of possibilities into which the air service can look is unbounded. The air service is straining at the leash. Eager to get ahead "on its own," the service is tied by army conservatism to the apron strings of the older branches. By the average old-line army man the air service is regarded as nothing more than a picturesque and occasionally useful adjunct of troops fighting on foot. It has value, he admits, in spying out the enemy's positions, in doing scout and advance picket duty, but he is unwilling that it should go farther and take a place co-ordinate with the older branches as a fighting arm.

Young and enthusiastic, the Air Service envisions not only a place for itself in the military scheme of things commensurate with its potential importance in the warfare of tomorrow, but also a tremendous development of aviation along commercial lines. There are men in the service who believe that a separate Federal department of the air should be created, similar in scope to the Air Ministry of Great Britain—a department that would centralize the direction of the nation's air activities, now carried on independently by the Army and the Navy, and at the same time stimulate commercial progress in flying. A bill providing for such a department was introduced at the last session of Congress by Senator Harry New of Indiana and met with some favor in the Senate Military Affairs Committee. It did not, however, get beyond the committee stage. The issue that it presents is a live one and will be revived.

To Educate Public.

The Air Service realizes that fulfillment of its dreams can come only through education of the public in the possibilities of aircraft as a means of transportation and a national defense. That is one of the reasons for the existence of the "research department." Just now the department is marshaling a set of figures on the cost of railway construction and operation, in order to show the comparative cheapness with which the passenger-carrying air lines of the future can be installed and maintained. Data have also been gathered to disprove the popular conception of flying as more dangerous than railroad travel. The department will tell you, for instance, of a European air route that has handled over 150,000 passengers with only one or two fatalities. The cross-channel service between England and France is said to have been proved equally safe. Achievements such as these, when commercial flying is still in its infancy, would seem to justify the promise of safety in the St. Louis-to-South America "ad" predicted for future issues of the Post-Dispatch.

From the commercial point of view, the most striking exhibit which the research department has prepared is a detailed statement showing what would be required for the organization of an American Aerial Transportation Company, with a capital stock of $100,000,000, "for the purpose of establishing between important centers of this country and foreign countries an aerial transportation service, using rigid dirigible airships of the latest types."

This particular company is purely hypothetical, but the scheme outlined for it gives an idea of what is coming. Down to the last detail of the number of gallons of oil that would be needed by the air line, the problem of putting the company's ships into operation and keeping them there—at a profit—has been worked out. The suppositious enterprise was handled by the Air Service merely as a problem—one of the many problems that the research workers have set for themselves. In this instance the solver is Capt. Laurence W. Miller, who went to Europe as an observer for the Air Service before the United States entered the war, remained there through the American participation and is now back at his desk in Washington.

For Suggested Routes.

A project has got a long way out of the purely visionary status when it can be reduced to paper with the abundance of practical details that Capt. Miller supplies in this memorandum for his $100,000,000 company.

Capt. Miller would establish four routes, as follows:

1. A daily service in both directions between New York and San Francisco, with a stop at Chicago.
2. A semiweekly service in both directions from New York to St. Louis; from St. Louis to New Orleans; from New Orleans to Mexico City; from Mexico City to Panama.
3. A weekly service in both directions from Panama to Rio; from Rio to Buenos Aires; from Buenos Aires to Valparaiso; from Valparaiso to Lima; from Lima to Quito; from Quito to Panama.
4. A semiweekly service from New Orleans to San Francisco.

For the first route, seven airships would be required; for the second, four airships; for the third, three airships, and for the fourth, two airships. To insure continuity of service there would be an additional four-airship fleet in the initial equipment, making a total of 20.

These 20 ships (rigid dirigible type), each with a capacity of 20 tons of freight and 200 passengers, and with an average cruising speed of 75 miles an hour, would cost $2,000,000 each, a total of $40,000,000.

Twelve hangars to hold two ships each, including gas plant, would cost $2,500,000 each, a total of $30,000,000.

Fields, quarters, etc., would entail a further initial outlay of about $12,000,000. There would then be left, out of the proposed $100,000,000 to be put into the project, $18,000,000 as working capital.

Estimate for Seven Ships.

With seven ships in the air carrying passengers and freight, the estimated revenue would be as follows:

1. Two hundred passengers at 3 1-3 cents a mile, average 2000 miles a day of 24 hours, $4,866,666.67 per ship, or a total for the seven ships of $34,066,666.69.
2. Forty thousand pounds of

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE.

Treatment of Disabled Soldiers.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

An extensive appeal is now being made for funds to feed the children of Central and Southeastern Europe (this doubtless includes Germany). Full-page advertisements are being inserted in many metropolitan newspapers. Twenty-three million dollars is the goal. Three and one-half million children are in need of food and clothing, the advertisements say.

There are people among us who say let us continue to show in a practical fashion that America is bearing its share of the world's burdens. It seems to me that there is a great need for relief for the sick and wounded soldiers of the World War, and in this connection may I not record an expression of a desire for further aid and relief to our disabled war veterans?

Senator Walsh of Massachusetts was quoted as having said in an Armistice day speech last week that the Government has been stingy with regard to treatment of the veterans, and that is no news to most of us.

Mr. Will Hays said during the campaign that the mothers of the country would decide on election day whether their sons were to engage in future wars, and when they decided that Nov. 2, I am sure they also voted for better and more generous care and treatment of disabled soldiers. Will the new administration meet this obligation that the country owes its disabled men? I hope so!

Coddling Criminals.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

There is another evident cause for the present carnival of crime besides the wholesale paroling and pardoning. It is that the penitentiaries are made too pleasant and comfortable.

The fact that so many of the culprits voluntarily confess to crimes that they have not been suspected of, shows that the pen has no terrors for them.

If some of the sentimental, well-meaning men and women who are always working for better prison conditions were held up, had noses broken, skulls fractured and stripped of outer coats, they would think the culprits should be punished severely.

Many years ago a deputation of ladies presented a petition to the Minister of Justice in Paris to abolish capital punishment. He smilingly said: "My dear ladies, when the murderers stop killing us we will stop killing them." The prison reformers should be told that when the robbers stop being rough with us we will stop being rough with them and they should be treated so rough that they would have a wholesome dread of the pen. The lash should be administered for robbery with violence, in addition to imprisonment with hard labor.

Home Buyers' Association.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In re "Home Buyers' Association," of which several articles were printed in your paper, I am of the opinion that "A Renter" had the right idea and firmly believe that a plan as described by him could be made a success, but the plan requires action now and not at some future time. Am willing with others to start the ball a-rolling.

NEWCOMER.

Attacks on Religious Liberty.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

The people of Michigan in the recent election defeated a proposed amendment to the Constitution of that State, the adoption of which would have compelled all children of school age to attend the public schools.

The result has been featured in some newspapers as a Catholic victory, but this narrow view does not present the real issue. It tends rather to confuse the public.

Although the decisive defeat of the vicious measure vindicated the parochial school, at which it was apparently aimed, it was not alone a Catholic victory, but a victory for all those that had aligned themselves in defense of the individual and religious liberty enjoyed by our people under the Constitution of the United States.

The fate of this proposed amendment did not hang on the Catholic vote in Michigan. The number of Catholics in that State, according to the latest census information, is a fraction over 20 per cent of the total population. The same ratio would be applicable to the number of voters in the recent election. The total vote cast, without a few scattering districts not yet enumerated, was 770,078. Out of these votes 281,106 were in favor of the amendment and 488,972 against it. Twenty per cent of the total votes cast would be 154,000. It follows, therefore, that if every Catholic in Michigan had refrained from voting, the measure would still have been defeated by a majority of over 50,000 votes.

As this movement perished in Michigan, so perish all similar attempts through State or Federal agencies, to abolish or abridge the constitutional rights and liberties of the people. In this we rest our hope, not on the attitude of any particular party or creed, but upon the resistance of all law-abiding, liberty-loving people, and whom, God willing, we may ever find in the majority.

EDWARD BROWN.

UNCLE SAM'S LEDGER.

The number of farms in Missouri, according to the 1920 census, is 263,124, which is 5.1 per cent less than that of 10 years ago. But before the pessimist begins to wring his hands his attention may be called to the increase in our farm values. In several Missouri counties farm values have more than doubled since 1910, and all of the counties for which figures have been completed show substantial increases in values, ranging from 28.3 per cent in Scotland to 113.3 per cent in Carter. The reduction in the number of farms, therefore, is probably explainable by the extraordinary activity of the last few years in farm investments and the consequent consolidation of farms into larger units.

Moreover, despite the drift from the country to the cities, as revealed in the census reports, and the actual population loss in some of our counties, Missouri, agriculturally, is advancing in efficiency. That is proved in the crop reports of the present year. The State's largest crop is corn, of which we produced this year 211,808,000 bushels. Both in quantity and quality we surpassed the 10-year average. The per-acre yield of 32 bushels exceeded the 10-year average by almost 25 per cent.

Broadly speaking, the productiveness of our farms is being increased in other lines as well as corn. Potatoes might be cited as another example of that fact, the total for this year being more than 9,000,000 bushels, and the per-acre yield of 82 bushels being 15 bushels greater than the 10-year average.

If we turn from Missouri to survey the country as a whole, the same evidence of agricultural progress is abundantly presented. The corn harvest this year reached the prodigious total of 3,199,000,000 bushels, or almost half a billion bushels greater than the average for the last five years. Hay and other feed crops were big—the whole result promising a growth in the livestock industry, with abundance of meats.

Some comprehensive figures recently compiled by Commerce and Finance of New York, and published in attractive pamphlet form, give a radiant picture of the United States, productively. Those figures show that we produce 24 per cent of the world's wheat, 60 per cent of the world's cotton, 75 per cent of the corn, 27 per cent of the cattle, 40 per cent of the hogs, 25 per cent of the dairy products. In iron, steel, gold, silver, coal, copper and oil we maintain similar predominance. And we manufacture 85 per cent of the world's automobiles.

What, then, is the matter with the United States? Clearly, the trouble is not to be found in our resources or our capacity to produce. The difficulty, obviously, is administrative. The United States has the goods. It has not developed an adequate system for getting the goods to market. The financial and commercial systems are jangled. Neither is perfected. Our troubles are mainly due to artificial hampers. With marketing facilities and genius comparable to our productive capacity, and with more harmonious co-operation of the forces of industry and commerce, we should today be enjoying an abounding prosperity.

The trouble with the United States today is to be found in Europe—in the economic prostration of our greatest customer. The Italian lire, the French franc, even English sterling, are all depreciated. Europe can buy cheaper in the Argentina now than in the United States. For this situation our statesmanship at Washington is largely responsible. From the first, the Post-Dispatch has supported the League of Nations, not solely because of the humanitarianism of the compact, but because of practical bread-and-butter considerations. For the people of the United States the reclamation of Europe, its economic restoration, is decidedly a business proposition. If we can lay aside destructive partisanship and bring plain common sense as well as idealism into the field of our foreign relations we shall swing into a top-stride prosperity, because fundamentally the United States is all right.

PASSING THE PRICE BUCK.

When profiteers pass the buck the public finds out a few things, even if it does not get its due. Passing the buck has been the great American pastime ever since the prices began to soar. As usually played, the buck is passed from the retailer to the wholesaler, from the wholesaler to the manufacturer and from the manufacturer to the supply men.

The high cost of lumber has been blamed for the high price of everything with lumber in it. Now the lumber worm, weary of being trodden upon, has turned and is telling the world just how little lumber enters into the construction of various things, the high cost of which has been ascribed to the high cost of lumber.

The fact is, according to the American Lumberman, that there is not much wood in a piece of furniture or a musical instrument, for instance, and however much there is, it is usually a relatively small part of the basis for cost of the complete article. That publication tells the story of a child's chair that stood not long ago in a Chicago show window. It was priced at $21. It contained about five feet of lumber, which would cost scarcely $1. Six years ago such a chair was priced at $3. There has been an advance of about 50 cents in the cost of the wood in it. But the price has advanced $18.

A mahogany dresser 62 inches long, with French plate mirror, was advertised for $75 six years ago. A similar article is now "marked down" to $295. And the wood in it is worth not much more than $20 at present prices.

St. Louis people are demanding cheaper musical instruments. The dealers reply that they cannot sell them cheaper because the manufacturers have not lowered the prices. The manufacturers say they cannot lower the prices because, for one thing, lumber is still high. But the American Lumberman says that the cost of the wood in a $60 violin is $1, a talking machine that sells for $200 may have $10 or $15 worth of walnut or mahogany in it, and the cost of the wood in a player piano that sells for $2300 is little more than $100.

All of which is interesting, but does not lower prices. What the consumer would like to see would be less passing of the buck and more adjustment of prices.

THE NEW TUBERCULOSIS DISCOVERY.

Pressure is now being applied to Germany to force the surrender of the many thousand cows to France and Belgium provided for in the peace conditions. The possible consequences in depriving Germany of a most important food product are giving cause for uneasiness to publicists without as well as within Germany.

But with a total lack of concern for consequences, the German army, when it captured Lille in 1914, followed its universal practice in other places and confiscated for German use most of the livestock in the city. Among the animals thus marked for confiscation were 10 calves from 8 to 10 months old on which two French scientists, Dr. Calmette and Dr. Guerin, had been experimenting with a new tuberculosis vaccine.

The experimentation had already given amazing results, and despite the harsh German interruption, was resumed after a short interval. It is now announced that after tests which, it seems, began as early as 1908 and have been almost continuous since, a vaccine has been devised which will check tuberculosis in cattle, and which, it is hoped, will point the way to preventing and curing the dread disease in mankind.

Bovine tuberculosis presents some differences from the disease that destroys so many of our fellow creatures. Certain great scientists have even denied that bovine tuberculosis is communicated by ordinary means to human beings. The conquest of the one, however, would undoubtedly prove a great advance toward the conquest of the other. So many remedies announced hopefully in the past have proved inefficacious that the public will continue skeptical.

But if the tests in progress at Lille in 1914 should result in the long-sought discovery, what a romance of war would be given to the world—what an example of incalculable good resulting from almost intolerable evils!

The period would not be long before a reliable remedy for tuberculosis would preserve more lives than the appalling total lost during the world struggle.

"THE BUSINESS AS USUAL" FORMULA.

Among many more elaborate analyses of the business situation, with suggestion of remedies, perhaps none is more worthy of attention than the simple one offered by a St. Louisan, President David May of the May Department Stores Co. He finds that a factor contributing largely to the lessening of activity is the policy of tens of thousands of merchants who are refusing to make purchases for next spring's season or who make them on a much reduced scale.

Such a policy is a logical accompaniment of a universally falling market. Merchants are reluctant about accumulating stocks at the prices of today, when those prices may be less a month from now or three months or six months. How this course, followed by great numbers, aggravates the very condition of depression from which these merchants themselves suffer is easy to be seen. An endless chain of influences is set in operation which very soon has effects only too apparent on the buying capacity of their own customers.

President May's company, which distributes $75,000,000 worth of merchandise a year, in four important American cities, has decided to make its purchases on a normal scale for next spring's needs. To the extent of this one large firm's operations, this tends to encourage production, wholesale dealings, transportation on a normal scale. Conditions governing finance and credit do not make it possible for all firms to pursue a like policy. But if all firms could pursue it and did pursue it, strong tendencies would be set at work for normal business activities in all staple lines and in all places. It's the old formula of "business as usual."

In a situation after the armistice differing only in degree from that of the present, the May firm adhered tenaciously to this formula, with results that brought unprecedented rewards within a few months. The presumption that it will be justified by an equally gratifying outcome in the present case is strong. Co-operation in the same policy on the part of other firms, at least to the extent of their ability, is suggested by self-interest. Make business as usual the rule.

TAXING HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE.

The Illinois constitutional convention is urged to authorize a tax exemption on personal property to the maximum amount of $1000. This sum would just about cover the value of the household furniture in a modest home, and many economists insist that at least that much of the furnishings of an average domestic establishment ought not to be taxed. Certainly in Missouri, where all exemptions are prohibited and where the tubs and few sticks of furniture of a washerwoman are legally subject to taxation, revenue raising from this source has not been any brilliant success. Cost of collection is often more than the amount of the revenue obtained. Evasion is frequent.

With $1000 exemption on personal property and rational methods of taxing personal property in excess of that sum, the incentives to perjury in tax returns would be greatly diminished.

DOWN THE MISSISSIPPI.

Aug. 22-27, 1915.

Embarkation.

Dull masses of dense green,
The forests range their sombre platforms.
Between them silently, like a spirit,
The river finds its own mysterious path.

Loosely the river sways out, backward, forward,
Always fretting the outer side;
Shunning the invisible focus of each crescent,
Seeking to spread into shining loops over fields:

Like an enormous serpent, dilating, uncoiling,
Displaying a broad scaly back of earth-smeared gold;
Swaying out sinuously between the dull motionless forests,
As molten metal might glide down the lip of a vase of dark bronze.

While this, the steamboat slowly drifting out upon it,
Seems now to be floating not only outwards but upwards—
In the flight of a petal detached and gradually moving skyward
Above the pink explosion of the calyx of the dawn.

Heat.

As if the sun had trodden down the sky,
Until no more it holds air for us, but only humid vapor,
The heat, pressing upon earth with irresistible languor,
Turns all the solid forest into half-liquid smudge.

The heavy clouds, like cargo-boats, strain slowly up 'gainst its current;
And the flickering of the heat haze is like the churning of ten thousand paddles
Against the heavy horizon, pale blue and utterly windless,
Whereon the sun hangs motionless, a brassy disk of flame.

Full Moon.

Flinging its arc of silver bubbles, quickly shifts the moon
From side to side of us as we go down its path;
I sit on the deck at midnight, and watch it slipping and sidling,
Under my tilted chair, like a thin film of spilt water.

It is weaving a river of light to take the place of this river—
A river where we shall drift all night, then come to rest in its shallows.
And then I shall wake from my drowsiness and look down from some dim tree-top
Over white lakes of cotton, like moon-fields on every side.

The Moon's Orchestra.

When the moon lights up
Its dull red camp-fire through the trees;
And floats out, like a white balloon,
Into the blue cup of the night, borne by a casual breeze;
The moon-orchestra then begins to stir:
Jiggle of fiddles commence their crazy dance in the darkness;
Crickets churr
Against the stark reiteration of the rusty flutes which frogs
Puff at from rotted logs
In the swamp.
And the moon begins her dance of frozen pomp
Over the lightly quivering floor of the flat and mournful river.
Her white feet slightly twist and swirl—
She is a mad girl
In an old unlit ball-room,
Whose walls, half-guessed-at through the gloom,
Are hung with the rusty crape of stark black cypresses,
Which show, through gaps and tatters, red stains half hidden away.

The Stevedores.

Frieze of warm bronze that glides with cat-like movements
Over the gang-plank poised and yet awaiting,
The sinewy thudding rhythms of forty shuffling feet
Falling like muffled drum-beats on the stillness:

Oh, roll the cotton down—
Roll, roll, the cotton down!
From the further side of Jordan,
Oh, roll the cotton down!

And the river waits,
The river listens,
Chuckling with little banjo-notes that break with a plop on the stillness.
And by the low dark shed that holds the heavy freights,
Two lonely cypress trees stand up and point with stiffened fingers
Far southward where a single chimney stands aloof in the sky.

Night Landing.

After the whistle's roar has bellowed and shuddered,
Shaking the sleeping town and the somnolent river,
The deep-toned floating of the pilot's bell
Suddenly warns the engines.

They pause like heart-beats that abruptly stop:
The shore glides to us, in a wide low curve.
And then—supreme revelation of the river—.
The tackle is loosed, the long gang-plank swings outwards;
And poised at the end of it, half naked beneath the search-light,
A blue-black negro with gleaming teeth waits for his chance to leap.

The Silence.

There is a silence which I carry about with me always—
A silence perpetual, for it is self-created;
A silence of heat, of water, of unchecked fruitfulness,
Through which each year the heavy harvests bloom, and burst, and fall.

Deep, matted green silence of my South,
Often, within the push and the scorn of great cities,
I have seen that mile-wide waste of water swaying out to you,
And on its current glimmering I am going to the sea.

There is a silence I have acheived—I have walked beyond its threshold.
I know it is without horizons, boundless, fathomless, perfect.
And some day maybe, far away,
I shall curl up in it at last and sleep an endless sleep.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

This column is designed to reproduce without bias the latest comment by the leading publicists, newspapers and periodicals on the questions of the day.

OUR TRADE WITH GERMANY.

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

AS we are still "at war" with Germany our trade with that country since the armistice has mostly been done through adjacent neutrals. This has apparently been necessary since neither country has consulates open in the other to legalize and register direct transfers. Nor is there in force between this country and Germany a commercial treaty of any kind to regulate the conditions of trade. Of course, we have been buying from and selling to Germany right along on such terms as individuals could agree upon among themselves, but in a very moderate way. The absence of direct trade has been much to our detriment and to the advantage of our late associates, who have enjoyed facilities not available to us and have sought to improve them to the uttermost. At last, however, a German ship has arrived in New York and will doubtless be cared for, loaded and dispatched somehow. It is significant of the poverty of Germany that the ship comes in ballast, presumably for a cargo of the grain long ago purchased by the German Government and awaiting shipment. Germany has little to sell to us, except potash, which we wish to buy and small means of paying us for what she would gladly buy of us. In fact, a large part of the foreign trade of Germany is virtual barter. The Germans need raw materials, for which they cannot pay. What happens to a great extent is that raw materials are supplied to be worked up, the seller retaining a lien on the manufactured product until sold and the account settled. There has been German legislation to facilitate such transactions. This anomalous situation should be ended somehow and formal direct business relations be re-established.

GERMANY'S ECONOMIC RECOVERY.

From the Berlin Post.

IF England opposes the territorial ambitions of France, it is equally true that she opposes the economic recovery of Germany, her future competitor. That is why she demands the destruction of the Diesel motors. They are the engines of the future, for stationary work as well as for railroads and navigation. They have been used efficiently in industry and in agriculture. Can the Entente give a legal reason for demanding the surrender of these motors? The peace treaty, article 189, says that engines remaining after the destruction of warships of all kinds can be used only for commercial and industrial purposes. France needs English goodwill for the realization of her continental policy, and to enforce her indemnity demands. By virtue of the adage, "Do ut des" ("You tickle me and I'll tickle you"), she makes concessions to England in other fields. While the German people are struggling to preserve their patrimony, an English firm offers in Germany six Diesel motors taken from German submarines. The fact speaks for itself. It refutes the assertion that the move is based on military consideration. No, it is German industry that is aimed at.

CONDITIONS IN ITALY.

From Avanti (Italian Socialist paper).

THE whole bourgeois press, including the so-called democratic papers, has openly launched on a campaign of propaganda in favor of a "mailed fist" government. Desire for reaction is growing in all the camps opposed to the proletariat. An obvious symptom of such reaction appears in the fact that on all sides bands of terrorists are being organized. Meanwhile the situation is getting worse because of the events that follow fast on each other's traces. In Sicily the peasants are proceeding to invade the lands in a more or less chaotic fashion, without any precise plan or any real appreciation of the problem. Our Sicilian comrades will have to struggle against difficulties as yet unimagined. The effort by the barons, who have taken the Mafia into their pay, to stop the movement must be frustrated by proletarian solidarity.

Four Weddings and Three Betrothals Announced During Season Among Members of Pi Beta Phi Sorority at Washington University—Hausman-Gardner Nuptials Solemnized Nov. 10.

A TIME honored custom of the Washington University chapter of the Pi Beta Phi sorority is that, upon the announcement of the engagement of one of its members, the fortunate young man shall send to the active chapter a five-pound box of candy and, while a superfluity of the combination of girls and bons bons is hard to imagine, the "Pi Phi's" at the university this year claim to be "fed up."

Seven betrothals have been made known during the Fall. They are Miss Mildred Hess to James Vernor Dunbar; Miss Mildred Brooks to Thomas Granville Rutledge; Miss Frances Duffett to Raymond Maritz; Miss Marian Gardner to Herbert Hausman, whose marriage took place Nov. 10; Miss Helen Stevens to Nicholas Frederick Gay, whose marriage took place Nov. 9; Miss Louise Breeding to David Hugh Latimer of Shaw, Miss., the marriage having taken place last Monday; and Miss Drue Clinton of Chicago.

The marriage of Miss Smalling, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Smalling of Belle Buckle, Tenn., and Mr. May was solemnized Oct. 30 in New York City, and the couple sailed Nov. 3 for the Bermuda Islands, where they are spending their honeymoon. They will reside in Chicago. The bride attended Washington University for four years, later taking her A. M. degree at Columbia University in New York. Mr. May is a graduate of the University of Illinois.

Miss Josephine Lawnin will make her bow to society at a bridge dance Tuesday evening, with which her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Louis D. Lawnin will entertain at their home, 5138 Washington boulevard. Cards have been sent out to about 125, and those who care to play bridge are invited for 8:30 o'clock, while those who care to dance are invited for 10:30 o'clock. Receiving with Mr. and Mrs. Lawnin and their debutante daughter will be Miss Louise Francis and Miss Charlotte Lawnin.

Mrs. George F. McNulty will entertain Thanksgiving evening with a dance at the Women's Club in honor of her niece, Miss Dorothy Wise.

Miss Mildred Candy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert Candy of 6165 Kingsbury boulevard entertained yesterday afternoon with a bridge party at which announcement was made of her engagement to Thomas Brittingham Jr. of Madison, Wis. The wedding will take place some time next year. Miss Candy was educated at Washington University and is a member of the Kappa Alpha Theta Sorority. Mr. Brittingham is a graduate of the University of Wisconsin.

Mr. and Mrs. William R. Compton of 18 Kingsbury place will entertain with a dance Dec. 28 at the St. Louis Country Club in compliment to their daughter, Miss Frances Compton, who is a student at Vassar College. Miss Compton will have several out-of-town girls visiting her during the holidays.

One of the interesting engagements announced last week was that of Miss Elizabeth Wade Williams, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Porter Williams of Charleston, S. C., to Foster Martin Hampton. Mr. Hampton has made his home in St. Louis for about a year, having come here from Fordyce, Ark. He is a member of the St. Louis Country Club and resides at 5601 Kingsbury court. He is a graduate of Yale and served as a Lieutenant in the Navy during the war. Miss Williams was educated at Springside, Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. The date of the wedding has not been set.

Mrs. George A. Bass, 4651 Lindell boulevard, will be hostess at a dance for the young school set on Dec. 29 in honor of her daughter, Miss Ruth Bass, who is a student at Mary Institute and her son, George Bass Jr.

Wednesday last was marked by two important weddings. Miss Stella Grone and Edwin Sanders were married at the College Church at 11:30 o'clock in the morning and were attended by a large bridal party. The ceremony was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Henry Grone, 3723 West Pine boulevard. After an extended honeymoon the couple will be at home at 729 Westgate avenue. St. Michael and All Angels Church was the scene in the evening of the marriage of Miss Helen Banister and Robert Harvey McRoberts. Mrs. Frank B. Bills was matron of hoonr, and the bridesmaids were Misses Marian Banister, Marie Louise McRoberts, Frances Hays, Katherine McNulty and Dorothea Davidson of Lafayette, Ind. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Norton and was followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward W. Banister, 5128 Westminster place. The couple will reside at 4953 McPherson avenue, and will be at home after Jan. 1.

Miss Ethel May Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Franklin Miller of 5720 Cates avenue, and Alfred M. Harris will be married Wednesday evening at the Pilgrim Congregational Church, the Rev. Samuel H. Woodrow officiating. A reception for the relatives and intimate friends will follow at the home of the bride's parents. Included in the bridal party will be Mrs. Hanson, sister of the bride; Misses Virginia Fowler and Ruth Wilson, C. Ray Miller, brother of the bride; Perry Hanson, Earl Jordan, Roland Fowler and Harold Jordan.

Mr. and Mrs. S. G. Wilson of 38 Washington terrace entertained Tuesday afternoon at the Bellerive Country Club with a tea dance in honor of their daughter, Miss Eula Wilson, and her guest, Miss Catherine Fuller, of New York and Spring Lake, N. J.

The marriage of Miss Marian Hutchins and Charles Spalding will take place Tuesday evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Hutchins, 5054 Raymond avenue. The bride-to-be was educated at Hosmer Hall and Washington University. Mr. Spalding is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George M. Spalding, 6127 Pershing avenue. He is an alumnus of St. Louis University, and served as a Lieutenant in the Air Service during the war.

The marriage of Miss Helen Weil of Chicago to Walter V. Wolff, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Wolff of 5406 Delmar boulevard, will take place Thanksgiving at the Blackstone Hotel in Chicago.

The annual meeting of the St. Louis Chapter, D. A. R., will be held Saturday, Nov. 27, at the Jefferson Memorial. Officers will be elected for the ensuing year.

Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Fayre of 4429 Pershing avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Helen Fayre, to B. Franklin Close of San Francisco, on Nov. 3, in Costa Rica. The bride is a graduate of Washington University. After a few months the couple will reside in San Francisco.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Smith of 3206 Holliday avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Jeannette Smith, to Roland Liesk. The date of the wedding has not been set.

The engagement of Miss Felice Swords, daughter of Mrs. William B. Swords of University City, to Arthur J. Freeman, was announced yesterday. The wedding will take place during the Christmas holidays.

Sydney Shoenberg, who has been visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. Shoenberg, of the Washington Hotel, departed last week for Pasadena, where he will join his family for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Watson of 3664 Washington boulevard have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Arline Watson, to Harry Wilson Lange. The wedding will take place Nov. 30.

The Literary Committee of the College Club will meet Nov. 23 at 3:30 o'clock at the Church of the Unity.

Mr. and Mrs. Ned Goldsmith of 5216 Delmar boulevard have returned from Oklahoma City, where they were the guests of Mr. Goldsmith's parents.

On Thanksgiving day Miss Mildred Leach, daughter of Mr. Robert H. Leach of 5805 Julian avenue, will

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Wood Townsend of 4367 Laclede avenue announce the engagement of their daughter Miss Sarah Townsend to Arthur S. Folk, formerly of St. Louis, now a resident of Charleston, Ill. The wedding will take place in June.

The League of Women Voters of St. Louis will hold a citizenship school under the auspices of the Civic and Legislative Committees of the Council of Jewish Women, at the Cabanne Branch Library, each Tuesday morning from 10 to 12 o'clock. The course has been revised to meet the present need for information concerning the responsibilities of women in the coming municipal election. All women interested are invited to oin the class. Details may be had by communicating with Mrs. Alexander Langsdorf of the Council of Jewish Women.

This week will witness several affairs planned to raise funds for the Father Kennedy campaign fund. Mrs. Arthur Hiemenz will entertain with a bridge party Tuesday afternoon at her residence in the Oxford Apartments. Mrs. Sidney Overall and Mrs. Henry Cushman, who are members of the Women's Committee, will assist the hostess.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. John P. Cabanne, who is also on the committee, will entertain with a bridge party at the Branscome Hotel. She will be assisted by Mmes. J. Shepard Smith, Nat Brown, Frank Tabler and Miss Sunie Smith.

Another affair planned to help the fund is a dance to be given at the Armory the evening of Dec. 4 by the Kennedy campaign club of the Thirty-fifth Division.

The League of Women Voters will give at tea at the Statler Hotel Friday at 2:30 o'clock, at which plans will be formulated for 'ts coming membership drive. The Lowest Prices on

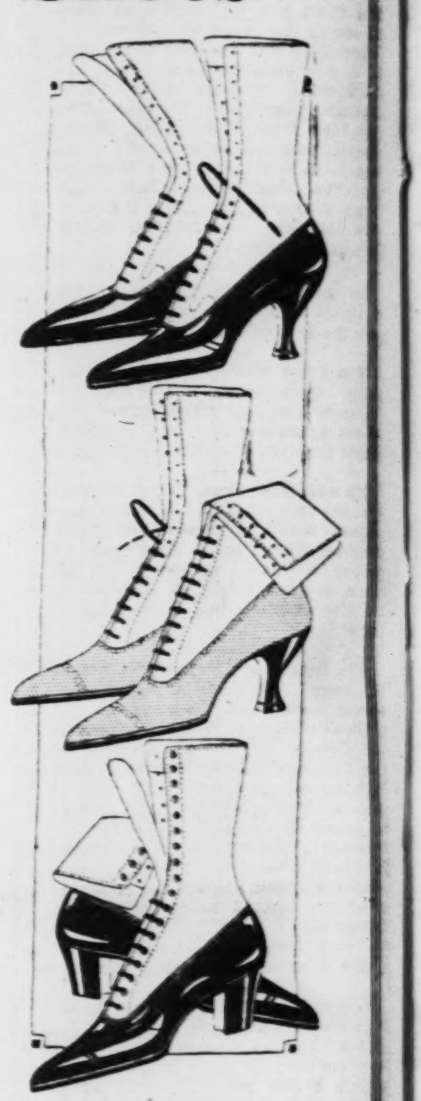
Women's Fine Shoes



SHOE prices are very much lower, and reduction sales quoting comparisons or discounts are absolutely meaningless; convey no information to the public.

We have made extreme price sacrifices on Shoes, and we have bought from manufacturers at concessions of 50% and more; and our customers are given the benefit of the prices created by these conditions.

We do not quote comparative prices, because we feel that the selling price of an article establishes its value.

The November Sale of Outer Apparel

THIS occasion has been termed "the Aristocrat of Sales," because of the exceptional quality of the merchandise involved. The same high standards maintained by the third floor sections throughout the year prevail during this occasion. The prices are exceptionally low.

NOT an effort has been spared to make this November Sale true to tradition, and to surpass all previous occasions in magnitude, in values and in results. We have received splendid co-operation from the foremost manufacturers, and we are able to offer extraordinary values.

The November Sale of Dresses

$55 $65 $85

LIKE a glimpse within a fashionable atelier during a style show is the showing of the Frocks in the November Sale.

Handsome cloth Dresses, tailored, beaded and embroidered; Dresses of satins, Moroccan crepe, Georgette Crepe, silk duvetyn and chiffon are these, appropriate for occasions from the most elaborate dinner to business or shopping.

Every group and every Frock is a revelation in smart new style details and beautiful materials.

(Third Floor.)

A Special Group of

Coats, Suits, Dresses

INVESTIGATION of the Coats, Suits and Dresses at this price takes you back to the much-talked-of "old-time values," where real quality and real tailoring are firm supporters of attractive styles. $35

(Third Floor.)

The November Sale of

Suits

$45 $65 $85

MOST of the high-grade Suits in our stock are included in these groups. In addition is a most attractive lot of sample Suits from a special purchase.

At $45—Up to the last second in style, with longer coats, narrower shoulders and close-fitting sleeves are these Suits. The newest fabrics and colorings are to be had.

At $65—A tendency to more elaborate design appears in these Suits of soft, fine materials, in hand embroidery braidings and trimmings of Australian opossum—and some Suits of a becoming elegance; these are very unusual at this price.

At $85—The choicest of the season's output. Elegance of fabric and originality of design are paramount characteristics. Duvetyn, veldyne, duvet de laine and vicuna are the materials.

Note—A special reduction has been taken on exclusive model and Hickson Suits for this selling event.

(Third Floor.)

The November Sale of

Fur Coats

At $175

WRAPS of near-seal, Australian seal and Bay seal (seal-dyed coney), plain or combined with other furs. Marmot Coats with raccoon collars also Coats of natural muskrat and nutria.

At $275

Handsome Dolmans of French seal (seal-dyed coney), plain or combined with Australian opossum; Black Caracul Wraps with Hudson seal (seal-dyed muskrat) collars and cuffs; Natural Raccoon Coat, finest grade Near-Seal Coats (seal-dyed coney), with fitch and Australian opossum collars.

At $375

Hudson Seal (seal-dyed muskrat), Natural Gray Squirrel, Mole, Leopard, Caracul and Japanese Sable Wrap, also Japanese Mink Coats.

(Third Floor.)

The November Sale of

Coats

$55 $75 $135

A VERITABLE sensation. That people who see and handle merchandise every day grow extremely enthusiastic over the Coats offered is definite assurance of their superlative characteristics. Rarely does the unpacking of new merchandise arouse such a hearty round of approval as did these Coats.

Soft pile fabrics and smooth silken weaves hugging closely and lightly, carry rich deep colors after a manner impossible to secure in commonplace materials.

Shaggy gray wolf fur, warm toned nutria, superb beaver, aristocratic moleskin and glistening seal make warm, becoming collars and great muff-like cuffs.

Snug setting and belted, gracefully draped and wrappy or a deep sleeved generous coat wrap as you will—they are all here.

Bolivia, evora, duvetyn, chamoistyne, velour de laine are the materials, and blues, greens, browns and black are the colorings.

(Third Floor.)

The November Sale of

Blouses

Special, $5.00

THEY are of Georgette crepe and satin combination, and where lace is used as a trimming the lace is real Filet. That in itself distinguishes these from the usual $5 Blouse. The styles are tie-on or regulation—and there are three-quarter or full length sleeves, whichever you like; round or square necks with long roll collars. All sizes 34 to 46. Some of the Blouses are embroidered. The colors are navy, brown, taupe, black, bisque, flesh color or white.

(Third Floor.)

Semi-Annual Sale of Trimmed Hats

Monday Only

FOUR hundred Trimmed Hats from our regular stock will be marked at one-half price for a great one-day sale. In the assortment are Hats from such well-known makers as Lichtenstein, Bruck Weiss, Bendel, Cupid. There are Hats for dress, street and tailored wear. ½ Price

(Third Floor.)

The November Sale—In the Downstairs Store

November Sale of Suits

For Women and Misses

$18.00 $28.00

TO buy a Suit at one of these prices is a remarkable opportunity.

We are offering a splendid collection of Suits, in a variety of styles. They are made of velour and silvertone in brown, reindeer, henna, navy and checks; others made of tricotine or serge come in navy and black.

Some of the Suits are fur trimmed; others have collars, belts and pockets of self material, and are trimmed with braid and embroidery. The majority are silk lined.

All sizes, for women and misses.

November Sale of Dresses

For Women and Misses

$15.00 $19.00 $29.00

THIS is an unusually fine lot of Dresses. The splendid quality of the materials, the diversity of styles, and the careful tailoring, bespeak prices much higher than those quoted.

There are Tricotine and Serge Dresses for street wear, Charmeuse, Satin, Crepe de Chine and Tricolette Dresses in navy, brown, Copenhagen, taupe and black. The sleeves are short or long, the lines straight or with tunics, and the necks finished with or without collars.

Regular and extra sizes are found.

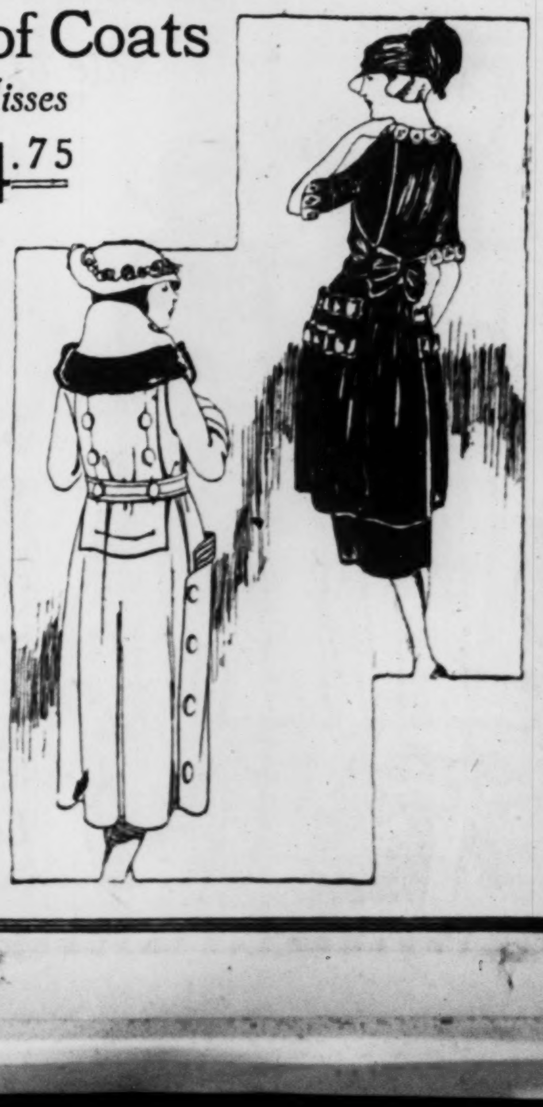
November Sale of Coats

For Women and Misses

$17.50 $24.75

COATS of many kinds are found in these groups. The new wrappy lines, as well as those more conservative, are represented. Each Coat is well tailored, and attractively trimmed. Many of them are samples. The list of materials includes velour, silvertone, polo and plush, in a wide color range—navy, reindeer, taupe, brown, Pekin, Copenhagen and black. Many of the Coats have fur collars and are silk lined.

All sizes for women and misses are represented, including those for stout figures.



Voile Blouses

$1.00

A number of very attractive models in new Fall styles. Well made. Extraordinary values. Sizes 36 to 52.

Social Events

Rachmaninoff, to be heard in St. Louis for the first time on Nov. 30 when the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society gives its initial concert this year. On that occasion the choral society will be assisted by the entire St. Louis Symphony Orchestra and a quartet of grand opera stars from New York as soloists. Tomorrow afternoon Mrs. Kriegshaber will discuss the new choral symphony and will give illustrative music from it on the piano.

An event for children will be the Christmas festival of the Junior Players, at the Artists' Guild Theater on the afternoon of Dec. 11 and 18. A production of "Snowdrop and the Seven Dwarfs" will be given under the direction of Miss Alice Martin, with costumes and scenery designed by Miss Marguerite Breen and Laurence Ewald. The old fairy tale has been dramatized for the Junior Players, and there will be five acts of the adventures of Snowdrop. Seven small girls, the youngest of whom is only 3 years old, will be the dwarfs, and the leading roles will be taken by little Anita Paul and "Bill" Ewald.

A double wedding in St. Charles on Thanksgiving day at St. Bartholomew's Catholic Church will be that of Miss Agnes Cavanagh, former assistant registrar at Lindenwood College, and Charles J. Zeisler; and Miss Queen Groos and Harry Miller. The Rev. Father John Foley will officiate. Both couples will reside in St. Charles.

Miss Irene Van Cloostere, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Van Cloostere of Clayton, and Frank W. Human, son of Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Human of Clayton, will be married Wednesday, Nov. 24, at 9 o'clock, at St. Joseph's Catholic Church by the Rev. Father Stepka.

Miss Van Cloostere will have Misses Anna D. Puttman and Elsie Human as her bridesmaids, and little Claudene Ruby will be flower girl. Other attendants will be Edward Human and Ed Eble.

AIR FLIGHT FROM ST. LOUIS TO RIO NOT AN IDLE DREAM

mail, express and fast freight, at 33 1-3 cents a pound per 1000 miles, 2000 miles a day, for 365 days, would yield $4,866,666.67 per ship, or a total for the seven of $34,066,666.69.

The total gross revenue from the two sources would be $68,133,333.38.

The expenses, based on keeping in full operation the 20 ships and the 12 stations, would be as follows:

Cost of operations at $144,000 per ship for personnel only, $2,880,000.

Cost of personnel for stations at $725,000 each, $8,700,000.

Hydrogen, estimated at $25 per running hour, $219,000 per ship, a total of $4,380,000.

Gasoline, 225 gallons an hour at 20 cents a gallon, $394,200 per ship, a total of $7,884,000.

Oil, 25 gallons an hour at 40 cents a gallon, $88,000 per ship, a total of $1,760,000.

General upkeep, estimated at 15 per cent of cost per ship per year, a total of $600,000.

Overhead administrative expenses, $1,000,000.

Interest at 6 per cent on $100,000,000, $6,000,000.

The foregoing items make a total expense of $33,204,000.

The crew of each ship would consist of captain, first officer, second officer, engineer officer, two spare pilots, two coxswains, eight riggers, 13 engineers, three radio operators and mechanics, and an attached party of 34, such as carpenters, clerks, etc., making a total of 66 officers and men. Salaries would range from $8000 a year for the captain to an average of $1800 for the men.

At each of the stations there would be a manager at $8000 a year, a landing officer at $7000, 195 skilled laborers at an average of $2000, and 200 unskilled laborers at an average of $1600.

Capt. Miller concludes that the net income of the enterprise would be, "at conservative estimate," $34,929,333, which is the difference between the gross revenue from only seven ships and the operating expenses of the full 20 ships of the fleet. Fifty per cent of the net income could be charged to profit and loss, 50 per cent of the remainder credited to reserve, and the balance would be $8,732,333, a dividend of almost 9 per cent upon the capital stock, in addition to the 6 per cent arranged for in the operating account.

Rather a rosy prospect, that, for the promoters of air lines.

"The Air Service," said Capt. Miller, "is interested in the development and successful operation of such an aerial transportation enterprise for a number of reasons. In time of war the company would be able to concentrate a fleet of 20 rigid dirigibles, each capable of carrying 40 tons of bombs or other material, or 400 troops, at a speed of 75 miles an hour for long distances, over land or water. The ships could be filled with helium gas, making them absolutely noninflammable, with a loss of only 8 per cent carrying capacity. The destruction possible by these aerial monsters when loaded with bombs and concentrated against a hostile fleet is beyond the power of description.

"Perhaps the greatest object lesson of the war was the use of air forces. From the small beginnings at the start of the war, there have been developed more and more aggressive types of aircraft, and more and more highly trained personnel—men who have had to become not only fliers but experts in the various branches into which the air forces are divided. It behooves our people to recognize the immense strides that aeronautics has taken, in order that the Government may be encouraged to place at the service of the country an adequate personnel, equipped with the most modern types of craft."

Supplementing the comparatively small peace-time army fliers, according to Capt. Miller, there should be built up, through encouragement of the use of the air for commercial purposes, a body of reserves who could be called upon in time of national emergency. He urged concentration of all air activities.

"The hugeness of the air proposition as a whole," he explained, "is such that unless there is a centralized direction and control, the people's money is apt to be dissipated in duplication of effort. The greatest efficiency can only come from centralized responsibility.

"Land forces operate in one dimension; sea forces operate in two dimensions; but the air forces operate in three dimensions. Those that can operate efficiently on both land and sea require a further education to operate successfully in the air.

"It is really remarkable, the scope of general knowledge required of fliers. Take a concrete example of the recent Alaskan expedition, commanded by Capt. St. Clair Street, who was able by eternal vigilance and an intimate knowledge of air and aircraft, to cover more than 9000 miles under all weather conditions and bring back all the craft with which the party set out. In a few weeks, Capt. Street was able from the air to get extensive knowledge on many subjects that it has taken officers on the ground several years to obtain. An old resident of Alaska, in talking with Capt. Street, was amazed at the detailed and extensive information that he possessed.

"Great as has been the improvement in aircraft since the early days of Wilbur Wright and Curtiss, much has yet to be worked out. The Government should be encouraged to maintain a body of men qualified through experience and through vision for the future to solve the problems as they arise, so that when the time comes when our nation is in danger from the air, we shall have superior forces to withstand the attack."

Many Young Men Qualified.

Capt. Miller called pointed attention to a significant omission in a recent statement by the War Department showing how many dollars had been recovered by salvage of war materials. Their report showed no salvage, he said, of the thousands of young men who qualified as fliers during the war.

"The universities, the colleges and the technical schools were invaded," he recalled, "and from them we got a hand-picked aggregation of well-night physically perfect young men of high mental qualifications. They were absolutely ideal for the work they intended to perform, a fact which was amply proved by those who had an opportunity to see service. We were able to get so many young men of the right caliber that at the time of the armistice about 20,000 officers had been selected and trained. They were skilled in the new service so vital to the national defense and recognized the debt they owed the country for the pains and expense to which it had been put to qualify them for a career congenial to their tastes.

"But Nov. 11, 1918, came and with it confusion and chaos. These men were hurried out of the service as fast as the demobilizing machinery could work to discharge them, and now we find ourselves with an air service of an authorized officer strength of 1540 and with only about 1000 officers.

From all of which it may be gathered that the air service, officered by men who see the peace-time sky dotted with the argosies of commerce and the war sky filled with leviathans dropping death on an invading enemy, is "rarin' " to go forward to new triumphs unhampered by the straitjacket that now confines it.

WHAT WE SHOULD REALLY DO FOR THE RED MAN

been a doubtful benefit. It encourages them to idleness, and gives them the means of gratifying their appetites without the necessity of work.

He is a strong advocate of the "outing system" for Indian boys and girls, and says it should be the first step in Americanizing the Indians. It consists of placing Indian boys and girls in the homes of selected white families during vacations, with the privilege of attending the regular public schools.

In hundreds of instances where this has been practiced, he said, the boys and girls have quickly adapted themselves to their new surroundings, learning the English language and conforming to the customs and ideas of white people. Many of these "outing" products now are in business and the professions, making good, he said. In the majority of cases, he suggested, such "outing" pupils should be placed on farms.

Says Carlisle Graduates Are Libelled.

He mentioned the familiar Sunday supplement story exploited by some newspapers of the Carlisle graduate who, upon leaving school, returns to the tribe, resumes his blanket and moccasins and relapses into tribal semi-barbarism.

"The fact is," he said, "that most of the Carlisle graduates are now out in the world, living as happy and useful citizens. It is true that some have gone back to the tribal life. That is natural, and is the logical result of the system pursued by the Indian Bureau.

"When the young brave returned from Carlisle with his new ideas and his civilian clothing, what happened? Why, the very thing you would expect. The old chiefs gave him one long, disapproving stare, and told him to go way back and sit down. And he hid his derby hat behind him and went away back and sat down, just as would happen if a young white man came back to his folks and tried to get them to give up all their old notions and adopt his new ones.

"That illustrates the need of getting the Indians out among the whites. That will bring the quick disintegration of the tribes, and the absorption of the Indians by the general population."

He said the adaptability of the Indians to new conditions was shown during the war, when 17,000 Indians were in the service. It was he, he said, who prevailed upon the War Department to abandon the plan to form Indian regiments, and induced the department, instead, to distribute Indian soldiers among the white regiments. As a result, he said, the Indians won their proportionate share of commissions, and were made noncommissioned officers in the same proportion.

As an instance of the ousting of Indians from their lands, he said the Government treaties with the Cherokees, Chickasaws, Creeks, Choctaws and Seminoles provided that they should occupy their lands "as long as grass grows and water runs." Several years ago, however, the railroads wanted to go through, white men desired to buy part of the lands, and the Indians were persuaded to sell them.

The Indian Bureau, he said, had used numerous expedients to induce the Indians to remain on the reservations, such as establishing irrigation systems, giving them blooded breeding cattle and making large loans. "All these things," he said, "are simply bribes to them to remain in savagery, foregoing the privileges of American civilization, to which they, perhaps more than any other people, are entitled."

Address on Recreation.

Rodowe Abeken, supervisor of playgrounds and recreation, will address the Women's Advertising Club of St. Louis on "Public Recreation in St. Louis" tomorrow at its meeting in the Daniel Boone room of the Hotel Statler. This is the second program of educational talks planned for two meetings out of every month.

Your Figure

Has Charm Only As You Are Fully Developed

Beauty of Form

Can be cultivated just the same as flowers are made to blossom with proper care. Woman, by nature refined and delicate, craves the natural beauty of her sex. How wonderful to be a perfect woman!

Bust Pads and Ruffles

Never look natural or feel right. They are really harmful and retard development. You should add to your physical beauty by enlarging your figure to its natural size. This is easy to accomplish with the NATIONAL, a new scientific appliance that brings delightful results.

FREE BEAUTY BOOK

If you wish a beautiful womanly figure, write for a copy of the treatise by Dr. C. S. Carr, formerly published by the Physical Culture Magazine, entitled: "The Bust—How it May Be Developed." Of this method Dr. Carr states: "Indeed, it will bring about a development quite astonishing."

This valuable information, explaining the causes of non-development, together with photographic proof showing as much as five inches enlargement by this method, will be sent FREE to every woman who writes quickly. Those desiring book sent sealed, enclose 4c postage.

Why Our Prices Are Lower Than Others

Anticipating possible reductions in the prices of Furs last Summer when contracts for Fall merchandise were made, we bought very sparingly; consequently we are now in excellent position to take advantage of the tremendous price concessions in the wholesale market and give to our customers the benefit in price savings which the present fur market affords.

We believe that there is now an expectant public waiting for substantially lower prices, and we therefore have inaugurated a sale in which the selling prices are so much below the regular quotations that no one really interested in fine Furs can ignore this money-saving opportunity.

most efficient utilization of this canal as it stands today.

These self-propelled barges, in addition to the space required for machinery and fuel and for the accommodation of 10 seamen, are capable of carrying about three-sevenths of the amount of cargo carried in the non-propelled barges, or about 300 tons, while the steel and concrete barges are each rated at 500 tons capacity. A normal tow can therefore, even when lightly loaded, carry a total of 2000 tons from Buffalo to New York with a total crew of 16 men, or about five times the capacity of the normally loaded freight train. The average time consumed between Lake Erie and New York harbor is slightly in excess of 10 days, as quick or quicker than ordinary freight can be handled during periods of congestion on the railroads, although even this running time should be cut down considerably. The actual cost of moving a 2000-ton tow through the canal is much less, however, than the similar cost of moving the same cargo by rail; so much so that operations can be profitably maintained at tariffs 20 per cent below similar rail tariffs. This does not take into consideration the cost of maintenance of way, although with operations properly standardized and most efficiently conducted there is no doubt but that reasonable tolls could still be paid from operating revenues and a substantial profit shown.

These power barges are equipped with oil-burning engines of the most modern type, and develop sufficient power to move eight to ten fully loaded cargo barges at a speed of four or five miles per hour. Every detail about their construction is the most modern which marine architects have been able to design, and it is believed that they will serve as a model for the construction of all future power units for this service.

Reference has been made to the construction of 21 concrete cargo barges. It was believed at the outset that the 20 power units should most properly be co-ordinated with 72 cargo barges in order that the maximum service might be had of the former boats. Two reasons led to the construction of part of this complement of cargo barges of concrete; approximately 130 tons of steel was required for each 500-ton steel barge, while the most stringent embargo was in force on steel production, and the process of steel fabrication of vessels during the war emergency required considerable time. From both points of view concrete construction seemed to offer interesting possibilities. Practically all of the materials required to build concrete barges were immediately available, and the speed with which this type of boat could be poured offered quick relief from existing traffic congestion. It was therefore decided to experiment with the construction of 21 of these barges of concrete.

Value of Concrete Barges.

Later experience with these concrete barges has shown that they require but a fraction of the steel needed for all-steel barges, and that under favorable circumstances they can be put in the water within four to five weeks. Further than this, however, they are of but limited value from an operating point of view. While the maintenance costs of those in use on the New York canal are lower than the maintenance costs of steel barges, this advantage is more than offset by a greater susceptibility to damage from collision. These barges moreover have an excessive drawing depth even when light—two feet more than steel barges. They are unwieldy to handle, navigate badly and have a tendency for yawning toward the shore which at times endangers whole tow formations. On the whole, the experience of the Government with concrete barges has indicated that under normal conditions this type of construction is not superior to steel.

All of this fleet of 92 vessels built for Eastern waterways have been delivered with the exception of one steam barge, which is now about ready for acceptance tests. They are not all, however, in use on the New York Barge Canal, several units having later been diverted to the newly inaugurated intra-coastal service between Baltimore and Norfolk and Newbern, N. C.

These boats, while in many respects almost ideal for service on the New York canals, are still stanch enough for duty on Long Island Sound and, in fact, along the entire Eastern coastal waterways, so that it is not improbable that they will later form the nucleus for an extensive fleet which will operate all the way from Massachusetts to South Carolina.

Warrior River Requirements.

The exacting requirements for navigation on the Mississippi and Warrior Rivers presented a much more serious problem for the designers of the Government's wartime waterway fleet than did the Eastern water routes.

For the Mississippi River between St. Louis and New Orleans the Government contracted for six new power boats and for 40 steel cargo barges, giving an aggregate cargo capacity of 80,000 tons.

The new fleet for the Warrior River proper, between Cordova and Birmingport and Mobile, consists of three steel towboats and 20 wooden barges, capable of moving in all 10,000 tons of cargo. This equipment will be supplemented by four steel self-propelled barges capable of transporting coal between Mobile and Violet, La., under their own power.

These towboats for the Mississippi and Warrior Rivers present the most distinct innovation compared with previous types of Western river boats. In these new units the historic stern-wheel has been eliminated entirely, whereupon the old riverman has thrown up his hands and shaken his head at such a foolish waste of the Government's money.

Boats Must Have Try-Out.

Whether these boats will prove entirely successful is something which cannot be predicted with certainty

A Home-Made Gray Hair Remedy

You can prepare a simple mixture at home that will gradually darken gray hair, and make it soft and glossy. To a half-pint of water add 1 ounce of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ ounce of glycerine.

These ingredients can be bought at any drug store at little cost, or the druggist will put it up for you. Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. This will make a gray-haired person look many years younger. It is easy to use, does not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

until they have all been delivered and given a thorough tryout on the river. If they do prove practicable I believe the immediate revival of river traffic is assured, since no railroad can carry freight in competition with the efficiency which their designers claim for them.

In any event, these boats represent a sincere effort to improve the Mississippi power equipment. That the day of the old Mississippi packet has definitely passed will be admitted by all. Scientific tests conducted a few years ago demonstrated conclusively that it actually cost three times as much in fuel to move a ton of freight with the old style packet as it did to move a ton of freight over a modern railroad. Taking into consideration the much longer haul necessitated by the meanderings of the Mississippi and Warrior rivers, it obviously requires decided improvements in old-time power boats to put the river on an economic par with modern railroads.

I am not certain that these new boats will meet these requirements in every respect. But we do know that modern traffic conditions demand different types of craft from those which have navigated the river in the past, so that if these new towboats do no more than demonstrate what the most desirable designs of the future should be, they will serve an important purpose.

Tunnel Type Screw.

These boats are equipped with what is known as the "tunnel type screw." By tunnel is meant a recess or longitudinal cavity in the under part of the hull, so designed that the propeller describes a circle, the bottom of which is level with the bottom line of the boat's hull.

Previous experiments with this type of propeller indicated that the rudder did not respond the tow quickly enough to enable the convoy to round bends or to back and perform the flank movements with the ease necessary for safely ascending or descending the Mississippi—in other words, it did not offer the same degree or navigating relibility as did the stern wheel.

In order to overcome this defect, these new towboats have been built with twin propellers, each lined up with independent engines so that one screw may be running forward while the other is reversing. Faith in the success of these boats, however, is pinned more particularly on their improved rudder control. One large area rudder is placed in back of each propeller and provided with an ingenious method of control from the pilot house which enables either rudder to be placed at any desired angle. It is believed that the wide range of control thus afforded will give these boats as good if not better steering qualities than those of the stern-wheeler, but having the added advantage of a more efficient application of propelling power.

A recent trial trip of the barge-steamer "Birmingham," held at St. Louis, appeared to fully vindicate

K. OF C. CHORAL CLUB OPENS SEASON AT ODEON WEDNESDAY

Mme. Monica Graham Stults Will Be Soloist, and William Theodore Diebels Will Direct.

The Knights of Columbus Choral Club will open its current season with a concert Wednesday night at the Odeon. Mme. Monica Graham Stults, soprano, of Chicago, will be soloist, and William Theodore Diebels will direct.

The chief choral number will be Lester's cantata, 'Ballad of the Golden Sun," dealing with an episode of the conquest of Peru under Pizarro. Other ensemble numbers will be "The Trumpeter," Dix; "Banks of Allan Water," C. E. Horn; "To Celia," an old English folksong; and "Macushla."

Mme. Stults promises one aria, "Pleurex, mes yeux," from Massenet's "Le Cid," and two groups of songs in French and English.

this theory. The boat made a speed of 11 miles per hour easily enough, made a complete circle to the right and immediately afterwards a complete circle to the left, within a very few minutes, without loss of axis and with loss of less than twice her own length in the channel drift.

It is to be regretted that numerous delays arising out of the circumstances out of which these contracts were let, have prevented the placing of any of these power boats in service even at this late date. One of the self-propelled barges is about ready to be placed in the Warrior coal trade, although the remaining three of this type will not be available for some months. It will probably be early spring before all the Mississippi and Warrior towboats will be in operation, and even then considerable time will be required in schooling crews in running them most efficiently.

Without doubt disappointments are to be encountered after all of these waterway craft are placed in service. The contact of practical usage with theoretical design is bound to disclose defects not previously apparent. Actual operation may even indicate the necessity for discarding some of these wartime developments. Nevertheless, it is apparent that these boats represent a very decided advance in the practice of river-craft construction, indeed, possibly the most distinct improvement since the application of steam to sailing vessels. It is certain that waterway transportation could never have survived to any material extent with the types of freight-carrying equipment in vogue before the war. These newer designs should by no means be considered the last word in efficient equipment—they represent too great an innovation in theory for that; but they are in many respects more serviceable and more efficient than previous waterway craft. If, in addition, they serve as a basis for future experimentation and improvement, thereby assisting in the development of types of boats which can eventually make cheaper water transportation profitable for both shipper and operator, their cost will be but trivial compared with their value to trade and commerce.

IRONICS

by Holworthy Hall..

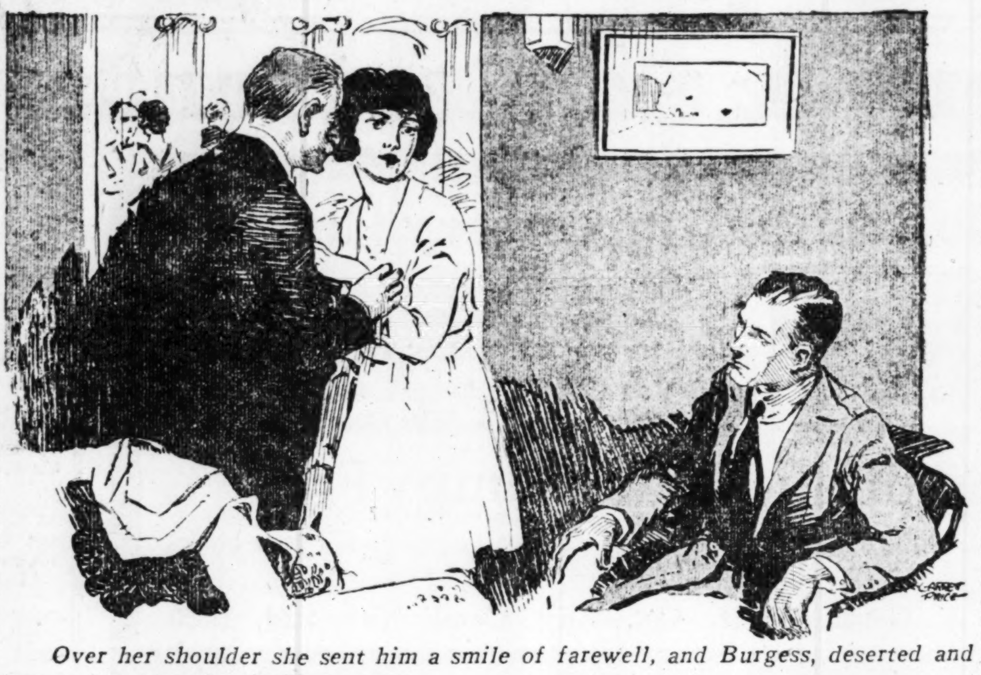
WHEN Burgess was 24 he inherited his father's business, and when he was 29 he turned it over to his creditors, lock, stock and barrel, and went wearily down to Pinehurst for the tonic of winter golf. Each winter for the last five years he had promised himself this needed respite; but it was only now, after his career had definitely been ruined; that he felt able to afford the luxury.

The irony of the situation didn't escape him. For the last five years he had paid himself a living salary, but the business had permitted no vacations, so that out of sheer necessity he had glued his soul to the surface of an office desk. He had done without diversion, without companionship, without mental or physical refreshment. The failure of his prospects had released the calendar, but it had also lopped off his income. His assets amounted to perhaps a thousand dollars, plus his wardrobe, but the liabilities had ceased to gibber at him in the night; and with the books so balanced he felt rich enough to afford whatever he wanted.

What he wanted was Pinehurst. He wanted to live at ease, like a gentleman, up to the very danger line of his resources; he wanted to play golf and wash his brain clear of the commercial grime which had settled upon it; he wanted to lose all active memory of the surging impetus which had first made a machine out of him, and then stopped barely short of wrecking the machine. And, finally, he wanted a return of youth—youth unhampered and undistressed and careless of the immaterial future. For all this fine variety of mercies, as compensation for half a decade of battling against the impossible, he was willing to pay out the uttermost cent he owned; and he knew in his heart that he was making a good investment.

It was a consolation to him, as he dressed for dinner on the first evening, to realize that his wardrobe was in good condition. Otherwise the period of his holiday would inevitably have been less. Translating the current prices of clothes and haberdashery into terms of hotel bills, he perceived that a new golf suit, for example, would have cost him an entire precious week out of the sum total. A new dinner coat, in the mode, would have nibbled away another fortnight. Even a few ties, or a pair of shoes, or a fashionable waistcoat, would have meant the sacrifice of at least a day. He smiled at the mirror and gave congratulations to his image there; his wardrobe was limited, but it was quite sufficient, and in detail it was faultless.



Over her shoulder she sent him a smile of farewell, and Burgess, deserted and annoyed, managed a feeble response.

He dined alone and was still too tired and too distracted by misfortune to wish for company, but later, when he smoked his cigarette in the lobby, he began to be somewhat conscious of his isolation. So far he had made no acquaintances and met none, and this was not in accordance with his visionings. To be sure, there had already been a chance or two to enter into conversation with older men, but Burgess had specialized for five solid years in the society of the elder generation, and he wasn't drawn towards it now. This was to be his long-delayed and long-sufficing interlude of youth. And young people were all about him, and directly across the room there was a girl worth looking at.

As he viewed her he was stirred by the realization that no matter how ancient he felt, he was really 29. The mere sight of her carried him back towards normal, because she was the very apotheosis of the state of mind he wanted to regain. She was the living spirit of the youth he had lost; she was outwardly charming, and she had the sweetest manner in the world.

He told himself, judicially, that life must have treated her with consistent kindliness, for she was palpably endowed with all that youth requires to make it radiant. Even more—she had intelligence, as well. Glancing at her occasionally, he checked off other attributes. Humor, poise, kindness, sympathy—all these he detected at long range, merely from her swift-changing expressions. He decided, with that sober impulsiveness which springs so often from a tired will, that he shouldn't be contented in Pinehurst until he met her.

This circumstance was nearer to him than he supposed, for it happened that the last expression of hers he had noted—the flash of sympathy—had to do with himself. She had just applied to him the adjective "distinguished," and added that she had rarely seen a man whose loneliness was so apparent. And her companion looked across at Burgess, stared hard, wrinkled his brows, suddenly gave an exclamation, said, "Pardon me a second!" and was on the way.

Burgess saw him coming, recognized the purpose, if not the man, and rose. He was 6 feet tall and straight as a pine tree.

"Look here, aren't you Ned Burgess?"

"Right. I ought to recognize you—your face is mighty familiar, but"——

"Southwick. I played opposite you at New Haven eight years ago last fall."

Burgess' grip, which had been merely formal, became conclusive.

"Of course! Southwick, I certainly am glad to see you."

"Well, I'm mighty glad to see you. There was a time when I wouldn't have been, though." Southwick laughed good-naturedly. "What you did to me that day put me in the hospital for a week and kicked me out of the captaincy next season. Still, if you've got to be smeared, why, it feels a little better to have it done by somebody on the All-American. Gosh, how I loathed you! . . . Down for the rest of the season, are you? How's your game?"

"Rotten. No, I'm down for just a few weeks. Do you stay on through?"

"I live here all winter. . . . Say, do you know any of these people? No? Well, don't hug the wall, then; come on over and be introduced." He took Burgess cordially by the arm. "I don't mind telling you that you've got all the flappers worried silly."

"Worried? How so?"

"For fear that you aren't going to stay."

It was a revelation to Burgess that he could find such pleasure in the blatant flattery. He told himself twice during his brief pilgrimage across the lobby that he was a fool to go out of his class. He had nothing in common with young people, including those of his own age, and he was sure to bore them and spoil his illusions. Nevertheless he was aware of a curious sense of exhilaration as he brought up before the girl who had attracted his attention.

In an instant he saw that he had cleverly appraised her. She was all that he had pictured her, and something more; she came perilously close to his ideal. He knew, as she raised her eyes, that she had lived largely behind them—that she didn't allow the world to share as many of her thoughts and emotions as the world fancied it did. Her whole attitude was friendly, ingenuous, and yet the least bit reticent; Burgess liked it. He liked the molding of her features and the independent tilt of her chin. He liked the velvet of her gown—burgundy was his guess for color. He liked everything about her.

Southwick was presenting him. "Miss Robinson, here's the man I've envied more than anybody else I can think of. His name's Burgess. He's sat on my neck on every square inch of Yale field."

Miss Robinson laughed, and so did Burgess; it was a good beginning.

"I'm envying him, in turn, for the privilege of living here all winter."

"Oh, don't do that," she said. "You'll destroy all the value of my lectures."

Southwick made a gesture of mock dismay. "Help!" he said. "S O S. Some other subject. Talk about the weather, Burgess. Ask her for a dance. Anything but lectures! I've got a weak mind, and I can't stand it!"

Burgess was showing the slightly forced smile of uncomprehension. "Mr. Southwick doesn't seem to appreciate his blessings, does he?"

"That's all right," said Southwick, "but I do hate to be improved. She knows it as well as I do, and still she keeps right on trying to improve me. I've got a lovely disposition, and all that sort of rot, but if she thinks she's going to improve me against my worst instincts, why, she's wrong. I defy her to." He nodded confidentially to Burgess. "She wants me to go and be a useful citizen and all that democratic bunk." He looked down at the girl and shuddered effectively. "Look here, I don't believe Burgess is any more of a useful ctizen than I am. You improve him a minute. I promised to play pool with Newcomb." Miss Robinson laughed again. "If you can play with Mr. Newcomb, you've improved in one direction, anyway."

Southwick waved his hand in deprecation. "Mere figure of speech. Technically, I play with him; literally, I sit and hold a cue while he plays pool in my presence. It's easy to watch, and I don't have to get up very often. . . . All the waltzes, though, Helen!"

Burgess turned to her and felt his assurance slipping. He was as much out of practice in small talk as he was in golf. "He's a joyous soul, isn't he? What on earth have you had to lecture him about?"

She evidently took him for an old friend of Southwick's and answered with corresponding frankness.

"He told you himself. I'm trying to reform him."

"Reform doesn't go with this climate," said Burgess. "So personally I'm ag'in it—I came down purposely to backslide."

She gave him a quick nod of appreciation. "That's exactly what I've been saying to him. I'm trying to persuade him to go north and get into some sort of business."

"I can imagine what a task it might be. Pinehurst is rather chronic. I feel it myself."

"Yes, but for a young man who's never done anything in his life but be supported—oh, we're the best friends imaginable, but I want him to go and make himself important."

"I suppose he's pretty important here, isn't he?"

"That's just the trouble. All he does is to shoot and ride and play golf and pool, and he does them all so badly. I don't believe I'd be half so insistent if he'd only be a shark at something. Anything. But he isn't. He's awfully popular, and he's a dear, but—please don't envy him." Her intonation betrayed a maternal interest in Southwick which should properly have made that gentleman very thoughtful.

"Then I won't," said Burgess, without any great conviction.

From the far end of the corridor music was drifting out to them, and already a slow exodus had begun from the lobby. Burgess was suddenly

"Ironics"

Is another of the stories in the series of short fiction by the most popular authors of today.

THREE short stories are being printed each week in the Post-Dispatch, one starting on Sunday and being continued on Monday and Tuesday. Another starts on Wednesday and is continued through Thursday and Friday. On Saturdays a complete and thrilling detective story by J. STORER CLOUSTON is published.

The story that will follow "Ironics" is "Girl—Girl—Girl," by Booth Tarkington. It will begin in the Post-Dispatch next Wednesday.

Among the writers represented in this great series are George Barr McCutcheon, Ellis Parker Butler, Holman F. Day, Richard Washburn Child, Mary Raymond Shipman Andrews, George A. Chamberlain, E. Phillips Oppenheim, John Fleming Wilson, Fanny Heaslip Lee, Frederick Orrin Bartlett, Henry C. Rowland, Lowell Otus Reese, Leonard Merrick, Elizabeth Jordan, Holworthy Hall, George Weston, Bruno Lessing, Maude Radford Warren, Eleanor Hallowell Abbott, Vingie E. Roe, Arthur Train, Dana Gatlin, Lucian Carey, Mary Synon, Jeanette Lee, Bertha Ruck, Will Payne, Zona Gale, Edna Ferber, John Taintor Foote, Booth Tarkington, Ring Lardner and many others.

By HOLWORTHY HALL.

confronted with an undesirable choice of action. He could remain where he was or he could ask Miss Robinson to dance. He hadn't danced for at least two seasons, and he wanted her to like him. He feared that if he proved awkward she wouldn't be so nice to him afterwards. On the other hand, if he didn't ask her, someone else was certain to supply the deficiency, and that would leave him quite as isolated as ever.

Nor could he, in self-respect, explain to her that he hadn't been dancing lately. It is the lowest form of alibi, lower even than the alibi of tight shoes, or a sprained ankle—low, indeed, that on rare occasions when it spells truth it is predestined never to be believed.

He delayed too long. Over her shoulder, as she went off with a more aggressive cavalier, she sent him a smile of farewell, and Burgess, deserted and annoyed, managed a feeble response. He attempted to cajole himself with the reflection that he had discussed only one subject with her and found it not particularly interesting and that she might, in the end, prove to be actually a lemon, but in his secret soul he knew that this was a libel upon Miss Robinson and a sour-grape sort of philosophy for himself, and he dropped the pose with commendable promptness.

Nothing on earth, however, could have dragged him into the ballroom to display his loneliness by sitting aloof and watching those more fortunate than himself. He realized also that there was no possibility of sitting out a dance with Miss Robinson and that, after all, it would have been foolhardy to run the risk of alienating her by barking her insteps. He would practice first on someone less adorable. Tonight had brought him the introduction, and that would have to do for the present.

He read the New York newspapers, endeavoring to shut his ears to the music, and enjoyed deep gloom until 10:45, when sleep became a welcome idea. His room was in the annex; and to reach it he had to pass through the little ballroom. Temporarily he found the passage blocked because the last dance was in full progress. It was a waltz, and Southwick was the cheerful partner of Miss Robinson. As Burgess saw them his jaw dropped, and after one prolonged stare of amazement and chagrin he laughed audibly, so that bystanders were curious.

Southwick, who had monopolized all waltzes, and taken them, unrebuked, was one of the poorest dancers Burgess had ever seen in his life. And Burgess, out of excess modesty, had wasted the evening with yesterday's newspapers.

"Why, I could give him lessons!" snapped Burgess, banging his door behind him.

• • • • •

On the following day he discovered, to his complete relief, that as sponsors Miss Robinson and Southwick left nothing to chance. From isolation he took one step and achieved prominence and he was actually modest enough to believe that it was due primarily to the sponsors. But although he met a score of people whom he liked immensely, yet Southwick and Miss Robinson held their places unchallenged, in the first rank. He counted the day unsatisfactory unless he had divided the major portion of it between them; and, to his ever-increasing happiness, there were few such days, and those by accident.

When he was in company with Southwick he sometimes wondered what his new friend—or his friend's friend—would think about him if they knew his history and his present status. Southwick had once remarked, in the cardroom, that the capital represented at the half-dozen card tables would average a million dollars.

"One of 'em must have two million, then," Burgess had said, "to even up for me."

Southwick had laughed amusedly. "That's all right. What do you think I am—an income tax collector?" And Burgess had felt uncomfortable—almost as though he were here under false pretenses. Southwick was the best comrade in a lifetime, but Southwick assumed that everyone else was equally a plutocrat with himself. When Burgess used the word "afford," Southwick openly hooted at him and told him to stop joking. And Burgess now had possibly $600 subject to check. That was his measure of Pinehurst and of the life that meant so much to him and so little to Southwick. After Pinehurst, a job somewhere. Somewhere? No—anywhere. Whatever he could get. He wondered if South-

By HOLWORTHY HALL.

wick's easy familiarity would grow a trifle rigid if Southwick knew.

As to Miss Robinson, he had no similar suspicion, and that was rather extraordinary, because Miss Robinson was considerably more expensive than any other person he could remember. Even his man's perception told him she had oceans of clothes and that they must have cost prodigiously. He had seen her buy at the jeweler's a gold mesh bag for a birthday gift, and she hadn't even inquired the price, except as an afterthought. The price was $450, and Miss Robinson's eyelashes hadn't moved the fraction of an inch. The amount would have brought another month of paradise for Burgess, and yet he wasn't afraid of what Miss Robinson would think about him if she knew his penury.

He was so little afraid that once he almost told her. This was when he had come to the halfway mark of his vacation and she was fully established as his local confidante. The words were on his tongue, but at the last instant he withheld them and substituted a comparative statement. He confessed merely that he was "poor." She was very sweet about it and ready with philosophy, but, as he called afterwards, poverty is only comparative anyway. She probably thought he was worth about a hundred thousand dollars.

Regardless of his poverty, although this was never out of his mind, he fell in love with her, and when he was first aware of it he sat motionless, shocked, protesting desperately to himself that it was not his fault. From a sensible standpoint it was a situation which would have been unthinkable even when his income was at its zenith today it was beyond reason. He tried to blame himself for his weakness, but in spite of his sincerity, he could assume no shadow of guilt. The ambition was hopeless, but it was also involuntary.

The worst of it was that she favored him. He was reluctant to credit his senses, but secretly he had to admit that he trusted the barometer of his intelligence. He didn't pretend to estimate the depth of her interest, but he hoped—and in the next instant feared—that it was parallel to his own.

It occurred to him that the safest course would be for him to quit Pinehurst, while there was yet time; but his soul revolted at the conception. He wondered if he were purely selfish to stay. He was storing up health and energy for the future, but he wondered how far he should offset this against potential tragedy. And when it finally came down to basic truth, he didn't want to go away from Helen. He would rather be near her and suffer than go North and suffer there. The main proposition was, apparently, to cause both of them as little sorrow and as little regret as he could.

TO BE CONTINUED TOMORROW AND CONCLUDED TUESDAY.

Olive and Locust From Ninth to Tenth

Starting Monday—As Result of a Tremendous Purchase

Sale of 500 Wardrobe Trunks

Made by One of the Best Manufacturers in America

at 1/2 Price

Every Trunk Measures Up to the Vandervoort Standard of Quality

We do not know of a sale of Wardrobe Trunks to equal this event ever having been attempted in St. Louis or any other city

The purchase was made from one of the largest makers of high-grade Wardrobe Trunks in the entire country. It is an opportunity that affords almost unlimited assortment.

And such Trunks! You will fairly marvel at the beauty, the convenience, the strength of them. Truly traveling will be a far greater pleasure with such Wardrobe Trunks in which to carry along your personal effects.

Think what an opportunity this presents! Why, it would be, to say the least, decidedly unwise to let this opportunity pass by, even if you know you will not need the Trunk until your trip next Summer.

And for those who want to present someone with a Wardrobe Trunk for Christmas, or to supply their own needs for Winter travel, this event is unrivaled.

This is going to be the greatest Wardrobe Trunk sale ever heard of in this part of the country. We will have the salespeople to care for any number that may come. A great space surrounding the Fourth Floor Luggage Shop, taking over much regularly occupied by other shops, will make ample room to show all styles, and there will be our great reserve stock from which to draw as fast as Trunks are sold.

Come down early. Come prepared to buy the best Trunk value you ever saw. The store opens at 9. All elevators lead to the Luggage Shop—Fourth Floor.

PUT CREAM IN NOSE AND STOP CATARRH

Tells How to Open Clogged Nostrils and End Head-Colds.

You feel fine in a few minutes. Your cold in head or catarrh will be gone. Your clogged nostrils will open. The air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more dullness, headache; no hawking, snuffling, mucous discharges or dryness; no struggling for breath at night.

Tell your druggist you want a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream in your nostrils, let it penetrate through every air passage of the head; soothe and heal the swollen, inflamed mucous membrane, and relief comes instantly.

It is just what every cold and catarrh sufferer needs. Don't stay stuffed-up and miserable.

INVENTORY OF BELL ESTATE SHOWS $183,882 PERSONALTY

Much Stock Held in Banks and Corporations Listed Above Par.

An inventory of the estate of James W. Bell, veteran St. Louis banker, filed yesterday in the Probate Court, shows persolalty valued at $183,882.97, of which $175,938 is in banks and other St. Louis corporations figured at the par value.

Many of these, however, have a greater market price than par. The inventory shows that Bell possessed 210 shares of the stock of the Mercantile Trust Co., of which he was a director, which were quoted yesterday at $340 a share. He possessed, also, 200 shares of the National Bank of Commerce, for which the last market bid was $128½; 25 shares of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., $275 asked yesterday; 171 shares of the Missouri Portland Cement Co., selling around $75, and 816 shares of the Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co., selling around $78, and 12 shares of the St. Louis Trust Co. He possessed Liberty Bonds and War Savings Stamps valued at $3,089.20.

No real estate is shown in his inventory, though his will bequeathed his home at 5045 Westminster place to his daughter, Grace Major Bell, who lived with him. The remainder of the estate was bequeathed in about equal shares to Grace Major Bell, and two other daughters, Mrs. Marian Bell Johnson of Memphis, and Mrs. Mildred Bell O'Gorman of New York City, and in trust for a grandson, James Bell Bergs, a son of a deceased daughter.

How to Buy a Xmas Piano

WITHOUT FEELING THE COST

Regardless of what your Christmas plans may be you can include a WURLITZER KINGSTON player-piano if you'll take advantage of our club plan

The Kingston
PLAYER-PIANO DE LUXE

A Piano for every home. Beautiful in tone, rich in case design, extraordinary in value.

Our own Piano, made in our own factory and sold only in our stores. Nobody dictates its price to us. Only one profit to be made. No wonder every purchaser is delighted with it.

Terms of purchase are exceptionally easy. Combined with our club plan you hardly feel the payments.

Pay $1 the First Week

Then pay a little more each week from then until Dec. 20.

We deliver the Piano a few days before Xmas with plenty of Christmas music. What a surprise you can make this. No one need know you are doing it. The small payments from now until Xmas will hardly be noticed. This is a chance to give the family a real suprise.

This is the first time a plan has been worked out where a Piano could be bought at Christmas time without a large outlay of cash.

No need to scrimp and cut down other plans.

The Wurlitzer Club makes it possible to include a Piano with your Christmas gifts.

THE PLAN WORKS TWO WAYS

PROGRESSIVE

$1.00 when you join is your first week's payment.

Then add a little more to each weekly payment up until December 20th.

REGRESSIVE

Pay last payment first and reduce payments weekly until you pay $1.00 the last week.

FULL EXHIBIT OF STATE'S RESOURCES PLANNED BY C. OF C.

"Hall of Resources," Already Open in Chamber Building, Showing a Variety of Products.

DISPLAY SPACE FOR ALL OF 114 COUNTIES

Collection for "Show Place," Too, From Surrounding States and Trade Territory.

The Chamber of Commerce "Hall of Resources," which is ultimately planned to include a complete array of agricultural, mineral and manufactured products from every city, town and county in Missouri, as well as surrounding states, was opened last week in the large assembly hall on the eighth floor of the Chamber of Commerce Building, Broadway and Locust street.

The collection, when complete, will contain in addition photographs of civic development, urban as well as rural, farm scenes, facsimiles of "show places" about the State and soil specimens from all parts of Missouri. There will be on file literature describing the advantages to be found in the various communities.

Plans for the establishment of such an exhibit have been in contemplation by the Chamber of Commerce officials for almost a year. It is realized that the assembling of such data will take months and the expenditure of a large amount of money. However, it is pointed out that when complete the "Hall of Resources" will be an advertising and educational asset to the city and State. A similar exhibit, chamber officials say, was begun in Los Angeles 25 years ago, and since that time has been sent on trips across the continent several times.

Inasmuch as St. Louis is also a great and growing convention center, it is felt that the number of visitors and delegates who will be enabled to receive a first-hand, comprehensive view of Missouri's resources will justify the permanent maintenance of such a collection.

More Exhibits Wanted.

A call has been issued by Carl J. Baer, general manager of the Production Bureau of the Chamber of Commerce, who, with E. N. Farris, assistant manager, is in charge of the upbuilding of the exhibit, for specimens, examples and sample products along mineral, agricultural and manufactured lines.

The exhibit of products from St. Louis and vicinity is nearing completion, and no additional specimens are desired from local manufacturers. It is desired, however, to add to the number of exhibits from points through the State. Farm pictures, photographs of livestock and examples of mineral and water-power resources especially are desired.

Space has been reserved for each of the 114 counties of the State, and the work of installing the exhibits is proceeding. The first exhibits to arrive were from Cape Girardeau, Scott, New Madrid, Pemiscot, Dunklin, Stoddard, Butler and Mississippi Counties in Southeast Missouri. The exhibits were installed by John T. Stinson, executive secretary of the Southeast Missouri Agricultural Bureau.

Collections of products will also be made from all sections served by St. Louis. This will include Southern Illinois, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma and Iowa. All will be advantageously displayed in glass cabinets along the walls of the Chamber of Commerce assembly hall. The exhibits will be open to the public without charge from 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. daily. No charge is made for the exhibits from the various counties.

Some of the products now on display include rice, fireclay from Gasconade County, broomcorn, barley, clover, various wheats, oats, alfalfa, timothy hay, corn and cotton. Views of the Keokuk Dam are featured as are views of prize livestock from Calloway County.

The object is to afford the counties of Missouri and Southern Illinois an opportunity to display their natural resources of soil, mine and forest. The Chamber of Commerce convention hall is capable of seating 900 persons. It is desired to have every county in the territory send an exhibit. Large photographs of agricultural scenes and of fine livestock are especially wanted. Also facsimilies or small manufactured products from points over the State outside of St. Louis. An effort is to be made to trace the evolution of manufacturing.

40 DEGREES MINIMUM STREET CAR TEMPERATURE ON COLD DAYS

Junior C. of C. Committee to Hear Complaints of Failure to Comply With Regulation.

The Civic Committee of the Junior Chamber of Commerce is prepared to receive complaints concerning low temperatures in the United Railways streets cars during winter months.

Letters being sent out state that car crews have been instructed to maintain a temperature of at least 40 degrees and that the movement to seek out offending crews is in cooperation with executives of the railway.

The Civic Committee states that in the last three months it has adjusted more than 100 complaints concerning garbage disposal and sanitation and that approaching cold weather is allaying any bad conditions in that regard.

Are the Extraordinary Values Being Offered in Every Department of This Gigantic Store

The true greatness of this institution was never more strikingly demonstrated than at the present time, when the public is demanding lower prices.

What more eloquent tribute to the experience and resources accumulated during the fifty-nine years of our merchandising history, than the quickness with which we anticipated and met the demand for lower furniture prices. What more convincing proof of our pre-eminence than the enormity and extent of the reductions prevailing on our dining-room, bedroom and living-room furniture.

What more forcible demonstration of public confidence than the ready response of the public as evidenced by the buying activity of the last few weeks.

Come next week and see for yourself the unprecedented opportunities for substantial savings. We list and describe just a few of the many choice offerings.

"California Syrup of Figs"

Delicious Laxative for Your Child's Liver and Bowels

Hurry mother! A teaspoonful of "California" Syrup of Figs today may prevent a sick child tomorrow. If your child is constipated, bilious, feverish, fretful, has cold, colic or if stomach is sour, tongue coated, breath bad, remember a good "physic-laxative" is often all that is necessary.

Children love the "fruity" taste of genuine "California" Syrup of Figs which has directions for babies and children printed on bottle. Say "California" or you may get an imitation.

'RED' LITERATURE SEIZED IN RAID; LITHUANIAN HELD

Pamphlets Found in Joe Baldus' Room, Exhorted Proletariat to Move Against U. S. Government.

Joe Baldus, 27, a Lithuanian, is held by Federal authorities on a charge of violation of the espionage act based on confiscation in his room in the rear of 1228 South Eighteenth street of printed matter exhorting the proletariat to revolution against the Government of the United States. A soft drink saloon conducted by Baldus at 901 Market street, was raided at the same time.

Baldus has resided in the United States for seven years, but has not made declaration of his intention to become a citizen.

His arrest was an incident of a national search by the Department of Justice for the source of radical reading matter issued in the name of the "Central Executive Committee of the Communist party in America." The investigation in St. Louis had been in progress for 30 days.

Pamphlet Quoted.

The character of the printed matter may be gleaned from one quotation from it: "There is only one way to achieve the proletarian revolution, and that is by the mass action of the armed workers in open insurrection and civil war against the capitalistic Government — its army, navy, police, etc."

Baldus was arriving home Friday at the time the operatives reached the house in which he occupies a single room. They inquired of Baldus, "Where does Joe Baldus live?" and Baldus led them to the rooms above his own. Persons there told the operatives that Baldus resided downstairs. Reaching his room, the operatives indicated a place for Baldus to be seated. He crossed to the opposite side of the room and seated himself on an organ stool, leaning back against the organ. A search of the room disclosed nothing until Baldus was compelled to leave the organ stool. In the organ were found six pamphlet labeled "Proletarian Revolution or Wage Slavery," and 1000 copies of another labeled "Three Years of Soviet Russia."

The operatives also found a blank subscription list, headed: "Help the local St. Louis Communist party of America to defend and free the comrades who are held in confinement without warrant." There were no pledges on any of the blanks.

The arrest came about in this fashion: A Department of Justice operative, dressed as a laborer, inquired of Baldus in his saloon if he spoke Russian and opened a conversation with him in that language. As the operative was about to depart Baldus said: "You want to read these," and handed him a copy of each of the pamphlets later found in his room.

Baldus denied after his arrest that he had given the pamphlets to the operative, said that he could not read, did not understand what the confiscated matter was and did not know its source.

The operatives declare that the pamphlets found in Baldus' rooms are identical in content with some found in the homes of Herrin, Ill., of two men who were convicted before Judge Landis in Chicago last week on charges of violation of the espionage act.

Dr. Mangold Will Address Women.

Dr. George B. Mangold will give an address tomorrow at 2:30 p. m. on "The Relation of the Church to Social Service Problems," at St. Peter's Episcopal Church, Lindell and Spring avenues, before St. Peter's Branch of the Women's Auxiliary, in the parish house. Addresses are also to be made by Rev. Carl Reed Taylor and Rev. E. S. White. Tea will be served.

STOCK MARKET IS SHAPING SELF TO VIEWS OF FUTURE

Considering the Indications of the Probable Length and Severity of Commercial Readjustment.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted financial weekly review, says:

"During the past week, the stock market has repeatedly given proof that the attention was wholly engrossed in the progress of commercial liquidation, with the attendant results of that process. No more convincing indication of this could be found than the failure of the market to rally from its swift downward movement when rates for demand loans reacted from the 9 and 10 per cent level witnessed earlier in the month and touched 6 per cent, which would ordinarily have been regarded as a comfortable working rate. Wall Street probably recognized that the extensive clearing out of speculative accounts was one large factor in making the easier money market possible, and that any resumption of speculation for the rise would probably cause a prompt advance in rates. But beyond that, it recognized that the question of security values was no longer bound up with the cost of day-to-day bank accommodation. But with the broader question of the future of industrial companies and of the general financial machine, not only in its failure to react favorably to the reduction in call loans, but in its response to various other incidents of the week the market bore witness to its new conception of the industrial outlook. A group of prominent financiers met on Tuesday and incidentally expressed their views about the financial future, which were, briefly, that conditions were essentially sound, that there were no 'sore spots' and that liquidation of goods and securities would probably continue.

"The market broke violently. The American International Corporation suspended its quarterly dividend and the stock market, seizing the implications as to the immediate future of our foreign trade enterprises fell into great demoralization. The chairman of the Steel Corporation put out a statement relative to the policy of his company with regard to prices, which appeared quite as easily susceptible to favorable as to unfavorable interpretation; but without hesitation the latter meaning was attached to it, and steel stocks collapsed to the extent or 4 to 10 points.

Market Shaping Its Course.

"The obvious meaning of all this is that the stock market for the time being is shaping its course in accordance with indications of the probable length and severity of the commercial reaction which is now in progress. A time will come when the market will begin to discount the ending of industrial depression as clearly as it is now expressing a conviction that the readjustment must be drastic. As this time, however, it is ideal to speculate as to when this event will be foreshadowed.

"The financial community was entirely correct in attaching great weight to bankers' views that the process of liquidation in commodities still has considerable lengths to go. The banks, as guardians of men engaged in business, have an unrivaled opportunity to know, not only the present financial condition of their clients, but the precise amount of merchandise that remains to be sold before loans can be liquidated and the probable length of time it will require to get superfluous stocks to market. Stories of goods being put on sale by banks, ranging from Chinese eggs to ready-to-wear clothing, have, according to the point of view, a grim or humorous element of truth. At the same time, the insistance by those bankers who have publicly or privately expressed their opinions that the situation is essentially 'sound' that there are no 'sore spots' merit a greater amount of attention than they have received.

Statement of Bankers.

"While it may be questioned whether the reference to 'soreness' was happily chosen the meaning seems to be clear enough. It is that no large commercial difficulties are in sight with which the banks, by proper and skillful use of their resources are unable to deal. This is ground for reassurance. Insofar as the banks have been able to enforce a scaling down of loans, or the deposit of additional collateral, commensurate with the great fall in prices, they are obviously in stronger position than they were before. Credits granted on cotton at 15 cents a pound are sounder than those formerly granted at 35 cents. Prudent and wise banking at the present time has consisted in granting liberal credit where credit was required, but only against a collateral which could be sold at a price sufficient to liquidate the loan.

"There is some ground for assurance in the fact that banks applying to the Federal Reserve for aid must submit to close scrutiny of paper offered for discount. This is a function of the central banking system which was unfortunately lacking in other periods of financial difficulty, and which we are likely to appreciate more fully later on. If the member banks are able to pass muster, the resources of the Federal Reserve itself stands pledged to meet every legitimate necessity. After all, this is the corner stone of the confidence which has been expressed in a week of discouraging events."

Federal Reserve Bank.

U. S. Steamship Adv Slightly and General Asph Rallies After Drop.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—As compared with the previous sessions of the week the market today displayed a steady tone. There was some covering of shorts by traders who have been bearish, and this was especially in the issues which had been under attack heretofore. Commission houses had some selling orders in the early dealings, but the manner in which the offerings were taken apparently halted the selling from this quarter. Insiders showed signs of taking an interest in the market and had supporting orders in a number of issues for a time.

Business was smaller than usual with the exception of one or two issues, like U. S. Steamship, which met a better demand and rose a fraction.

General Asphalt started fractionally lower but rallied quite sharply. United Candy was in better demand and advanced slightly. United Profit Sharing, however, showed an easier tone. General Motors rights were active with little change in price. Acme Coal was again under pressure but showed a little resistance.

Ryan Consolidated was one of the leaders in the oil list, advancing a fraction on covering of shorts and some outside demand. Simms Petroleum also was higher, and there was a good demand for International Petroleum, which held firm. Carib Syndicate was quiet and steady. Elk Basin, Producers & Refiners and Merritt Oil held within the previous closing range. Salt Creek Producing was reactionary on a small [illegible]. There weer liberal offerings of Cities Service Bankers' Shares, which declined fractionally. Standard Oils were quiet and unchanged.

Mining stocks were dull, and price changes small and irregular.

Bonds were active and fairly steady.

Wall Street News and Comment
—SPECIAL DAILY—

a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—While the all Street decline, taking this ek's low prices as compared with se of a year ago, has gone as or approximately as far as those panic periods of the past, banking inion is unanimous that the credit uation is fundamentally sound and t business is simply passing rough a necessary adjustment hich will come out all right in the d and leave clear skies ahead.

In other words, there is to be no nic in the old-time meaning where oductive enterprise is paralyzed and here credit is refused indiscrimi- tely because of a fear that every- ing is going to pieces. What has ppened is that the slump in com- dity prices once started has gone more violently than expected and at the suddenness of the losses tailed no less than their magni- de has for the time being taken nerve of a part of the business mmunity. Whatever hope there d been early in the week that the ain was passing was shattered en the country read on Wednes- y morning that a group of the kers had met in conference and allowed it to become known that ile they see nothing vitally wrong h the situation, liquidation of se- ities and commodities would have go on. It was granted that stocks re for the most part as much be- their true value as 12 months they had been above it. Still selling movement must continue h no limit set upon either its ex- t or its duration.

Whatever view might be taken as this public expression of bankers' gment at such a time the results re most unfortunate. A new re of selling swept over the stock, grain and cotton markets, more nse by far than anything previ- ly witnessed. Buying orders which been placed with a view to tak- shares on a scale down and which ght have been effective in stopping the decline, were many of them thdrawn. A state of complete de- ralization was thereby produced, ndition where stocks were thrown re regardless of what they were rth or what they would bring, re- cting either the wild desire to se with heavy losses to get out, else the necessity of people hard essed for cash to realize upon their ldings.

The present disorders differ radi- lly from those of 1907, which was financial panic pure and simple th its effect upon the trade move- nt not much apparent until later. the latter part of October and the st half of November, 1907, money the Stock Exchange commanded orbitant rates and there were es when it was virtually unob- inable. Hoarding of gold went on, companied by runs on numerous nks with the result that gold went a premium. The present situation absolutely different from this and further proof were needed it was ven this week when call money tes dropped sharply at the very ight of the selling movement in share list and when lenders of e funds began to press their of- ings in increasing volume upon rrowers without encountering much a demand. With all signs point- g to a much easier money market the near future, stocks did not spond and the plain inference from is was that high money has not en the factor which many critics ve claimed for it in the great de- ine of the last few weeks.

Where the crisis of 13 years ago s essentially a money and banking isis, the principal trouble now is mmercial. A radical deflection in ices to get from a war to a peace is was an economic necessity. In early stages last summer and rough September and most of Oc- ber the process was fairly orderly d it looked as if the readjustment uld be completed without any very pleasant results. But gaining mo- ntum and increasing greatly in lence the downward movement ally upset calculations. The stock rket, which in August and again October had seemed to have sured the worst, ha dto succumb the strain. Predictions as to when torrent would be checked have ved quite valueless.

Foreign Exchange Market.

As the market failed to respond the fall in money rates, so also ey took no notice of the improve- nt in the foreign exchanges. This s an indication that the break in change during the first half of e month was like the high money tes given an exaggerated impor- nce as an influence in the price ovement. There has been a lot of se and reckless talk about Europe t being able to meet is obligations, ther private or public. The im- ession has been given that Europe es us a big bill for commodity ports which it cannot liquidate. is is quite erroneous. For six nths now the banks have been tually discriminating against ex- ange drafts and have been forcing ir liquidation on a large scale. As esult, Europe's floating obliga- s in this country have ben heavi- reduced. Our merchants, mean,- le have not except in a few in- nces, been financing their cus- ners abroad. They have always n able to obtain payment for ounts due by selling exchange bills the open market and that there is question of the liquidity of these s is shown by the action of the change market itself where, in two s, with all the disorder elsewhere, ling rates recovered over 10 cents the pound. We are having trou- in forcing an immediate settle- nt of claims in South America and s was the principal reason for the sing of the American Internation- l Corporation dividends this week. t it is not to be assumed that se claims upon South American ntries are not perfectly good in e end. They are simply like slow ets upon which it will take time realize.

Foreign Government Debts.

As for the discussion on the sol- cy of European governments, it reckless and mischievous in the reme. No country in history, e the old regime in Turkey and Government in Moscow, has ever d down upon its debts. Even xico proposes to pay as soon as gets settled. There is no compari- between the France of today and France of 1796 when the assign- almost worthless, were the sole ency of the country, when specie disappeared. Yet France went ugh that period and the atrrible eeding strain of the Napoleonic without any question of not ing its obligations.

BEARISH SENTIMENT IS PRONOUNCED IN GRAINS

Grain prices broke sharply during the past week. Widespread bearish sentiment proved more than an offset for bullish factors, notwithstanding the many big cuts which the value of cereals had recently undergone.

At the beginning of the week, material upturns in wheat prices took place owing largely to signs of European buying and to the assumption that Bolsheviki military successes had rendered improbable for a long time any important grain shipments from Russia. There was also much talk of an effort to arrange credits in this country to enlarge exports to Germany. Confidence based on such grounds, however, did not last, and aggressive selling set in accompanied by renewed attention to the disturbed financial and economic situation and to indications that a stock of wheat might be built up here by arrivals from Canada. Then came increased offerings from the big new 1920 yield of corn, and the whole grain list tumbled in good earnest, despite evidence of a fairly widespread holding policy on the part of farmers.

Weakness in corn and oats started with a sharp break in cash corn prices at Kansas City. Later, liquidation became general.

Except for November delivery, provisions tended downward in sympathy with grain and hogs.

Foreign Exchange and Domestic Money

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—There was a pronounced change in the foreign exchange situation in the past week that was construed as indicating a step toward betterment of the foreign credit position. A good market was obtainable at all times for exchange on continental centers, and the demand on several days was so vigorous as to result in substantial advances. This attracted attention to trade reports about industrial activities in many of the continental sections which have recently been noted as engaged in production for export to this country. The improvement was most pronounced in sterling demand, which sold as low as $3.36½ earlier in the week, advancing to 3.49¼, and, although the gain was not fully maintained, the market showed firmness, after a reaction to 3.43½, rallying again from that level.

French exchange was also in good demand, and there were new conditions in evidence in Dutch exchange, guilders checks selling during the week as high as 30.62, an advance from the low level early in the week of 29.70.

German exchange was also actively traded in, some large blocks changing hands, with a range of from 1.33 to 1.58. Spanish exchange was in demand all through the week and made a substantial improvement in its market position. Asiatic exchange, however, was weak, and South American exchange reflected conditions in that quarter, rates on Buenos Aires declining to the new low level of 135.00.

Today advances were made in rates to many European centers. Sterling was in scant supply and advanced on moderate buying, demand advancing 1 cent in the early trading to $3.46½. French also made a fair gain on a slightly increased demand. German reflected improvement in its credit position, with importance attached to continued reports about financial measures which are expected to provide funds for exports to Germany. Dutch continued to reflect the influence of security sales for Amsterdam account.

IMPROVEMENT IN BRITISH FINANCIAL POSITION SHOWN

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, Nov. 20.—Improvement in the financial position is becoming manifest in the movement of exchange rates, a better Bank of England statement and an important reduction in currency note circulation. It is expected that there will be still further strengthening of the bank's position through receipt of gold from abroad, but the improvement will be partly obscured in December because of the inevitable rise in note circulation at the end of the year. That, however, will be temporary.

There is a disposition in some quarters to associate the improvement in the exchanges with the German conference of the League of Nations. This is merely fanciful, though McKenna, in his speech at Manchester University, emphatically declared that there is no hope of a general financial revival unless real peace is attained with extensive disarmament. He asserted that this is impossible if the League of Nations fails. The best point in McKenna's speech, however, was his diagnosis of the cause of high prices, drawing a connection between high prices and Government expenditure. He showed that because a large proportion of industrial borrowing from the banks is connected with inability to meet taxation. The amount of inflation involved is almost as great as though the Government were borrowing directly from the banks, he held.

Trade With Russia Considered.

A highly interesting aspect of the situation is the attempt being made at resuming trade with Soviet Russia, and at financing impecunious countries. The controversy concerning the former is acute. Krassen's emissaries work cleverly here and already several syndicates have been formed. The Cabinet's view apparently is that trading with Russia will weaken Bolshivism, but opponents of move maintain the food and clothes will not nourish the Red army and never reach the peasants.

Concerning the financing of impecunious countries there was an important meeting this week of bankers and insurance companies to discuss the scheme proposed by Ter Meulen, recently member for Holland of the Advisory Committee of the Brussels conference for the provision of financial credits for distressed countries to purchase goods, the idea being to attach to the scheme a system of credit insurance.

Holding for Prices.

The security markets are overshadowed by trade depression resulting not merely from the fall in prices but inability to sell at present levels. Our difficulties are aggravated by the fact that in spite of the lead given by the United States in liquidating commodities, people here are holding stubbornly for high prices.

It is believed that the present rally in the exchanges will be fairly maintained and will even possibly go further even including sterling at New York. But unless British trade rallies greatly sterling is expected to react later.

FURTHER DECLINE SCORED BY WHEAT; CORN ALSO DOWN

CHICAGO, Nov. 20.—American wheat became the cheapest in the world today through another decline in future prices on the Chicago Board of Trade. There was a net loss for the day of from 3¼c to 5c a bushel, December wheat closing at $1.68½@1.69 and March 1c below that scale.

Corn and oats also declined, partly in sympathy with wheat and partly because buyers had no confidence that the bottom had been reached in those grains, although they were already below the pre-war value. December closed on the downgrade at 64⅝c to 64c, whil oats wound up at a split fraction below 48c.

With wheat at its low figure attention turned to the foreign situation and a feeling developed that export demand would be attracted to the local market by the low prices. This was strengthened when word came from the seaboard that Italy had taken two cargoes and Germany 400,000 bushels of wheat on the breaks. It was also pointed out that at Buenos Aires March wheat was at a premium of 25c over the Chicago price.

These considerations brought a rally that carried December wheat from its low point of $1.65¾ to above $1.69. In the last half hour, however, the general liquidation in the business world again held sway in the pit and prices receded sharply.

In corn country offerings continued light and cash corn sold at fair premiums over the December delivery, but the market was in no mood to respond to news regarding grains and the general financial situation affected corn as it had wheat. Oats, too, felt the influences of the general business situation throughout the session, although there were slightly less selling fever than was manifest in the corn trade.

Provisions were weaker and lower with grains. Some scattered selling by commission houses had influence also, but trade was only fair.

Coffee Market.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—An opening decline of 2 to 13 points was forfeited by rallies in the market for coffee futures here today as a result of covering for over the week-end or buying for a reaction. The opening decline was probably due to the unsettled showing of the Brazilian cables, but the technical position of the market was considered stronger after the earlier week declines, and there may have been some buying late in the morning on reports that plans were being discussed for creating international credits. March sold up from 7.05 to 7.20, and closed at 7.19, with the general list closing at a net advance of 2 to 8 points. December, 6.45; January, 6.69; March, 7.19; May, 7.55; July, 7.90; September, 8.10.

MARKED DEPRESSION IN LIVESTOCK DURING WEEK

COMPARATIVE LIVESTOCK RECEIPTS.

	Last Wk.	Prev. Wk.	Yr. Ago.
Cattle and calves	31,975	36,485	46,771
Hogs	96,795	82,343	96,597
Sheep	7,603	14,571	18,734
Horses and mules	827	514	6,784
Totals	137,200	133,913	168,886

Continued depression in virtually all livestock markets at the St. Louis National Stockyards the past week accompanied by violent price reductions forced values of many classes of stock to the lowest level in years. After a week of constant price slashing, hogs closed on the lowest level since 1917, lambs the lowest since 1916, sheep the lowest since 1915, while some grades of cattle rested on the pre-war price basis.

Severe liquidation of cattle throughout this country and Canada flooded the Western markets of the United States with an overabundance of half-fat, immature stock and, unable to cope with the heavy offering, some of the larger markets verged on demoralization. Milder weather the latter part of the week and the approaching Thanksgiving trade, which centers on poultry, were factors causing buyers to hold out with limited orders.

A 50c to 75c reduction in beef steer values the past week put prices down $2@3 and in extreme cases $3.50 under high time, Nov. 2. Butcher yearling were extremely hard to move throughout the week, and slumped 75c to $1, putting prices for these right at $3 lower than three weeks ago. Butcher cows were reduced 50c on the week's trade and prices are $2.50@3 lower than election day. Canners and cutters were more active and held about steady. Bulls likewise were caught in the decline, bulk selling from barely steady to 50c down.

There was a fair demand here for stocker and feeder cattle, though some other Western markets were virtually demoralized on this class of stock. In sympathy with the general market conditions, trade here ruled off 25c and in places 50c from the close of the previous week.

Veal caives sold strong and active and closed 25c higher for period. Top for week was $15, though closing top was $14.50. There was fair inquiry for Southern canner yearlings at steady to strong prices.

Hogs Lowest Since 1917.

Violent declines in the hog market the past week forced values to the lowest level recorded since January, 1917, the final session featuring a top of $11.80, which was $1.70 lower than the top on the closing day of the preceding week. Receipts were the heaviest since January of this year, totaling approximately 98,000, or about 16,000 more than arrived a week previous. Trade closed $1.50@1.75 lower for the week, with the greatest decline on light stuff. Pigs finished practically $2 lower and rough hogs about $1 off. Pigs were in the limelight much of the forepart of the week and on one or two occasions sold 25c to 50c above best hogs, but later the demand fell off and closing session was very slow, with the best selling at $11.25 and down. Principal pig inquiry was for light stuff, averaging 60 to 90 pounds. Rough hogs sold from $10.25@10.50 at the close.

Dull Trade in Sheep.

A cut of approximately 50 per cent in receipts in sheep pens did not hold declines the past week. During the early week trading little change was noted in lambs, but weakness developed later and week-end prices were 25c to 50c lower. Sheep dropped off a quarter to start with, under continued liberal receipts and closed a flat 50c lower, with values at the low point for five years, $4.50 being the top late for best ewes. Good fed lambs of handy weight are quotable from $11.25 to $11.50 at this time; fair to good, $10.50@11; plain to medium, $8.50@10.50, and culls, $6@6.50. Canner sheep sold from $1@1.50 and shoppers and bucks at $3.50 largely. Receipts were 7603 head, as against 14,571 last week.

Slightly Larger Horse Trade.

With the clearance of slightly over 300 head at auction, trade in horses the past week was larger than for several preceding weeks. Notwithstanding the larger business, however, prices were not improved, remaining on a low basis.

The best results the past week were again received for the cheaper priced stock, toppy Southerners again being neglected. Eastern demand was negligible.

Little Change in Mules.

Except for a light movement of miners and pitters, mule trade was again virtually lifeless. There has been no trade on other classes of consequence for many weeks past.

Hides in St. Louis.

HIDES—Current receipts, less 1 lb. tare per hide on wet salted:

No. 1 horse hides, mane and tail on, $3.50; small and No. 2, $2.50; fine and pony, $1.50; colts, 50c; hog hides, 35c—glue and pig half price.

Drygoods Market Weak.

NE WYORK, Nov. 20.—Cotton goods and cotton yarn markets dull and weak. Price concessions more numerous in wool goods lines. Silks show more resistance to price declines. Linoleums reduced 15 per cent. Buriaps quiet.

Low Figure on Silk Exports.

TOKIO, Nov. 20.—The October exports of silk totaled 12,209 bales, of which 9263 went to the United States. This was the lowest export figure in months. Rice is slumping heavily and the farmers are dumping their stocks on the market.

Sugar at New York.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—The local market for raw sugar was quiet today, but the undertone was still unsettled, and offerings were quite liberal, while there appeared to be no demand, and no fresh business was reported. Prices weer unchanged, with Cubas offered at 4⅝c cost and freight, equal to 5.76c for centrifugal.

The market for refined was unchanged at 9.00 to 9.50 for fine granulated, with little inquiry reported. One of the largest refiners announced that its six plans had been shut down for teh balance of the year for the usual annual cleanup, but that it had ample supplies of sugar on hand to meet the requirements of buyers.

There was another decline insugar futures owing to the unsettled condition of the spot market and the poor demand for refined, with prices selling at the lowest levels thus far recorded this season. Wall street and commmission houses sold quite freely, but near the close there was a slight rally on covering and final prices were 20 to 22 points net lower.

"Spot Cotton" Market for Los Angeles.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Nov. 20.—Unanimous vote to establish a "spot" cotton market in Los Angeles was taken at the meeting here yesterday of the International Cotton League of the West. It was planned to have it in operation by Jan. 1, 1921.

The proposed market, it was said, would be the first of the kind west of Texas, and would divert from Dallas and Galveston shipments of Arizona and California cotton which would be graded and offered at Los Angeles harbor, while the headquarters of the market would be in the city proper.

SALES BY SOUTH FACTOR IN LOWER PRICE OF COTTON

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—There was a renewal of Southern selling which supplied the demand from Wall Street and local shorts in the cotton market during today's early trading and caused continued nervousness. The opening was five points lower on May, but generally 3 to 7 points higher on covering for over the week-end. Prices soon weakened, however, and before the end of the first hour active months sold 15 to 33 points below last night's closing quotations with January at 15.77, Dec. 16.75 and March at 15.70. Reports that the approval of President Wilson had been asked for the organization of a syndicate to utilize alien property custodian funds in the creation of credits attracted a good deal of attention, but buyers found no encouragement in week-end reviews of the goods trade and the continued Southern selling was a disappointment to people who had bought for a reaction on yesterday's break.

Covering was active enough to send prices about 25 to 27 points net higher during the middle of the morning with January selling at 16.30c and March at 16.10c, making recoveries of about 80 to 98 points from yesterday's low records. This improvement was not maintained, however, owing to reports that exporters were offering cotton for resale in the South and the market closed net unchanged to 30 points lower.

Cotton futures closed steady; Dec., 16.25c; Jan., 15.88c; March, 15.83c; May, 15.80c; July, 15.55c.

Curtailment of mill production for the week in Fall River was estimated at 240,000 pieces, the heaviest for any one week since 1911, and still greater curtailment was said to be in prospect for next week. Some improvement was erported in retail business, but otherwise local traders found little change in goods trade advices.

BANDS OF CAROLERS TO SING CHRISTMAS EVE

Preparations Begun for Annual Benefit for Children's Aid Society.

"Singers in every block" is the slogan of the Christmas Carol Committee of the Children's Aid, which has begun preparations for the annual Christmas eve festival, when carol bands sing before every house in the window of which a lighted candle is placed. The proceeds go to the work of the Children's Aid Society, which cares for hundreds of St. Louis children, placing them in private homes where their board is paid and careful supervision maintained. Families which have been temporarily broken up through sickness, death and other misfortunes apply to the Aid Society, and the children are cared for until they can be restored to their own homes.

Miss Florence Van Sickler, general secretary of the Children's Aid, states that the work of the organization is constantly increasing, and that boarding homes are in demand. At present homes are badly needed for babies, all of whom are strong and healthy, and there are Protestant, Jewish and Roman Catholic children on the list, as the work of the Children's Aid is done regardless of creed or race.

Among other children for whom homes are needed at once, and whose board will be paid by the Aid Society, are a brother and sister, 8 and 9 years of age, of Jewish parentage, who must go to one family, as it is the policy of the Children's Aid to keep members of a family together; a cripple boy of 11 for whom a home is wanted near a car line in order that he may easily be taken to a clinic, and a home in the suburbs for a delicate boy of 14.

Mrs. George C. Hitchcock is president of the Children's Aid Society, and Miss Alice Pettingill is chairman of the Christmas Carol Committee. Anyone who is willing to organize a group of carol singers in any part of the city is asked to call at the Children's Aid headquarters, 818 North Eighth street, for details.

Almost 300 groups sang last year, and in addition, there were carol singers at all the hotels and restaurants at noon, the total proceeds amounting to about $6000. The number of noonday singers this year will be doubled, and a committee has been appointed for the noonday festival, of which Mrs. Ellis Fischel is chairman and Mrs. Lou Hocker, vice chairman.

Two New York Alienists' Views on Insanity and Modern Methods for Treatment of Mental Diseases

Director of Psychiatric Institute Says Insanity Is Only a Legal Term Applied by Courts—Head of Neurological Society Talks of Gland Therapy.

By ARTHUR BENINGTON,
A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

IN every branch of medicine new things are being discovered almost every day, new treatments are being tried, new ideas are being advanced. Troubles of the mind are now classed with troubles of the body under the general name of disease—and as is the case with bodily diseases so with mental diseases, each has its own causes and its own treatments. It was with the object of learning what are the very latest views of physicians on insanity and the possibility of its cure that I sought the following interviews. The physicians quoted were selected largely at the suggestion of each other.

Dr. Kirby, as director of the Psychiatric Institute on Ward's Island, has the care of many thousands of mentally diseased persons and therefore is supereminently qualified to speak on the general topic.

Dr. Timme, president of the Neurological Institute, is perhaps the best authority on the very newest system of medicine, called endocrinology—a word so new that you won't find it in the latest dictionaries and one of the very first to apply it to diseases of the mind. Having thus introduced the eminent doctors, let us read what they have to say:

Insanity Merely Legal Term for Lack of Responsibility, Ward's Island Official Says

"WHAT is insanity?" I asked Dr. George H. Kirby, director of the Psychiatric Institute of the New York State Hospitals for the Insane, Ward's Island.

"From the medical standpoint, insanity is a very objectionable term, and physicians generally oppose its use except in those cases of mental disorder where legal determination of a person's responsibility becomes necessary. A man is insane when a competent court has pronounced him insane, and not until then. Prior to this time he may be mentally abnormal, but his relation to society can be altered only by legal process. In other words, insanity is simply a designation of civic disability applied to a mentally sick person who in the eyes of the law is no longer responsible or capable of managing himself or his affairs.

"There are many sufferers from mental trouble who get along very well in everyday life, carry on their daily work, and no question is ever raised as to their sanity unless their behavior becomes so unusual as to attract attention. There are, for instance, many cases of mental depression who come to official notice only when they make an attempt at suicide. Such a person may then be adjudged legally insane, but the mental sickness from which the person suffers remains exactly as it was before the court took notice of that person's conduct. There are a very great many people in the community with peculiar ideas or false beliefs (delusions), but they are not considered to be insane unless their ideas bring them them into some conflict with their environment—then the legal machinery is apt to be set in motion and the judgment of insanity rendered. If, however, as it sometimes happens, the Court is not convinced that the patient's mental condition is such as to require detention, then a judgment may be rendered of not insane, although the mental disorder remains as before.

Insanity Decided by Courts.

"I repeat that the insane are those whose status in the community has been changed by legal action. It is important that the public understand this point and give up the idea that insanity is synonymous with mental disease. There are many patients in the State hospitals who have pronounced mental disorder but who have not been adjudged insane, because they came for treatment voluntarily, of their own free will. A great many more mentally sick persons would come of their own initiative for treatment and be benefited by it if they did not fear the stigma which the public so unjustly continues to attach to sufferers from mental disorder.

"There are a number of different types of mental disorder totally unlike in their manifestations, arising from different causes and leading to a different termination—some are curable and some are incurable."

"Is it possible to say when a person is mentally abnormal and when not? In other words, is there any well-defined line of demarcation between a sane mind and a diseased mind?" I asked.

Environment as Factor.

"It is not possible to draw a line and say that those on this side of it are normal and those on the other side are abnormal," replied Dr. Kirby. "For we have to take into consideration the environment, both the time and place, in which a person lives. He who is in imperfect adjustment with his environment is abnormal. Take a concrete illustration: Joan of Arc, who has just been canonized, saw things, heard things and did things which seemed quite normal to the French people of the fifteenth century; if a peasant maiden of Twentieth-Century America, however, were to see and hear and do similar things she would be pronounced abnormal. For we of today do not believe in the reality of visions, angelic voices and supernatural interventions in human affairs, but regard as abnormal those who have them; we cannot imagine such a person at the present stage of human development being a constructive force as was the Maid of Orleans 600 years ago. She was in harmony with her environment and, therefore, normal and a factor for good; she would, however, be in discord with our environment and beliefs of today and we should call her abnormal and perhaps place her in a hospital for treatment."

"May not that be a reflection upon our intelligence rather than an evidence of insanity in seers of visions and hearers of voices?" I put in.

"I do not think so. The essential point is that every society in every age has its own generally accepted habits and beliefs, which may be called the herd instinct, and whoever does not fit in with these or runs counter to them is branded by society as abnormal. Society has to protect itself against those who defy the herd instinct, and that is the reason for our prisons, reformatories and hospitals. Twenty-seven per cent of the inmates of our prisons are mentally unsound, although it would be difficult, if not impossible, to prove them to be legally insane.

"This abnormality may exist in the person is looked upon merely as any degree. It may be so slight that

Real tooth danger lies under the gums

Under the gums is the important foundation—the bony root sockets which hold the teeth in place.

Healthy gums guard and preserve this foundation of your teeth. Soft, bleeding, tender or receding gums allow pyorrhea infection to creep beneath them. If unchecked, the germs spread to the bony root sockets, weaken and destroy them.

Then your teeth become loose and eventually fall out, or must be extracted—because pyorrhea has eaten away their supporting foundation. You may have kept the visible surface of the teeth white and glistening by daily brushing—you may have had all cavities skillfully filled—but all that care has gone for naught because you neglected your gums.

Watch your gums if you want to save your teeth!

Pyorrhocide Powder was compounded for the specific purpose of maintaining and restoring gum health. In addition to its ingredients which keep the teeth white and clean, it is medicated with Dentinol, a germicidal and healing agent widely used by the dental profession in the treatment of pyorrhea at the dentist's chair.

Pyorrhocide Powder tones up the gums, stimulates their blood circulation, maintains hardness and firmness, thereby increasing the power to resist pyorrhea infection. Its effectiveness for this purpose has been conclusively proved by thorough tests in clinics devoted exclusively to pyorrhea study and research. That is why dentists everywhere recommend it.

The economical dollar package contains six months' supply. At all druggists and dental supply houses,

"It Feels Like Iron"

It Is Iron In The Blood That Makes Iron Muscles Like These—

Physician Explains a Secret of the Great Power and Endurance of Athletes—Tells How Organic Iron Helps Build Rich, Red Blood and Revitalize Worn-out, Exhausted Nerves

It takes men of red-blooded force and power to hit the sledgehammer blows that count—and whether you are a pile-driver or a bank president you cannot expect to win out against odds unless you are able to strike—and strike hard.

"There are countless numbers of men today who at 40 are broken in health and steadily going downward to physical and mental decay," says Dr. John J. Van Horne, formerly Medical Inspector and Clinical Physician on the Board of Health of New York City. "Yet there are thousands of the same men who undergo a most remarkable transformation the moment they get plenty of iron into their blood to give increased energy and endurance." But be sure the iron you take is organic iron and not metallic iron which people usually take. Organic iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, carrots and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron. Organic iron may be had from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron. Nuxated Iron represents organic iron in such a highly concentrated form that one dose is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating half a quart of spinach or one quart of green vegetables. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day, after meals, for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see for yourself how much you have gained. Many an athlete or prizefighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance, which come from having plenty of iron in the blood, while many another has gone down to inglorious defeat simply for lack of iron.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is recommended by Dr. Van Horne and other physicians is now being used by over four million people annually. It is not a secret remedy but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. It is put up in tablet form and you can swallow the tablets or eat them like candy. Each tablet of genuine Nuxated Iron is stamped as follows N and the words Nuxated Iron are stamped into each bottle, so that the public may not be led into accepting inferior substitutes. It is easily assimilated and doesn't injure the teeth, make them black nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by all good druggists in tablet form only.

"A Skin Like a Venus? It's Really Easy"

A Simple Formula That Works Wonders on Any Skin. Also a New Way to Remove Wrinkles That Rarely Fails.

By Madame Marco

IT is really immaterial how muddy, or blemished the skin may be, a remarkable transformation can be brought about in only a few weeks' time by a method extraordinarily simple. First of all, abandon the use of any of the complexion creams you may have been using, and make up a cream at home today in a few moments, by mixing two tablespoonfuls of glycerine and one ounce of zintone in a pint of water. You can get the zintone at any drug store. In a few days you will note that the spots, blemishes and muddiness you complain of are fast disappearing.

THIN—Here is the most powerful hair forcer you can ever hope to obtain, and it really does the work quickly and splendidly. One ounce of beta-quinol is mixed with a half pint of water and a half pint of bay rum, or use a full pint of witchhazel instead of the bay rum and water. You can get a package of beta-quinol, enough to make a pint of this splendid hair forcer for a small sum from any drug store. This is not an oily preparation, but it is pleasant to use and should be applied every day. Your hair will also grow out most luxuriantly and possess great vigor.

MISS G. P. S.—The formation of fatty accumulations on the scalp which soap does not remove impedes the growth of hair. The only way is to dissolve these accumulations, which you can do easily by simply using a teaspoonful of eggol in a half cup of water. This makes a luxurious head-wash, and gives the hair a silky lustre which is beautiful, lets the hair breathe and allows it to grow luxuriantly. A package of eggol for twenty-five cents contains enough for many weeks.

CORA W.—Under no circumstances should you use any of the various pastes and powders sold for superfluous hairs, and which burn and irritate the skin. When the hair is moistened with a little sulfo solution, the hairs at once dissolve away, and the skin is left as smooth and as soft as before. There will be no redness or spottiness to be seen. The sulfo solution can be bought at any drug store. This never fails to do the work thoroughly and delightfully.

OLDER—For the quick removal of wrinkles, I would advise you to try the following which has demonstrated its great worth in a remarkably large number of cases. Get two ounces of eptol from your druggist. Mix the eptol with one tablespoonful of glycerine in a half pint of water. This will result in a very fine, rich and satiny cream. When faithfully used, the skin will become of a finer texture, it will become more plump and vigorous. Furthermore, you will notice that the crows' feet, lines of age and wrinkles have disappeared very largely and you will look years younger.

MISS S. P. R.—There is no more need of fretting for many months, pinching and steaming the face, and a lot of other things in order to get rid of blackheads. Sprinkle a little neroxin on a wet cloth and rub this on the blackheads and you will find that in a few moments most of these pests will have disappeared. Keep this up and you will have no more blackheads. Get the neroxin at any drug store.

MISS T. W. W.—A face powder, exquisitely fine, producing an exceptional lasting bloom on the skin, is "Fresca Beauty Powder," sold at drug stores in any tint. You will never want to use any other kind.

ALIENISTS' VIEWS ON INSANITY AND MODERN METHODS OF TREATMENT

peculiar, eccentric or cranky, or it may manifest itself in raving mania. There is, therefore, no dividing line."

"When you say that what we are accustomed to call insanity is a disease of the mind, do you mean that it is a physical disease of the brain," I asked, "or is it purely psychic?"

"That is impossible to say," answered Dr. Kirby. "We know mental activity as a function of the brain, and we do not know it apart from the brain. We know that lesions or injuries of the brain substance almost always cause some disturbance of the mind; but, on the other hand, there are very pronounced mental disturbances in which we are not able to discover any lesion of the brain when we dissect this after death. The human nervous system is so complex and so delicately organized, however—and of course it is impossible to observe it in living operation—that we are still in the dark as to the precise relations between the physical nerve substance and the mind of man. The ancient problem as to the relations between mind and matter has ceased to worry us, its solution is really unimportant; we today regard the human being as a whole, a biological unit, and we treat him as such and study his reactions as we would any other living organism.

"I said that certain forms of mental disease were caused by lesions of the brain; this is invariably the case with paresis, which we know to be the result of invasion of the brain by the spirocheta pallida, or germ of syphilis."

"Is this true of all cases of paresis?"

"Absolutely. And that is why paresis is so difficult to cure; once the germ of syphilis lodges firmly in the brain it is almost impossible to eradicate it."

"Does it not yield to the new arsenical preparations with which syphilis is now being cured?" I asked.

"Such preparations should be systematically used in all cases, and they may with time destroy the spirocheta in the brain, but nothing can repair the destruction of tissue that they have wrought. It is like a far-gone case of consumption, in which the lungs may be rid of the bacilli of tuberculosis, but nothing can restore the lung tissue they have destroyed.

Alcohol Damaging to Brain.

"Alcohol also in large quantities long continued causes a damage of brain tissue and consequent mental disease, and it is going to be interesting to watch the effect of prohibition upon admissions to hospitals for the insane. Even before prohibition went into force there was a marked decrease in admissions due to alcoholic excess. In 1909 12½ per cent of all admissions to New York State hospitals were due to alcoholism; this ratio fell steadily, except for a slight rise in 1917, to 3.9 per cent in 1919."

I asked Dr. Kirby if chronic drunkenness was a cause or an effect of mental disorder, or if it was, as some eminent physicians have asserted, a safety valve for systems that will, now that they are deprived of it, have to find some other outlet for their emotional disturbances?

"If it is a safety valve," he replied, "it is a very dangerous one. Chronic drunkenness is both a cause and an effect. There must be something weak about a mind that will turn to drink as a solace in its troubles. Very few mentally normal and emotionally well balanced individuals acquire the drink habit; but mental stress and emotional instability predispose to alcoholic excesses. And this is one of the ready means by which individuals strive to disguise some of the harsh realities of life or to mitigate some of their inner mental conflicts. But we know that alcohol is a habit-forming drug, which means that alcohol in the system calls for more alcohol. Then the alcohol begins its insidious destructive work on the personality and the brain ceases to perform its functions in a healthy manner; therefore the mind does not work in a normal, efficient way."

"What are some of the first symptoms," I asked, "of those mental disorders which are not traceable to definite lesions of the brain or to poisons or to germs?"

Symptoms of Abnormality.

"A very large group of cases falls into this category, cases in which we do not find definite changes in the brain substance to account for the mental disturbance. Probably the most common of all forms of mental disorder is that known as dementia praecox. It is also one of the most serious mental affections, and these cases constitute about 25 per cent of all admissions to our State hospitals, where they accumulate in large numbers because of the unfavorable outcome. The nature and causes of this condition are not settled. A careful study, however, of the life histories of persons who develop dementia praecox shows that most of them have exhibited from early years certain peculiarities of temperament or mental makeup. These peculiarities may be looked upon as an expression of mental tendencies or traits which when marked may interfere seriously with the normal efficient adaptation of the individual to the environment or to life.

"In many cases it is apparent long before we would speak of a definite mental derangement that something is going wrong in the way the instincts, the feelings and the interests are developing. Usually in early childhood, although sometimes not becoming very noticeable until the age of puberty, it will be observed that the individual is too quiet, shy or self-conscious. Because of the inclination to reticence and seclusiveness such persons are said to be of the shut-in type of temperament. In addition, such persons are apt to be self-willed, sensitive and given to brooding. Unusual religious interests or a fondness for abstract and mythical subjects are often noted; sexual ruminations and fantasies are

ECZEMA

Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D, and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial, just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

When Food Doesn't Digest

Give the Stomach a Rational Rest by Proper Aid, Not by Harsh Starvation Methods. Use Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

A sour stomach may indicate an acid condition that calls for an alkaline effect.

This you will get from one or two

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after a meal. Sour risings, gassiness, a heavy bloated feeling and such distress due to indigestion or dyspepsia are usually only temporary. And yet they may lead to serious disorder. The regular use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after meals reflects to a high degree the intelligent selection of preventive measures.

One cannot always select or inspect the quality of food to be eaten nor its method or manner of preparation. But it is possible to avoid the acidity that is so often the result. And it is a far better plan to eat without worry over what may happen, than to starve for fear it will happen. Many physicians recommend these tablets for stomach distress due to indigestion or dyspepsia.

They are sold by all druggists everywhere at 60 cents a box.

The Easiest Way To End Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

ALIENISTS' VIEWS ON INSANITY AND MODERN METHODS OF TREATMENT

apt to occupy the mind a great deal. Furthermore, such types of personality show in their thinking a distinct tendency to turn away from the real facts of life, to find greater pleasure in day-dreaming and imaginative thinking than they do in healthy social contact, in play or in useful work.

"These peculiarities of disposition have a tendency to grow and gradually to bring about an estrangement between the individual and his environment, and eventually to disorganize all normal interests and fruitful activity. Dementia praecox is often unsuspected as a mental disease until it has progressed so far that the sufferer is doing things that seem absolutely insane to the family or friends. These things, however, seem perfectly natural to the patients, for they are the development of a long train of unexpressed thoughts, fancies, imaginings and desires that began years ago.

Cause of Peculiarities Unknown.

"What lies back of and determines such mental peculiarities as we find in persons who develop dementia praecox we do not know. But we naturady look to those factors which have most to do with the development of personality—namely, the inherited tendencies, the deeply rooted instincts, the early training, education, etc. As a result of the interplay of these complex forces our mental growth takes place, and every individual develops his own special type of mental reactions, mental habits, mental attitudes and trends of interests. The best mental reactions and the most desirable mental habits and attitudes are those which bring about the most efficient adaptation of the individual to the demands of life. In persons who develop dementia praecox we can often see that an efficient adaptation could hardly be expected because of their mental habits and mental traits. Particularly to be mentioned are the tendency to introversion, to sidetracking of normal interests and withdrawal from reality.

"If such be the case, the thought is naturally awakened that something might be done in the way of prevention. If it is true that the shut-in type of mental makeup and various other temperamental peculiarities may be looked upon as forerunners of dementia praecox, then the possibility may be considered of influencing these unfavorable tendencies before actual mental breakdown occurs. The significance of the personality traits which I have described is not generally understood. Peculiarities of temperament, seclusiveness, queer habits and unusual interests are not matters to which parents or physicians as a rule pay much attention. Instead of adopting the view that an individual will outgrow these peculiarities, it would be better to investigate the case carefully and to learn, if possible, just what the individual's difficulties and peculiarities spring from. The study of these cases and similar conditions has given a great impetus to the mental hygiene movement which has in recent years attracted so much interest. Mental hygiene offers fully as fruitful a field for preventive medicine as does bodily hygiene, to which so much attention is paid today."

Modern Methods of Treatment.

"What," I asked, "are some of the latest methods of treating mental patients in hospitals?"

"For such cases as those of which I have just spoken—dementia praecox—occupational therapy has been found one of the most useful measures. This is based on the principle of re-education and stimulation of interest in some concrete work in the hope of combating the introspection and apathy with which these patients are afflicted. Teachers trained in arts and crafts are employed in most hospitals, but almost any kind of work is helpful. A great deal of the housekeeping work in State hospitals is done by the patients themselves. Many patients can be induced to undertake such work as washing, cooking, sewing and gardening.

"Another important aid in treatment is furnished by hydrotherapy. Excited patients are with benefit treated in the continuous bath. This consists in immersion of the patient in water at the body temperature. The patient reclines on a hammock suspended in the tub. There is nothing disagreeable about the bath, and the patient may be treated for hours or sometimes for days. The water acts as a sedative and in many cases is highly beneficial.

"Much, especially in the neuroses or minor maladjustments, is being accomplished by psycho-analysis, which aims to remove the mental conflict which lies at the bottom of these troubles.

"A more recent line of treatment is that of gland therapy, based upon a knowledge of the effects of the secretions of the so-called ductless or endocrine glands upon the nervous system. It is still, however, an open question whether the mental trouble or the disturbance of the secretions is to be looked upon as primary. We have observed how often they go together but it is by no means certain that the abnormal activity of certain glands causes the mental or emotional disturbance; it may be that the emotional disturbance affects the glands and upsets their normal balance."

"Is insanity ever really cured?" I asked.

Many Cases Curable.

"Here again it all depends on what you mean by insanity and illustrates the harm that may be done by using that word in any but its true legal sense. Many types of mental disorder are curable. About 20 per cent of the patients admitted to State hospitals are discharged as recovered. Dementia praecox, as I have said before, generally has a bad outlook. Many cases are incurable by the time they come under treatment, and, as I have indicated, measures to combat this disorder must be directed to its earlier stages, which very often go back to youth or childhood. Another common form of mental disorder called the manic-depressive type tends to get well spontaneously, but there is a tendency for it to reappear in the form of a subsequent attack.

"These manic-depressive attacks have, of course, some cause, although it may be difficult to determine what it is that operates in the individual case to bring about the mental disorder. In many cases the attacks coincide with or closely follow some emotionally disturbing occurrence such as death of relatives or friends, for instance. It is usually impossible to make provision against these influences.

Trained Nurses Needed.

"There are many reasons for asserting that mentally unsound persons are better off among other mentally unsound persons," answered the doctor, "as their whole trouble is inability to adapt themselves to their environment. They find themselves more out of harmony with the sane than with the mentally diseased, but the main advantage of being in a hospital is that it is possible to give them the necessary care and treatment by trained nurses and physicians. Even in our best institutions there are too few of these. Individual attention is what is most needed and for this there should be many carefully selected attendants."

"Have you noticed that the present fad for spiritism has resulted in much increase of mental troubles?"

"I cannot say that I have," replied Dr. Kirby, "but that sort of thing is such a common manifestation of infirmity of mind that we are quite familiar with the spirits with whom our patients hold converse. Spirtism, ouija boards and things like that have a special attraction for neurotic and psychopathic minds, and such minds are more likely than normal ones to get the results they are seeking. It is just these minds to which such practices are most perilous, for they may act as a precipitating cause of a mental disturbance which might not have come at all had it not been for them."

Dr. Kirby remarked on the unreasoning attitude of most people toward those who are mentally sick. "There should be no more reason for people to be ashamed of having a member of their family in a mental hospital than in having one in a hospital for tuberculosis. One of the greatest needs is for general hospitals to have wards for mental cases. A great many could be treated there without danger to others and with great benefit to themselves. This was demonstrated in the army, where no distinction was made and mental patients were not segregated and discriminated against as they are in civil life. With psychopathic wards in general hospitals the public would be encouraged to look upon mental disorders just as it looks upon those who are suffering from some disease of the body."

NEUROLOGICAL SOCIETY CHIEF TELLS OF GLAND TREATMENT

"THE latest method of treating certain forms of insanity is based upon recent studies of the action of glands, the precise function of which has been one of the deep mysteries of the human body," said Dr. Walter Timme, president of the Neurological Society of New York. "This method, which is called endocrinology, is meeting with a success that a few years ago would have been astonishing.

"But this does not mean that we have found a cure for insanity. It does not even mean that we are able to lay down any general rules for its treatment. That we have cured a few cases of so-called dementia precox, for instance, is no proof that all such cases can be cured by the new method. And it is highly important that the public should understand this in order that it may not have any illusions. What it does mean is that in future no examination of a person with disordered or abnormal mind will be complete unless the functioning of the glands be included in the examinations."

Before going any further it is necsary to make clear what glands Dr. Timme means and what are their functions. Besides the well-known glands of excretion and secretion, such as the liver, kidneys and salivary glands which pour their secretions into ducts, there are others, called endocrine or duct glands—which have no ext

Get 7 Per Cent With Real Safety By Investing in Missouri's Safest 7% Dividend Payer, Union Electric Preferred Stock: $100 a Share for Cash: $102 on a 10-Payment Plan

Union Electric, financing its growth in part here at home, gives home investors a chance to share its profits by buying shares of its 7% preferred stock.

This stock pays $7 a year in cash income on each $100 share—$1.75 every three months.

Backed by MORE than $100 worth of State-appraised, State-regulated income-producing property for each $100 share, this stock is always intrinsically worth what it costs.

Its income is protected by net earnings several times larger than the sum needed to pay the Company's preferred dividends.

We recommend this investment especially to small investors who want a BUSINESS income from their savings, with safety for their principal.

Let us send a salesman to explain this offer in detail. Just telephone our Securities Dept., Union Electric Bldg., 12th and Locust Sts., St. Louis, or mail us your name and address on the lines below.

I Want to Select My Xmas Edison Now

Said Wifey—
Why so early? asked Hubby.
So many of my friends were disappointed in not being able to secure an Edison last Christmas, was the reply.

No Better Christmas Gift

Real music in the home makes a happy home for always; that is why you should make your Christmas gift a New Edison Official Laboratory Model Phonograph.

The Perfection of the Edison has been established more than 4000 times, with over 50 great artists singing with the New Edison.

Surely There's No Better Gift Than

The NEW EDISON

the "Phonograph With a Soul"

Mr. Edison Was Not Satisfied with the way sound was being developed by existing talking machines, so he perfected a Phonograph and a new record named "Re-Creation," after seven years of research and experiment, costing three million dollars. This instrument he called the Official Laboratory Model.

The Official Laboratory Model is the Phonograph which we guarantee to sustain the test of direct comparison with the performance of the original artist or instrument.

THE NEW EDISON
Is Entirely Different in Construction

Isn't it natural to expect that from the master mind of Thomas A. Edison there would be developed a superior Phonograph?

If You Are in Doubt

Which Is the Best Phonograph, Attend Our Next Tone-Test Recital.

Write for free cards of admission to our next tone test at Sheldon Auditorium, December 1, with Edith McDonald, Soprano, Chas. Young, Violinist, Olive Robertson, Pianiste.

Our Challenge:

No manufacturer of any other Phonograph dare give the test of placing the original artist and Phonograph for comparison—in the manner done by us at our tone-test recitals.

Scattered about in the body are many others the functions of which are not yet fully understood.

Roles of Glands Established.

And some of the ordinary glands, besides pouring their principal secretions into their specific ducts, have other secretions that are absorbed by the blood just like those of the ductless glands. The most important of these are those of the reproductive organs in both sexes.

The roles that the more important ductless glands play in the body are now fairly well known; the pituitary, thyroid and thymus stimulate and regulate growth and development; the suprarenals govern the tonicity of the circulatory and other systems; it is the internal secretions of the reproductive glands that bring about the familiar changes of puberty—change of voice and growth of beard in boys, development of bust and hips in girls.

"Knowing the important effects that these glands have upon the organs of the body," said Dr. Timme, "it is natural to look for some action upon the brain and so upon the mind. How intimate are the relations between body and mind is well illustrated in cases of the maniac depressive type of insanity. This is intermittent, long periods of apparently perfect sanity alternating with periods of acute mania or of profound depression. When we have a person afflicted with this type under constant observation we can at times foresee the change of state coming on. We find a gradually changing blood pressure and pulse rate and an alteration in the constituents of the blood preceding the attack. Now we know that some of the glandular organs, either by excess or lack of their secretions, produce such conditions.

Extracts From Animals.

"It would be going too far to say that the gland disturbances bring on the episodes, but the parallel is at least striking, and we find that by administering the extracts of certain glands to the sufferer we not only normalize the constitution of the blood back to normal, but the oncoming fit of mania or depression may be aborted or at least greatly diminished in intensity. This is good evidence that the glands do affect the mind."

"The glandular extracts that you administer," I interrupted, "are these taken from the glands of human beings or of animals?"

"Of animals," replied Dr. Timme. "The thyroid extract of sheep, for instance, and the corpus luteum of pigs. These are prepared in laboratories and can be obtained from pharmacists like any other medicines."

"Which gland has most effect upon the mental processes?" I asked.

"That which, above all others, is associated with mental disorders," replied Dr. Timme, "is the pituitary. This might be expected from its situation at the base of the brain. Whenever this gland is deficient we find abnormalities, showing themselves especially in lack of conventionality, instability, compulsion ideas without the proper inhibitions. Of such are kleptomaniacs and pathological liars. When we feed such persons with the extract of the pituitary glands of animals they are generally improved, and some cases at least are cured.

"Many of the headaches for which the sufferers can find no relief, and which are closely associated with those minor mental disorders, we call psychoneuroses, are perfectly explained when we examine the head with the X-rays. For we often find that the sella turcica, or socket, in the skull in which the pituitary gland lies is too small for the enlarged gland, and this is being compressed by the bones. Sometimes when the pituitary enlarges persistently it actually breaks down its bony case and thus makes room for itself. Then the headaches and other symptoms vanish immediately.

The Thyroid Gland.

"The gland with which the public is probably most familiar is the thyroid, the enlargement of which produces the condition called goitre. This is often accompanied by mental aberrations, manifesting themselves in flightiness, craving for change, desire to be perpetually on the go. Deficiency in the thyroid manifests itself in the opposite way, in moodiness, depression, lack of interest. The one condition and the other are often benefited by administration of either suprarenal extract (adrenalin) or thyroid extract, the former neutralizing the effects of too much thyroid, the latter, of course, making up for the natural deficiency.

"In the normal condition of the body there is a perfect balance between the thymus, pituitary, thyroid and suprarenals, and when one of these is deficient another compensates for it, or tries to, for it cannot always succeed. The pituitary would often compensate for defective suprarenals if the sella turcica could enlarge, but unfortunately the pituitary too often finds its bony chamber too small, and its efforts to enlarge produce those headaches of which we spoke before. When it breaks down the walls of its cell and finds room to expand the headache ceases and the young man or girl is said to have outgrown headaches."

"How does deficiency in the suprarenals manifest itself?" I asked.

"Especially in proneness to fatigue and in neurasthenia," replied Dr. Timme. "There is low blood pressure and the skin reaction of some neurasthenics is distinctly different from the normal. By this I mean that when you stroke a normal skin with your finger, a pink line follows its course, but in a neurasthenic depending upon deficient suprarenals a white line follows. This is most marked on the abdomen, where the white line (called Sergent's line) with which the skin reacts to stroking with the finger is indicative of neurasthenia. In such cases we find that the blood is too low in sugar content and it coagulates too slowly. We found in the army that such men grew exhausted very easily and that they showed the minor psychoses. Such cases are helped for a time by giving them ex-

BIG EATERS GET KIDNEY TROUBLE

Take Salts at first sign of Bladder irritation or Backache.

The American men and women must guard constantly against Kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish; the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead or your back hurts; if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. The famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

Curling Hair This Way Preserves Its Beauty

That dull, dead appearance of the hair no longer troubles the woman who has adopted the silmerine method of keeping her tresses in curl. The result is very different from that produced by the drying, devitalizing waving iron. The hair appears more naturally wavy and curly, and the application is really beneficial to the life and growth of the hair.

Any druggist, of course, can supply the liquid silmerine. A small quantity should be put on just before doing up the hair, using for the purpose a clean toothbrush, drawing this down the full length of the hair from root to tip. The effect is delightfully surprising, and there is no discoloration, no stickiness, greasiness, nor any other unpleasant accompaniment. The hair is quite manageable, no matter how it is fashioned.

Gift of the Snow-Kissed Pines of the North

Your nose will harbor cold germs. Do not allow them to waste your vitality. Use at once Mayr's Pine Needle Balm and check them at the beginning. Disregard of common colds is one of the causes for the appalling death rate from flu and pneumonia in the last few years. Colds are infectious and dangerous. Keep a tube of Mayr's Pine Needle Balm in the house and at the first suggestion of a cold apply it to the nose. Catarrh, that embarrassing and troublesome condition, clears up quickly when Mayr's Pine Needle Balm is used. Sold in two sizes—30c and 60c tubes. Free trial by writing Geo. H. Mayr, 219 W. NEW BOOKS FOR THE WEEK AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

Any of these books will be sent by parcel post to card-holders on receipt of postage, in order of application.

SILVERWORK AND JEWELRY. By H. Wilson. The artistic metal crafts are here presented, with methods of instruction for working out the patterns and designs. Especially interesting are the chapters devoted to the Japanese and Oriental methods of treatment.

COMPOSITION. By Arthur W. Dow. The principles of composition are outlined with splendid illustrations in line and color and examples based upon the result of the author's many years of foreign study and American lectures.

KENTUCKY SUPERSTITIONS. By Daniel L. Thomas. The author, president of the Kentucky branch of the American Folklore Society, has collected the surviving superstitions of the South in a most entertaining and amusing book.

HIDE AND SEEK. By Christopher Morley. A book of enjoyable and humorous verse by the author of "Songs for a Little House."

THE BASKETRY BOOK. By Mary M. Blanchard. The old Indian craft of weaving and basket-making is so simply and clearly outlined by the author that the models may easily be copied.

A CONDENSED COURSE IN MOTION PICTURE PHOTOGRAPHY. By New York Institute of Photography. Fundamental principles explained in detail for the average worker. Special subjects such as ultra-speed pictures, motion study and cinematography in natural color are treated by experts. A valuable book.

"THAT DAMN Y." By Katherine Mayo. An impartial account of the Y. M. C. A. and its enormous service to the country told by this "Y" worker and investigator in vivid and realistic story form. A book of keen interest and general appreciation.

INTERIOR DECORATION. By Frank A. Parsons. Simple and practical details for the house-furnishing problem. Suitable and harmonious color schemes are suggested with an idea to personal expression in the surroundings. Contains several clever and interesting chapters on the individuality of the Old Masters as interpreted through their period furniture.

Canned Food Pays Admission.

Articles of canned food will be charged as the admission price to the tacky party given by the senior department of the St. Peter's Church, St. Louis and Warne avenues, Monday evening, at 8 o'clock. The food will be used in Thanksgiving baskets that are to be distributed among the needy.

To "Youth-ify" Gray, Streaked Hair

Ask anybody to guess how old you are, and notice how their first appraising glance is directed at your hair.

To be answered "You can't be more than thirty, I can tell by your hair," must give to any woman who is really forty or more a sense of pride and satisfaction.

But to become prematurely gray at 30 or 40, to look ten years older than you actually are—that is indeed a bitter experience. However, any woman can, with a bottle of Brownatone, restore to gray, faded and streaked hair all its maiden beauty and the identical color it had in girlhood, whether light golden, medium, dark brown or black. Brownatone is instant in results and absolutely harmless.

At all druggists: 50c and $1.50; two colors: "Light to Medium Brown" and "Dark Brown to Black."

Special Free Trial Offer.

For a free trial package of Brownatone send to The Kenton Pharmacal Co., 537 Coppin Bldg., Covington, Ky., enclosing 11 cents to pay postage, packing and war tax. Tear this out.

RED PEPPER FOR RHEUMATIC PAIN

Concentrated Heat Penetrates Instantly and Brings Quickest Relief Known.

Rheumatism, lumbago, neuritis, backache, stiff neck, sore muscles, strains, aching joints. When you are suffering so you can hardly get around, just try "Red Pepper Rub," and you will have the quickest relief known.

Nothing has such concentrated, penetrating heat as red peppers. Instant relief. Just as soon as you apply Red Pepper Rub you feel the tingling heat. In three minutes it warms the sore spot through and through. Frees the blood circulation, breaks up the congestion—and pain is gone.

Rowles Red Pepper Rub, made from red peppers, costs little at any drug store. Get a jar at once. Almost instant relief awaits you. Use it for colds in chest. No matter what you have used for pain or congestion, don't fail to try Red Pepper Rub.

Glass packed foods are dependent upon the seal

Glass, as everybody knows, is the perfect container for foods. It only requires a perfect seal. Glass-packed foods, therefore, depend upon the seal to retain their original purity and flavor.

For twenty-five years the leading packers have depended upon us to supply a seal to meet changing conditions. Our developments have often brought into use new packing methods and new styles of tumblers and jars. Now we put our trade-mark on our caps, so you may know that the packer is providing the best that he can get.

This Trade-Mark Means Safety

You can have no better assurance of safety sealing. Look for it on the Cap of all glass-packed foods. Buy only those which have it. Perhaps you paid little attention to this vital subject in the past. But don't neglect it in the future. Send for "The Story of Preserving." We send it free.

THE SUPREME ACHIEVEMENT IN MOTION PICTURE PRESENTATION

NOW OPEN

The Theater Beautiful!
Completely Remodeled at a Cost of $125,000.00.

Thousands who attended the formal reopening yesterday were most profuse in their praise of the new beauties of St. Louis' favorite motion-picture playhouse.

Continued and enthusiastic applause greeted each number of the first de luxe program, and the highest praise and most generous appreciation was accorded the new type of presentation made possible by the introduction of every late innovation of modern theater construction.

The refined atmosphere, the genuine comfort, the luxury, created in this theater by the harmonious blending of colors and materials, are unparalleled in this city and may be found in but few theaters in the entire country.

Welch & Co Celebrate for 2 Weeks Their 1st ANNIVERSARY SALE 1st

OUR GIGANTIC STOCK of QUALITY FURNITURE AT 40% DISCOUNT

The ready response to our appeal to the buying public of St. Louis and vicinity convinced us that the selling policy which we adopted a year ago with the opening of our store at this location appealed to them.

We believed that by displaying limited numbers of good designs of quality furniture and home furnishings, selling quantities of each and every pattern displayed, operating with the least possible expense, would make it possible for us to sell this quality furniture at much lower prices which would mean considerable savings to the buying public. One year has fully convinced us that this policy was the right policy, and we thank the public of St. Louis and vicinity for the immense volume of sales that have been extended us.

In this year we have made thousands of staunch, sincere friends, and are going to obtain many more with the great values offered in celebration of our First Anniversary.

We are not offering flowers, gifts, or premiums in appreciation of the confidence placed in our establishment, but are offering the most sensational values in quality furniture the public of St. Louis has been offered in many years. Space allows us to enumerate but a very few of the many hundreds of bonafide bargains that await you here, and with the exception of Sarola Phonographs, each and every article in our entire establishment has been reduced greatly in price for this special occasion.

Included in this sale are Columbia Graphonolas in mahogany, walnut and oak, all being offered at a discount of 20% from the regular retail selling prices.

Come to our store prepared to see the greatest values and you will not be disappointed.

We advise early selection. Purchases made now will be held for future delivery without charge if desired.

Flonzaley Quartet Here Dec. 14.

The Flonzaley Quartet, generally considered the most perfect chamber music organization of the day, is announced for a concert at Sheldon Memorial Auditorium, on the evening of Dec. 14. The members of the quartet remain the same as in its visit here last winter—Adolfo Betti, first violin; Alfred Pochon, second violin; Louis Bailly, viola, and Iwan d'Archambeau, 'cellist.

MME. LASHANSKA TO BE SYMPHONY SOLOIST

Two New Works Also Featured for Orchestral Concerts of Friday and Saturday.

Two compositions hitherto unplayed in St. Louis and the debut of Mme. Hulda Lashanska, soprano, as a symphony soloist, will be the feature of Director Zach's program on Friday afternoon and Saturday evening at the Odeon. Mme. Lashanska has sung here before, however, in a song recital at Hotel Statler. Her contribution will be three arias, as follows: "Deh vieni, non tardar," from "Le Nozze di Figaro," and "Ah, lo so," from "Il Flauto Magico," both by Mozart; and "Depuis le jour," from Charpentier's "Louise."

Liszt's first symphonic poem, "Ce qu'on entend sur la montagne," will have its initial hearing at these concerts. It is based on a poem by Victor Hugo, in which the bard, standing on a mountain top, hears two chants ever ascending to his ears—the serene, majestic voice of nature and man's endless cries of pain and rage, his curses and blasphemies.

The other novelty is the Serenade, Op. 36, by Vlasidlaw Novak, who is considered the first living master of Czecho-Slovak music. This composer has been best known in this country through his piano pieces, one book of which was dedicated to Paderewski.

The complete program follows:

Overture to "Coriolanus" (Beethoven).

Symphonic Poem, No. 1, "Ce qu'on Entend sur la Montagne" (Liszt).
(First time.)

Arias with orchestra: (a) "Des vieni non tardar," from "Le Nozze di Figaro" (Mozart). (b) "Ah, lo so," from "Il Flauto Magico" (Mozart).

Serenade, Op. 36 (Novak).
(First time.)

Aria, "Depuis le Jour" from "Louise" (Charpentier).

Overture to "The Bartered Bride" (Smetana).

Ann Niccolls "Pop" Soloist.

At the third popular concert, to be given this afternoon at the Odeon, the soloist will be Ann Niccolls, pianist. She is to play Saint-Saens' Concerto No. 4, in C minor, for pianoforte and orchestra. The program is as follows:

March, "Triumphal Entrance of the Boyers" (Halvorsen).

Overture to "William tell" (Rossini).

We Guarantee this New Edison to be an exact Duplicate of the Instruments that have amazed millions in 4,000 "Tone-Tests." Come and hear it.

Let us play this instrument for you. It is an exact duplicate of the famous Original Laboratory Model which cost Thomas A. Edison 8 million dollars to develop.

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

The tone-test is the acid-test of a phonograph.

The artist sings. Suddenly he ceases to sing—and the New Edison takes up the same song alone. Is there any difference between the living voice and that voice as RE-CREATED by the New Edison?

4000 such tone-tests have been given. 50 different artists have made them. 8 million people have heard them. In every test, human ear has been unable to detect any difference between living voice and RE-CREATED voice.

What other phonograph manufacturer dare claim this—much less guarantee it?

Insist upon seeing this Laboratory Model of the New Edison. Let us give you Edison's unique Realism Test. Let us show you clippings from America's leading newspapers which substantiate all we say about the New Edison.

Our Budget Plan is your opportunity to get your New Edison now and pay for it at your own convenience

Girls! Have Beautiful Hair Like This

Lustrous Hair—Soft—Fluffy and Abundant—Easily Attained by Wonderful Beautifier That Thousands Praise.

Parisian Sage Surprises and Delights—It Positively Does Not Change the Natural Color of the Hair.

Beautiful hair is every woman's birthright and one of her greatest charms.

It is the duty of everyone not only to preserve the natural beauty of the hair, but to improve it. You cannot afford to neglect it, and just a little care will work wonders.

If your hair is scanty, wispy, brittle, dry, losing its natural color and luster, and full of dandruff, it needs immediate attention. Don't wait, but begin now—tonight—to help it regain its life and beauty.

Any good druggist can supply you with Parisian Sage, which is guaranteed to keep away all dandruff, stop falling hair, promote a new growth and beautify it, or money refunded.

Parisian Sage is perfectly harmless. A clean antiseptic and daintily perfumed liquid—neither greasy or sticky—and easy to use.

If you want a fresh, clean scalp, and a wealth of lustrous, live-looking hair that's easy to arrange attractively, try this simple home treatment.

NEW TUBERCULAR VACCINE BEING TRIED

Reported Preventive Said to Have Been Successfully Used on Cattle by Investigators.

St. Louis physicians read with interest the reports cabled from Paris last week to the effect that investigators of the Pasteur Institute had discovered an anti-tuberculosis vaccine, which had proved effective with cattle, and that further experiments were being conducted, with a view to modifying the cure for use on human beings.

Tuberculosis "cures" are no new thing. In fact, they come and go with periodic regularity, and while some of them have a limited value, others are soon forgotten.

Dr. Walter McNab Miller, executive secretary of the Missouri Tuberculosis Association, when shown the Paris cable, advised that caution be used in accepting the inference drawn from the announcement of the Pasteur Institute, that "the beginning of the end of the great white plague" had come.

Discovery by Koch.

"The 'beginning,'" said Dr. Miller, "came with the discovery of the tubercle bacillus by Robert Koch in 1882. Koch himself at one time thought and announced that a preventive and cure had been found and tested out in his tuberculin. Since then many eminent pathologists and medical practitioners have announced that the long-sought specific has been found, but so far their fond hopes have been doomed to failure.

"The eminent French pathologists, Drs. Calmette and Guerin, whose names are mentioned as authority for the present discovery, have no peers in preventive medicine. Dr. Calmette is a director of the Pasteur Institute and Dr. Guerin is chief of the veterinary service of the institute. Any announcement that they may make or authorize will be taken seriously by the medical profession of the entire world."

According to advices from Paris the experiments were conducted by Drs. Calmette and Guerin at Lille before the war and even during the German occupation. They began in 1908 with 10 Brittany calves from 8 to 10 months old. Six of the 10 were inoculated with the vaccine and four were not inoculated, but all were placed in a stable in which were five cows known to have tuberculosis. The experiments were interrupted by the Germans, who captured Lille in the early days of the war and requisitioned the infected cattle. When they were killed, however, it was found the inoculated animals were entirely free of the disease. Further experiments will be carried on in a laboratory being built in New Guinea, where monkeys will be inoculated with the vaccine for the purpose of adapting it to use on human beings.

Hope for Specific.

While hopeful that a specific cure for tuberculosis will be found in time, the Missouri Tuberculosis Association plans to continue its fight for the eradication of the disease on the lines followed since its incorporation in 1907. This work is conducted throughout the year and is largely educational in its character. It has resulted in a steady declination of the death rate from tuberculosis in the State, from 5113 in 1911 to 3616 in 1919. It is financed entirely by the sale of Tuberculosis Christmas Seals, which will be placed on sale in all parts of the State this year, as usual, Dec. 1 to 24.

HOW TO MAKE PINE COUGH SYRUP AT HOME

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest.

Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup.

To make the best pine cough remedy that money can buy, put 2½ ounces of Pinex in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant.

You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistently loose from the formation of phlegm. The cause is the same—inflamed membranes—and this Pinex and Syrup combination will stop it—usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

BENEFIT PERFORMANCE FOR ORPHAN ASYLUM

'Beaucaire,' With Marion Green, Supported by Original Company, to Be Given Dec. 6.

A benefit performance of the musical comedy "Beaucaire," with Marion Green, the noted English actor, supported by the original London and New York company, will be given the night of Dec. 6 at the American Theater. The proceeds will be used for the support of the St. Louis Protestant Orphans' Asylum. A benefit performance is given annually for the upkeep of the home.

Following the entertainment at the theater a buffet supper and dance will be given at the Hotel Statler, the proceeds likewise to go into the fund for the home.

A painting by William V. Schevill, the St. Louis artist, will be sold at auction at the performance at the theater, also for the benefit of the home.

Hope to Get $5500.

It is the hope of members of the Arrangements Committee to raise $5500 toward the expenses of next year's maintenance of the home.

Many of the boxes for the performance at the theater already have been sold, and a campaign is being conducted under the direction of Mrs. Clinton L. Whittemore, chairman of the Ticket Committee, for the sale of other seats.

Among those who will give box parties at the performance are: Mrs. E. K. Love, Mrs. Clinton Whittemore, Mrs. Alex Robertson, Mrs. Dwight Dana, Mrs. George Steedman, Mrs. Ewin Steedman, Mrs. J. P. Tirrill, Mrs. Samuel Davis, Mrs. Charles Wiggins, Mrs. Edward Faust, Mrs. Richard Deacon, Mrs. H. J. Steinbraeder, Mrs. Howard Holmes, Mrs. Robert Holmes, Mrs. Sam McCluney, Mrs. James McCluney, Mrs. Frank Watts, Mrs. Sterling Edmunds, Mrs. James Ford and Mrs. Ingram Boyd.

The home was founded 86 years ago by Mrs. Rebecca Budd, and at present cares for 75 orphan boys and girls. For several years it occupied a cottage at Seventh and Morgan streets, but in 1869 was moved to Webster Groves.

The home is partially supported by the boy inmates, who care for a 12-acre farm, owned by the institution, growing vegetables and attending to several milch cows.

$25 a Month a Child.

It is estimated that it will take $25 a month per child for next year.

The following committees will have charge of the performance and supper: Arrangements Committee—Mrs. Clinton Whittemore, Mrs. James McCluney, Mrs. Dwight Dana, Mrs. Blakesley Collins, Mrs Sterling Edmunds and Mrs. Robert Burkham; Publicity Committee—Mrs. Henry Boeckler, Mrs. Benjamin Bush, Mrs. William Lemp and Mrs. Edward Goltra; Program Committee—Miss Helen Teasdale, Mrs. Cecil Gregg, Mrs. William Foley, Mrs. A. R. Deacon, Mrs. H. J. Steinbreder, Mrs. Alex Robertson, Mrs. Alden Little, Mrs. Robert Holmes and Miss Georgia Elliott; Printing and Invitation Committee—Mrs. A. R. Deacon, Mrs. Howard Holes, Mrs. J. Porter Tirril; Ticket Committee—Mrs. Clinton Whittemore, Mrs. Alden Little, Mrs. James McCluney, Mrs. Charles Wiggins, Mrs. A. T. Terry, Mrs. Chouteau Dyer and Miss Eleanore Hough.

Pluto Jewel Heaters

A Detroit Jewel Hot Blast Heater. The hot blast tube feeds warm air over the gas that forms just over the coal, causing this gas to burn. Thus the heater gets a maximum of heat out of even a poor grade of coal and it does away with much of the smoke and soot.

Wilson Heaters

Wilson Hot Blast Heaters, also Charter Oak Heaters and Heating Stoves are sold here at prices as low as any quoted anywhere.

Vacuum Cleaners

A complete line, featuring the better known makes of both electric and hand-power suction cleaners.

Electric Cleaners	$30 and Up
Hand-Power Cleaners	$8.00 and Up

Carpet Sweepers

$5.50 Value... $3.95

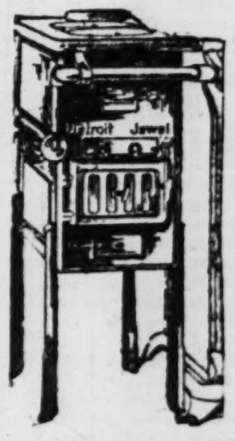
The easy-running kind that picks up lint and bits of thread so easily.

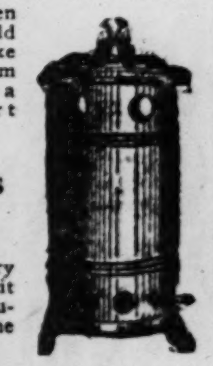
Sewing Machines

Jewel and Standard Rotary Machines at prices ranging from $49.75 upwards. Also some sample Machines at extraordinarily low prices.



Kitchen Heater

The Detroit Jewel Kitchen Heater—as shown in the illustration. It attaches to the side of your gas range. Start it with the gas starter and then it will burn anything — even rubbish. And on cold mornings it will make your kitchen warm and comfortable in a surprisingly short time.



Gas Heaters
$2.75

A splendidly serviceable Heater at a very small price. Inexpensive to run, too, for it does not burn a great deal of gas. Has double wall construction and a perfect blue flame burner.

RECORDS COVER A CENTURY

One of the interesting places in Lowell, Mass., is the old apothecary shop on Merrimack Street, established in 1827. This location is still a drug store. The old prescription books have been preserved and form an interesting record covering nearly a century.

Perhaps one of the most interesting books is that of the year 1855. On one of the pages of this book, that dated June 9th, 1855, is written the original prescription for Father John's Medicine. This prescription was compounded for the Reverend Father John O'Brien at the old drug store on that date, and was so successful in treating Father John's ailment, which was a severe cold and cough, that he recommended the medicine to his friends and parishioners. In going to the drug store and calling for the medicine they always asked for "Father John's Medicine," and in this way the medicine got its name and was advertised.

Father John's Medicine is a safe family medicine for colds, coughs, and as a tonic and body-builder, because it does not contain opium, morphine, chloroform, or any other poisonous drugs, or alcohol, but is all pure, wholesome nourishment.

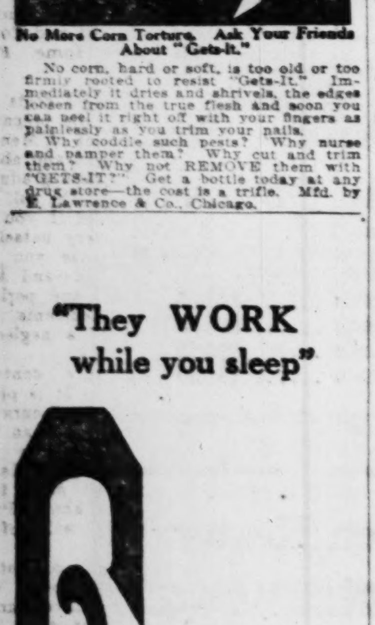
For Old or New Corns- "Gets-It"

Three Drops Shrivels Them Up So You Can Lift Them Off.

Thirty seconds after you touch the corn with this liquid corn remover the jabbing, stabbing pain of it stops—for all time.



No More Corn Torture. Ask Your Friends About "Gets-It."

No corn, hard or soft, is too old or too firmly rooted to resist "Gets-It." Immediately it dries and shrivels, the edges loosen from the true flesh and soon you can peel it right off with your fingers as painlessly as you trim your nails. Why coddle such pests? Why nurse and pamper them? Why cut and trim them? Why not REMOVE them with "GETS-IT?" Get a bottle today at any drug store—the cost is a trifle. Mfd. by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago.

Cascarets

Take one or two Cascarets occasionally to keep your liver and bowels active. When bilious, constipated, headachy, unstrung or for a cold, upset stomach, or bad breath, nothing acts so nicely as Cascarets. Children love them too. 10, 25, 50 cents.

THEATER CHEER FOR THANKSGIVING WEEK

Florence Moore in "Breakfast in Bed;" Chauncey Olcott in "Macushla."

For Thanksgiving week the theaters have turned to light and genial farce. This evening the Shubert-Jefferson will present the boisterous and rollicking Florence Moore in "Breakfast in Bed," a farce comedy; while the American will offer the melodious Chauncey Olcott in his familiar romantic comedy, "Macushla."

"Breakfast in Bed," an A. H. Woods production, follows the familiar formula of complications and compromising mixups. Miss Moore, as the heroine, becomes involved with three men—her own fiance; his best friend, who can obtain a fortune from an uncle if he can prove himself happily married, and a Prince from foreign parts who has come to search for a young woman whose face he has seen on the screen. There is nothing left for the heroine to do but dance as Cleopatra at a masquerade ball.

"Macushla," by Rida Johnson Young, is the traditional Irish story of the hero who suffers the stings and arrows of adversity, but has a sweet tenor voice which puts the villain to rout, and warbles its way into the affections of the heroine. Olcott will have numerous songs, among them "Macushla Asthore," "That's How the Shannon Flows," "I'll Miss You, Old Ireland; God Bless You, Good-by," and "It's an Irish Girl I Love." Both theaters will give matinees on Thanksgiving day.

A charming new comedy, "Not So Long Ago," with Eva Le Gallienne and Sidney Blackmer in the chief parts, will be seen at the Shubert-Jefferson next Sunday night. During the same week a new musical show, the William Rock Revue, will be presented at the American, with Billy B. Van, James J. Corbett and Marion Sunshine in the company.

Bee Palmer, formerly of Ziegfeld's "Follies" and an exponent of the shimmy, leads the Orpheum bill this week with a dance travesty called "Oh, Bee!" She has her own jazz band, and in her support are Dick Himber and Al Siegel. George Kelly will appear in his own one-act satire, "The Flattering Word." Other attractions are Frances Pritchard, in "The Dance Duel;" Loe Laurie Jr., comedian; Dainty Marie, trapeze performer; Kenny and Hollis, in "The Two Doctors;" Dave Harris, in syncopated numbers; and Sylvia Loyal and a company.

Features at other theaters are: Columbia, Paul and Walter Levarre, gymnasts; Grand, the Five Violin Misses; Rialto, the protean Doc Baker; and Empress, "Somewhere in France," a one-act comedy. The Gayety offers the Maids in America troupe in "Varieties a la Mode," the company being headed by Bobby Barry. The Standard's announcement is "Girls From Joyland."

$500,000 GRAPE JUICE PLANT TO BE BUILT IN ARKANSAS

Welch Co. Announces It Will Begin Construction at Springdale in Spring.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., Nov. 20.—The Welch Grape Juice Co. will erect a $500,000 plant at Springdale, Ark., it was announced before 800 fruit growers at Springdale, Monday, by J. F. Welch, president of the company.

Construction of the plant will be started in the spring. The plant will give employment to 150 people the year round. Additional factories will be built as the fruit growing industry develops, Welch said. The first unit will serve a territory covering a radius of 150 miles. The plant will require a minimum of 2000 tons of grapes the first year. This tonnage, it is estimated, can be obtained from 750 acres. The farmers promised to set out a minimum of 2500 acres of grapes next year, which will begin bearing by the time the plant is ready in 1922.

Welch told the fruit growers who were assembled from all parts of Southern Missouri, Northern Arkansas and Eastern Oklahoma that his company had decided upon the Ozark section after careful investigation of conditions in Iowa, West Virginia, Tennessee and Washington.

MISSOURI BAR ASSOCIATION TO MEET HERE DEC. 3 AND 4

Conference of Judges of the State to Precede the Annual Convention.

The annual meeting of the Missouri Bar Association will be held in the Hotel Statler Friday and Saturday, Dec. 3 and 4. The conference of judges will precede the meeting one day.

The address of the President, Robert Lamar of Houston, Mo., will be given at the opening session and at the afternoon session of the opening day Judge John T. White, Supreme Court Commissioner, will give an address on "The Constitution and the Courts." Judge W. D. Green of West Plains, and A. T. Dumm of Jefferson City will be speakers at an evening session.

Judge Henry Olson, chief justice of the Municipal Court of Chicago, will talk at the Saturday morning session, the afternoon session will be devoted to business and the annual banquet will occur in the evening. The speaker will be Fred Dumont Smith of Hutchinson, Kan.

Vesper Services at Second Baptist.

Vesper musical services will be held at the Second Baptist Church, King's Highway, Washington and McPherson avenues, from 4:30 to 5:10 p. m. each third Sunday, beginning today and ending April 17. Music will be furnished by P. G. Anton, cellist, and Arthur Lieber, organist.

Health Authorities Alarmed At Increasing Death Rate From Kidney Diseases

60% of 100,000 Deaths Each Year Are Due to Neglect

In our pursuit of the mighty dollar, we too often are absorbed in the topics of the day, pleasure, etc., to stop and consider our health. Stop now—think—kidney diseases caused 100,000 deaths last year. Are you going to be included in this year's toll? Why, you will exclaim, do so many die, why are the health authorities so concerned; the answer is, we bolt down our food, take no exercise, neglect our sleep and otherwise subject our system to all sorts of abuse. Is it any wonder then the kidneys become diseased and fail in their duties of poison elimination.

Poisons are constantly being created in our bodies and if the kidneys fail to carry them off they are absorbed by the blood, causing ill health and misery in the form of headaches, backaches, tired feeling, indigestion, etc.

You may avoid considerable suffering if you heed nature's warnings and assist the kidneys. Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Remedy is a reliable preparation made from herbs and other beneficial ingredients that has been used with excellent results for 40 years. It assists the kidneys in their important duties, strengthens and helps repair the wasted tissues. It is very effective and is used in thousands of homes. Read what this grateful woman says:

"I wish to say that your remedies have been used in our family for about fifteen years. We are never without a bottle of Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver remedy in our home, and it has saved many a doctor's bill. It is a wonderful medicine for all diseases of the kidneys and liver."—Florence E. Schmidt, R. F. D., No. 1, Dunkirk, O.

Why Be Skinny?

It's Easy to Be Plump, Popular and Attractive

It's easy to be plump, popular and attractive instead of being thin, angular and scrawny. Almost invariably the trouble is due to weak nerves and consequent failure to assimilate your food. You may eat heartily, but owing to the lack of nervous energy and impoverished blood you don't get the benefit from the food you eat. All of this can be remedied very quickly by taking with each meal a five-grain tablet of Blood-Iron Phosphate. This quickly strengthens the nervous system, enriches the blood and increases its oxygen-carrying power, and in a remarkably short time the average thin, weak, nervous man or woman begins not only to put on flesh, but also begins to look and feel better. Clean appetite, strength and endurance are improved, dull eyes become bright, and, unless afflicted with some organic complaint, there is no reason why, if you take Blood-Iron Phosphate regularly, you should not soon look and feel much better and many years younger. Deposit $1.50 today with Judge & Dolph, Wolff-Wilson, Johnson Bros., or any other druggist for enough Blood-Iron Phosphate for a three weeks' treatment. Use as directed, and if at the end of three weeks you aren't delighted go back and get your money. Your druggist, a man you know, is authorized to give it to you.

Eye Specialist and Medical Author Report on Wonderful Remedy To Strengthen the Eyesight

Say It Strengthens Eyesight 50% in One Week's Time in Many Instances

New York.—Dr. Smith, a well-known eye specialist, and Dr. Judkins, a Massachusetts physician and medical author, make the following reports after a thorough test of a popular remedy for the eyes:

Says Dr. Smith: "When my attention was first called to it I was inclined to be skeptical. But it is a rule of mine to give every new treatment a chance to prove its value. Having specialized in eye work for many years I feel qualified to express an intelligent opinion on remedies for the eyes. Since this one has created such a sensation I welcomed the opportunity to test it. I began to use it in my practice a little over a year ago, and I am frank to say that some of the results I have accomplished with Bon-Opto not only astonish myself, but also other physicians with whom I have talked about it, and I advise every thoughtful physician to give Bon-Opto the same careful trial I have and there is no doubt in my mind that he will come to the conclusion I have, that it opens the door for the cure of many eye troubles which have heretofore been difficult to cope with. I have had individuals who had worn glasses for years tell me they have dispensed with them through the use of Bon-Opto. In my own practice I have seen it strengthen the eyesight more than 50 per cent in one week's time. I have also used it with surprising results in cases of work-strained eyes, pink eye, inflamed lids, catarrhal conjunctivitis, smarting, painful, aching, itching eyes, eyes weakened from colds, smoke, sun, dust and wind, watery eyes, blurred vision, and, in fact, many other conditions too numerous to mention in this report. A new and striking case that has just been brought to my attention is that of a girl 12 years old. Two prominent eye specialists after a thorough examination, decided, according to her father, that in order to save the sight of her right eye, the left must be removed. While awaiting an opportunity for the operation and still undecided as to its wisdom, her father was told it would do no harm to use Bon-Opto. In less than three days a marked improvement was noticed. At the end of a week the inflammation had almost disappeared, and at the end of six weeks the eye was pronounced saved. Just think what the saving of that eye means to this little girl! Another case is that of a lady 93 years old. She came to me with dull vision and extreme inflammation of the lids and the conjunctiva was almost raw. After two weeks' use of Bon-Opto the lids were absolutely normal and her eyes are as bright as many a girl of 16."

Dr. Judkins, Massachusetts physician and medical author, formerly chief of clinics in the Union General Hospital, Boston, Mass., and formerly house surgeon at the New England Eye and Ear Infirmary of Portland, Maine, says:

"I have found oculists too prone to operate and opticians too willing to prescribe glasses, while neglecting the simple formulas which form the basis of Bon-Opto, which, in my opinion, is a remarkable remedy for the cure and prevention of many eye disorders. Its success in developing and strengthening the eyesight will soon make eyeglasses old-fashioned and the use of Bon-Opto as common as that of the tooth brush. I am thoroughly convinced from my experience with Bon-Opto that it will strengthen the eyesight at least 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances."

Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses and many who wear glasses will be glad to know that according to Drs. Smith and Judkins there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored by this remarkable remedy, and many who once wore glasses say they have laid them aside. One man says after using it:

"I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for 15 days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eye-strain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and close work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now and have discarded my long-distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now which for several years have looked like a dim blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited in this easy manner: Go to any drug store and get a botle of Bon-Opto tablets. Dissolve one tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and use from two to four times a day. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little, it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE: Another prominent physician, to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, the Bon-Opto prescription is truly a wonderful eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto, referred to above, is not a patent medicine or a secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time, in many instances, or refund the money. It is dispensed under guaranty by all good druggists in this city, including the Enderle, Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson stores.

20,000 LEGION MEN TO HELP PROMOTE FALL FESTIVAL

Program Ranging From Grand Opera to Prize Fighting Will Be Given From Dec. 7 to 12.

GEN. LEONARD WOOD WILL PARTICIPATE

Pageantry, Cabaret, Military Drills Listed as Entertainment Features During Week of Festivities.

A program ranging from prize fighting to grand opera has been announced for the first annual fall festival of the American Legion of St. Louis at the Coliseum, Dec. 7 to 12, inclusive. Twenty thousand former service men, members of the legion in St. Louis, are co-operating in the arrangements.

The Publicity Committee has listed the entertainment features for the week to include pageanty, cabaret, military drills, boxing bouts, grand opera numbers, dancing each night, jazz music, six brass bands, air raids, athletic features, awards of prizes, side shows, novelty concessions and cafes.

F. W. Galbraith Jr., national commander of the legion, and Major-General Leonard Wood will participate in the opening of the festival on Tuesday night, Dec. 7. The Rev. John W. Inzer, Adjutant for the legion in Alabama and well known army chaplain, has accepted an invitation to attend. Mme. Schuman-Heinck will be present on Friday night, Dec. 10.

Indorse Movement.

Mayor Kiel, together with representatives of the Advertising Club, Red Cross, Chamber of Commerce, Optimist Club and St. Louis Convention and Publicity Bureau have indorsed the festival movement. Charles E. Pagett is chairman of the Executive Committee and H. S. Townsend is chairman of the Festival Committee.

The Societe de Francaise, British-Canadian War Veterans, Salvation Army and other patriotic and welfare organizations are co-operating with the committee arranging the event.

In a statement issued yesterday, Chairman Pagett said: "We of the American Legion feel that every man, woman and child in the State of Missouri should know of the work of our organization and the ideals for which we stand. It is our purpose in giving this festival to convey some idea of our allegiance to these ideals for which we fought. We want to inspire our comrades with a determination to be big, fearless, resourceful and potent.

"There is no organization in St. Louis, religious, civic, social or commercial, that will not benefit by co-operating with these red-blooded American boys. Our organization is constantly being called upon to participate in humanitarian and community activities and the funds derived from the festival will be used to defray our expenses. It is our purpose to show the citizens of St. Louis that the American Legion is one of the strongest civic forces in the community."

Fifteen Hundred Cars.

Fifteen hundred street cars will carry an advertisement on the fender board in front of the car for one week prior to the opening of the event, calling attention to the festival. This concession has been arranged by the ex-service men and members of the Legion who are employed by the United Railways. These employes will pay for the printing and paste the advertisements on the boards. Col. A. T. Perkins and his secretary, W. Glenn, of the United Railways, both members of the Obershon-Dennison Post, are in charge of the work.

Individual concessions will be taken over by a large number of the posts. The Fred W. Stockham Post has appointed Neal W. Brown chairman of the Arrangement Committee for operating the "Madelon Cafe." Several acts of dancing and singing, including children's numbers under the auspices of Mrs. Nat S. Brown, president of the Children of American Loyalty League, will be features nightly at the cafe. The Societe de Francaise will also cooperate with the post at this concession. Music will be furnished by a special orchestra, directed by Jules Field, a violinist and member of the post.

The activities during the festival are also expected to be stimulated through the publication of a daily newspaper under the auspices of the American Legion.

PAINLEVE COMPLETES TOUR

Former French Premier Finds China Wants Better Educational Facilities.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Paul Painleve, former Premier of France, has returned to Paris from his mission to China, having completed a full round-trip of the world. On the outward journey he went by way of America, but returned through Suez.

He told the correspondents that China had undertaken to set aside 100,000 francs yearly to support an institute for higher education for Chinese in Paris. A section dependent on the University of Paris is to be created in one of the Chinese universities and a sum of 500,000 francs has been voted for this purpose on condition that France promise a like sum.

AID THE AFFLICTED

4th Red Cross Roll Call ✚ November 17th to 25th

You give aid in advance of the cry for help when you give to the Red Cross. Its preparedness for all emergencies is constant.

Within a few minutes after the explosion in Wall Street, September 16, 75 Red Cross doctors and nurses, backed by trucks of first-aid supplies, were ministering to the injured. Red Cross ambulances took the victims to the hospitals. Your dollar made this instant aid possible.

At the time of this tragedy, when your heart welled up with a desire to help, did you realize that you had already helped when you answered to the roll call last year?

Is it not a wonderful satisfaction to know, as you read the news story of a great disaster, that you have helped allay the suffering?

What greater charity can you do so economically than renew your membership?

Says Time to Make Mentho-Laxene Syrup

Anyone Can Make a Full Pint of Laxative, Curative Cold and Cough Medicine Cheaply at Home. First Dose Relieves.

Everybody is subject to colds and coughs at this season. Be prepared! Have on hand a full pint of Mentho-Laxene syrup that checks and aborts colds, relieves coughing and gradually brings permanent relief. The full and best benefits are derived if you begin taking it at the very outset of a cold or cough—because you can check or abort the cold—and save many hours of distress and perhaps ward off bronchitis, pneumonia, and other serious results of a neglected cold.

Mentho-Laxene is pure, contains no opiates or narcotics. It is pleasant, penetrating, healing and curative beyond any preparation you can buy ready made. Full directions and guarantee are with every bottle of Mentho-Laxene. It will more than please you or The Blackburn Products Co., Dayton, Ohio, will refund your money.

Hundreds of thousands of bottles of Mentho-Laxene have been sold and not over 50 people have wanted their money back. That tells how good it is. 4,000 barrels used last year. Why? Because it's best and cheapest.

Says His Prescription Has Powerful Influence Over Rheumatism

Mr. James H. Allen suffered for years with rheumatism. Many times this terrible disease left him helpless and unable to work.

He finally decided, after years of ceaseless study, that no one can be free from rheumatism until the accumulated impurities, commonly called uric acid deposits, were dissolved in the joints and muscles and expelled from the body.

With this idea in mind he consulted physicians, made experiments and finally compounded a prescription that quickly and completely banished every sign and symptom of rheumatism from his system.

He freely gave his discovery to others, who took it with what might be called marvelous success. After years of urging he decided to let sufferers everywhere know about his discovery through the newspapers. Wolff-Wilson Co. has been appointed agent for Allenrhu in this vicinity, with the understanding that they will freely return the purchase money on the first two bottles to all who state they received no benefit.

JAMES K. HACKETT A STAR IN LONDON

American Actor Produces Macbeth in England With Mrs. Pat Campbell in the Cast.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Quite a stir was created in the theatrical world here this month when James K. Hackett, the American actor, made an elaborate production of "Macbeth" at the Aldwych Theater with Mrs. Pat Campbell as his co-star. Mr. Hackett himself appeared as Macbeth, with Mrs. Campbell as Lady Macbeth. With the exception of Mr. Hackett the company was entirely an English one. It was Mr. Hackett's first appearance in England as an actor, although he is well known here, and his wife, Beatrice Beckley, is a well-known English actress. Reviewing the performance the London Times critic said:

"Mr. Hackett is an eminently reasonable, not to say reasoning, Macbeth. He desires to make Macbeth's observations, which are sometimes introspective and sometimes discursive, perfectly clear to his audience. But Macbeth's phraseology is in fact often obscure and his vocabulary now and then obsolete, and the actor, bent on clearness, is driven to an emphasis that sounds expository and almost pedagogic. He is so solicitous that we shall be in no doubt about the matter of the speeches that he is apt to let us miss some of their music. As Macbeth was much of a dreamer, given to falling from action (and at most inconvenient moments, too) into contemplation, when he would say things of great lyrical beauty about sleep, life, the passage of time, and so forth—in a word was a poet a ses heures—we cannot help feeling that the music of his utterances is of prime importance.

"We do not say that Mr. Hackett is prosaic, but his Macbeth is more notably sensible and intelligible than contemplative and lyrical. His voice is clear and resonant rather than melodious. You get, then, a good, sound, competent performance, but you do not get a performance of rare beauty. It is a performance that satisfies your reason rather than affects your nerves; you are convinced, but not thrilled by it; it does not shake and haunt you. It may be that the character is better to read and ruminate over than to see acted. Acting always tends to bring into undue prominence the flesh-and-blood, the matter-of-fact element of a part, to the detriment of the sheer poetry. Perhaps that is why few actors are recorded to have been at their best in Macbeth. We are still looking for the ideal, the wonderful Macbeth, and very likely are crying for the moon. Meanwhile Mr. Hackett gives us his good, sound, competent performance, and we must be content with that. The audience last night were apparently more than content, to judge from the volume of their cheers. Probably, however, these were in part a tribute of hospitality to a stranger within our gates. Mr. Hackett is an American actor—though it would be a finer ear than ours that could detect anything American in his accent.

"Mrs. Patrick Campbell's Lady Macbeth strikes us as a good match for Mr. Hackett's Macbeth: a thoroughly serviceable performance rather than one of haunting beauty. Her choicest talent, as Mr. Bernard Shaw once remarked, is vituperative, and when Lady Macbeth has to upbraid her husband she is fully equal to the situation. But her sleep-walking scene is not exquisitely pathetic—and, indeed, her sleep-walking is rather too wide-awake. Mr. Leslie Faber makes the most of Macduff's one opportunity, and the three witches are more than usually shrill and cacophonous and uncanny. Their voices are heard echoing in the play, even when they do not appear, and, indeed, occasionally in the interact music, of which there is no lack."

Cotton Receipts Record Broken.

By the Associated Press.

GALVESTON, Tex., Nov. 20.—All previous records for cotton receipts were broken here when the total bales received passed the million-bale mark early in November. Last year this mark was not reached until Dec. 9. According to cotton exporters, producers have shown little desire to hold their staple on the land until a market has been created. Cotton is selling for around 20 cents a pound at present, as compared with approximately 42 cents at this time last year.

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You Can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur.

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is mussy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant.

Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger.

Cream soups better than you've ever made before!

Hot tomato soup—how good it is for luncheon or supper! It is good the way you make it now, but next time, make it this way with Libby's Evaporated Milk:

2 cups Libby's Evaporated Milk	2 cups tomato
1-4 teaspoon salt	1-4 cup water
1 teaspoon sugar	2 teaspoons minced onion
1 tablespoon flour	1-4 teaspoon soda
cayenne pepper

Scald the milk and thicken with the flour, which should be rubbed into a little cold milk to make a smooth paste and this added slowly to the hot milk. Stir constantly for a few moments while the flour cooks. Add salt, sugar and the cayenne pepper mixed with the water.

Cook the tomato and the minced onion for ten minutes and strain. There should be no lumps or seeds left in. Return to the fire and add the soda. Combine the tomato and the cooked milk and serve at once with croutons. Serves six

See how much richer Libby's Evaporated Milk makes all your cream soups—and everything in which you use it. It is fine, pure milk with more than half the moisture removed; nothing added. It is sterilized—to come to you fresh and pure.

And it is so economical, so convenient you will wonder how you ever kept house without it!

Libby's Milk comes from the most famous dairy lands of the United States. It is so rich that when your recipe says milk you dilute Libby's Milk half and half with water. Whenever you want cream, use Libby's Milk just as it comes from the can, rich and creamy.

Ask your grocer today for this famous milk.

Best Treatment for Catarrh, Croup, Coughs and Colds

Guaranteed by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co.—No Stomach Dosing

HYOMEI INHALER

Breathe HYOMEI for all diseases of the breathing organs. It is guaranteed.

In case of croup, which is very common in children, send for a doctor at once. In the meantime pour 30 drops of HYOMEI into a bowl of boiling water and hold the child's head over it; covered with a towel or cloth so that only the air filled with HYOMEI vapor is breathed.

This treatment has saved many a child's life and mothers of croupy children should always have HYOMEI on hand.

For coughs, colds and catarrh, breathing HYOMEI through the inhaler is usually sufficient.

Many people, however, use the HYOMEI vapor treatment in conjunction with the inhaler.

The vapor treatment is best taken just before going to bed; it only takes about five minutes time. Pour a teaspoonful of HYOMEI into a bowl three-quarters full of boiling water, cover head and bowl with towel, and breathe the vapor that arises deep into the lungs. By this method many a hard cold has been broken up over night. A HYOMEI outfit consists of a bottle of HYOMEI and a hard rubber pocket inhaler. At Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and druggists everywhere.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

"Young Man" writes: "I have a blood discratia which causes me to break out on face and body with great large yellow pimples resembling boils and have had carbuncles recurrently for several years. This weakens me and gives me severe headaches."

Answer: Doubtless you have neglected the proper functioning of your body and poisons have accumulated and are coming through the skin instead of through the natural passages of waste. Take a teaspoonful of elixir Chin-Cea compound after each meal for several months.

"A Friend" writes: "I will be ever grateful if you can advise me how to reduce my weight."

Answer: I recommend Arbolone tablets.

"Marie" writes: "I seem to be healthy, but am so dreadfully thin. Please advise if it is possible for a thin person to gain weight."

Answer: It is possible and hundreds have gained by taking Hypo-Nuclane tablets regularly for several months.

"Workman" asks: "I am so affected with painful kidneys that I cannot work regularly. My sleep is disturbed, backaches and often chills and fever making me real sick for a day."

Answer: A good tonic, soothing and neutralizing medicine for such complaints is Balmwort Tablets. Try them and continue a few weeks and I am sure you will write me of your recovery.

"Arthur M." writes: "Please advise how to cure dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair."

Answer: Obtain plain yellow Minyol in 4-oz. jars and apply as per directions. It will stop dandruff and make your hair take on new life.

"W. Z." writes: "I have such a very severe cough and cold and have not been able to get anything to help me. It is weakening my system."

Answer: Use the following and your cold and cough will vanish and you will soon be strong again: Get a 2½-oz. bottle of concentrated essence Mentho-Laxene and take every hour or two. This can be taken pure or made into a full pint of homemade syrup. Full directions as to use will be found on bottle. This is a mild laxative and will drive the cold from the system.

CITY AGAIN USING SINKING FUND TO WIND UP ITS YEAR

For 20 Years It Has Been Necessary to Use Money After Exhausting of Appropriations.

Following a long-established custom the city this year is taking money from the sinking fund for temporary use in paying municipal expenses until tax collections for the year shall have been made, when the money borrowed from the fund will be replaced. For the last 20 years it has been the custom to do this in the last few months of the year, when the exhausting of appropriations made it necessary to raise money for city uses prior to the tax payment period.

The city also, following an established precedent, has invested $1,040,000 of the sinking fund money in municipal bonds of the $3,793,000 issue authorized at the bond issue election last May.

City Bonds Purchased.

This purchase of city bonds with sinking fund money is specifically permitted under article 17, section 6 of the City Charter, which says:

"The Board of Estimate and Apportionment shall administer all sinking funds and in the course thereof may purchase with any sinking fund, as an investment therefor, bonds of the city, State or United States, preferably city bonds, and may provide for the payment of maturing bonds out of the sinking fund created therefor, and to that end may sell bonds held in such sinking fund."

The argument made by city officials in favor of investing sinking fund money in the city's own bonds is that if the bonds were marketed at this time the city would be required to pay at least 6 per cent interest on them. On the sinking fund money deposited in the banks the interest received by the city on daily balances is only 2¼ per cent.

Custom for Many Years.

By purchasing its own bonds with the sinking fund money the city is enabled to hold the bonds and at the same time take from the sinking fund the equivalent price of the bonds for use in public improvements. The bonds held in the sinking fund may be marketed at any time when conditions are more favorable as to price or as to amount of interest the city would have to pay on the loan.

As to the use of sinking fund for temporarily meeting current expenses Deputy Comptroller Gunn yesterday said the custom had been in vogue for many years. Toward the end of August, he said, the money available for city purposes always runs short and drafts are made on the sinking fund. The money so used is always repaid at the end of the year. Gunn said he had received an opinion from Associate City Counselor Hamilton that there was nothing illegal in thus "borrowing" from the sinking fund to pay current expenses.

MARSHAL FOCH UNWITTINGLY STOPS A 'SHIMMY' AT HOTEL

"Saw Much More Wonderful American Products at St. Mihiel and Chateau-Thierry," He Says.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch.

PARIS, Nov. 20.—Marshal Foch stopped a "shimmy," perhaps unwittingly, in the dance hall of the Hotel Ritz. He had been a guest at dinner of Ignace and Mrs. Paderewski, with Gen. Weygand and others. After dinner the party walked over to the dance hall, where a "shimmy" was in full tremor. The old Marshal knit his brows over the antics of the women in the dance, although he tried to act as if he liked them. As the frown gathered, Mr. Paderewski smilingly explained to the Marshal that the shimmy was an American product.

"Ah, I saw much more wonderful American products than that at St. Mihiel and Chateau-Thierry," was the quick rejoiner.

The Marshal's words were flashed across the brilliant dancing hall, and there was no more shimmying that evening. Mr. Paderewski later sent his apologies to the director of dinner dances saying he was sorry he had spoiled the evening's fun.

WOMAN'S DOMESTIC DUTY DELAYS MIXED JURY TRIAL

LONDON, Nov. 3.—A woman's domestic duty rather delayed the first case tried by a mixed jury at Bath Quarter Sessions. At lunchtime the Recorder ordered the trial to be resumed at 2 o'clock. A woman juror instantly protested:

"I can't get home and back here in time. I have to look after my husband's lunch."

The Recorder promptly extended the recess by 15 minutes.

NEXT SATURDAY HOSPITAL TAG COLLECTION DAY

"Every Dollar Contributed Goes Directly to Relief of Sick Poor," Says President of Association.

ANNUAL APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC

In 27 Years Organization Has Collected From All Sources a Total of $856,139.

The twenty-eighth annual collection of the Hospital Saturday and Sunday Association, in behalf of St. Louis hospitals which do charity work, will be made next Saturday and Sunday. The Saturday collection is made by the sale of tags in office buildings and industrial establishments, and the Sunday collection is made in churches and Sunday schools.

In the annual appeal of the organization, which has been printed as the preface to a booklet containing its annual report, the president of the association, A. L. Shapleigh, says:

"Every dollar contributed goes directly to the relief of the sick poor. For 27 years the collections of the association have been given to the associated hospitals doing free work, in proportion to the work done, the amount thus far so given amounting to more than $800,000. These hospitals need our assistance and count upon our aid. Without it, many of the poor sick could not obtain relief.

No Commissions Paid.

"There are no commissions paid to anyone. There are no salaries paid to anyone. The only expense is the expense of printing, providing collection boxes, the necessary stationery, stenographic work, postage and badges.

"The association is in receipt of dues from members of $2 each, and the receipts from this source in a large measure provide for the expense of the annual collections.

"The association also has made a small beginning toward an endowment fund, the interest of which accrues annually to the hospital beneficiaries. The endowment fund, though small, gives promise of future greatness. No citizen desiring to perpetuate philanthropy on the part of himself when living, or in his memory, can devote funds to a better purpose—for the income of his endowment is applied continuously to the direct relief of the sick poor and suffering.

"Let Us Not Forget."

"We have all passed through some strenuous years in the recent past, but the skies seem to be clearing and conditions are apparently returning more closely to normal. The national elections have been held and the minds of the people are now more at rest concerning our internal affairs for the years next ensuing.

"We have been favored as a people most abundantly, and our nation is prosperous. Let us in the midst of our prosperity not forget those who from causes beyond their control are unable to help themselves. Let us remember that we who enjoy good health owe a duty to the unfortunate poor who are not so blessed. Let us give liberally and with a generous spirit. Let us remember that 'he who giveth to the poor lendeth to the Lord.' We must all satisfy our own conscience that we have done what we are able to alleviate sickness and distress.

"Let us give of our substance freely. As our purse is emptied, our hearts are filled."

27 Years of the Work.

In the statistical report it is set forth that the association, in the 27 years of its work has collected from all sources, including membership dues, $856,139.22, and has distributed among hospitals, in proportion to the amount of free service rendered by them to deserving residents of the city unable to pay for hospital treatment, $808,236.60.

The 1919 collection amounted to $54,220.68. This was distributed among 15 institutions. The annual collection reimburses the participating hospitals only in part for the allowable cost of free service under the rules of the association. This allowable cost was fixed, years ago, at $1 a day, and has never been increased, though the actual cost to the hospitals is now figured at $1.84 a day and up. Inasmuch as the association has never been able to pay even the $1 a day allowed by its rules, it has seemed useless to change the rules.

Annual Investigation.

Ambassador David R. Francis is honorary president of the association. The participating hospitals, which include Catholic, Protestant, Jewish and non-sectarian institutions, are investigated annually, as to the free service rendered by them, by the Committee on Admission, consisting of Robert McK. Jones, chairman; J. D. Bascom, W. R. Compton, Philip C. Scanlan and Ernest W. Stix. The committee reports, with recommendation, to the Executive Board, consisting of President Shapleigh, Aaron Fuller, W. H. Glasgow, R. F. McNally, Aaron S. Rauh, Walter Schnaider, F. H. Semple, Charles P. Senter, Aaron Waldheim, D. D. Walker Jr., James A. Waterworth and A. Orville Wilson, which is vested with final authority.

Report on Hospital Work.

Each hospital sends in a formal report of its work, income, expenditures, financial condition and cost per day for free patients, and a list of patients given free treatment in the year ending Sept. 30, showing the number of free days for each patient. Such reports, like the application, are made on regular blanks furnished by the association, and are checked by the Auditing Committee, consisting of John H. Dieckman, David L. Grey and Charles H. Morrill. This committee forwards reports, with recommendations, to the Executive Board. Reports carrying the names of charity patients are confidential and are never seen except by the members of the Auditing Committee, and auditors working under that committee's supervision.

The last special committee to deal with the apportionment of funds is the Committee on Distribution, which consists of Mayor Kiel, ex-officio; W. Frank Carter, president of the Chamber of Commerce, ex-officio; Charles L. Niemeier, president of the Merchants' Exchange, ex-officio; J. Charless Cabanne, Edward A. Faust, M. Shoenberg and Robert H. Stockton.

PILES CURED WITHOUT THE K
By Dr. Henrich's M
TO STAY CUR

No Cutting. No Pain. No Chloroform. No Hospital. No Danger. No Loss of Consultation and Examination Free—Tell Your Friends.

There is nothing that so completely unfits a man for business, a woman for looking after her household and social duties, and both for the usual pleasures of everyday life, as this annoying disease. There is no cure as safe, sound and reliable, and yet so very simple and painless, as mine.

Hundreds and hundreds freely testify through the press, etc., to my marvelous success, solely because they desire to do a kindness for others who are afflicted as they were, and who are seeking a cure and relief through the use of various kinds of so-called cures or their family physician. Being cured, they realize how much it would have been to their advantage had they come long before they did, because they were soon cured, although some of them had suffered so long as forty-odd years, during which time they had constantly suffered and spent many times as much money as it would have cost them had they come to me and been cured years before they did. Think of the suffering they would have spared themselves, and business and pleasure advantages they would have enjoyed.

INVESTIGATE, THEN ACT.

Don't take my statements alone in this matter, but investigate my work by inquiring of my former patients and learning from them whether or not my statemetns are based on actual and substantial results. If they say I do not accomplish what I claim to do, don't come to me; if they say I do, it will pay you to do as they did—come and be cured for life.

Dr. W. P. Henrich.

Dear Sir—I am writing to say tha taking your treatment for Piles I am tirely cured.

I suffered with Bleeding and Pro Piles for over ten years, and after every advertised remedy, I came to Louis and was cured by your tre over a year ago.

I suffered very little pain from treatment; I was on my feet ever while in St. Louis buying goods fo store in Texas.

I cannot recommend your treatmen highly; my general health has impro and I have gained 15 pounds in weigh

I want to thank you for all you did me. You can refer anyone you wish t and I will be only too glad to tell of the benefits I received.

Why Hudson Utility Appeals to Business Men

No Hudson owner forgets this fact in his appreciation of Super-Six economy.

He knows Hudson is the supreme performance type among all the world's cars. Its stock car records in speed, hill-climbing, acceleration and endurance have never been matched.

Engineers who aim at such performance distinction usually ignore such elements of economy as fuel, oil and tire mileage.

But Hudson's notable speed, its 72% added power, and 80% greater efficiency means no extra cost in its operation.

Its speed and power do not come from great motor size and high fuel consumption. The exclusive Super-Six principle gets 76 H. P., from a light, conventional motor that formerly developed 42 H. P. at maximum.

Vibration that wasted about half the power of the conventional type is almost eliminated by this type. Nearer approach does not seem possible.

That means that even extraordinary calls impose no strain or abuse on Hudson. It accounts for the way Hudsons retain new car ability when they have grown old in point of years and use. It removes the costly burden and annoyance of frequent repairs and service attention.

With all the other desirable things men find in Hudson, this accounts also for the additional triumph of true economy.

AUTO NOTES and GOSSIP.

LARGE TIRE FACTORIES MAKE PRICE REDUCTION

Last week a number of the larger tire companies followed the lead of the Lee Tire and Rubber Co. and the United States Tire Co. by issuing new price lists on all sizes of tires and tubes. Among those making the reductions were the B. F. Goodrich Co. on Goodrich and Diamond fabric casings and Silvertown Cords, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. on both fabric and cords, and the Miller Rubber Co. on its complete line. The reduction varies in the different sizes, but averages a cut of about 15 per cent.

In an official statement the B. F. Goodrich Co. says: "In view of the fact that before the present recession in prices tires actually sold for 25 per cent less than they did 10 years ago, and at the same time give their owners nearly double mileage, the public has been given an unusual demonstration of the saving in modern quantity production. To day tires cost the users approximately 40 per cent less than in 1910.

"The Goodrich Company realizes that conditions can never return to normal without reductions in the cost of practically all commodities of life, and it is determined to aid in the movement even though by so doing it suffers a loss for the time being. A recession of tire prices will have a beneficial effect on the entire automobile industry, as any action tending to lower the cost of motor vehicle operation cannot help but reach favorably on the trade."

FIRST NASH FOUR REACHES ST. LOUIS

The curtain has been raised on the Nash Four, the new product of the Nash Motors Co., which since the last national shows has aroused much interest. The first of the new models reached St. Louis last week.

The outstanding feature of the Nash Four is the valve-in-head motor, which follows largely the type of motor now used in the six. The price, which is $1395, f. o. b. factory, includes cord tires as regular equipment.

The body design of the Nash four is of the airline type and its proportions are well balanced. The upholstery is of genuine French plaited leather and the car affords comfortable seating for five passengers, with ample room for freedom of movement.

The car was produced as a companion to the Nash Six and the same standard of material and designing has been used throughout. The first model to be received in St. Louis was the five-passenger touring. Other models will eventually be added to the line.

"HARE'S MOTORS" TAKES OVER KELLY TRUCK

Emlen S. Hare, president of Hare's Motors, Inc., announced last week that the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Co. and its plant at Springfield, O., would hereafter be operated by Hare's Motors, Inc., the operating organization for the Locomobile, Mercer and Simplex companies. Special significance attaches to this announcement because at the time of the organization of the operating company Mr. Hare promised the addition of a full line of motor trucks.

The Kelly-Springfield is one of the oldest trucks built today, having been on the market for 16 years. The line it produces is in a full range of sizes, from one and a half tons to six and a half ton capacity. Coincident with the announcement comes the word that the officers of the Hare's Motors, Inc., have been elected to the same respective positions in the Kelly-Springfield Motor Truck Co.

NEW PIERCE ARROWS HAVE MANY CHANGES

A complete line of new dual-valve passenger car models was announced last week by the Pierce Arrow Car Co. Not only has there been a number of mechanical refinements, but a new style mode has been established in the body lines.

The flexibility of the dual-valve engine has made possible the adoption of a three-speed transmission of simpler and sturdier design. To conform with the prevalent practice in America, the left-hand drive has been adopted. The line will consist of four open-car types and six closed cars.

A POWERFUL CAR

"Will your car climb Demonstration Hill on high?" an automobile engineer was asked.

"Sure! Fools climb that hill on high every day, in our car and in other cars," was the answer.

Power is to the Standard Eight what superabundant health is to the individual. It is something that you have very little occasion to use to the limit, but the mere feeling that you have it to spare makes every minute one of keener sensation.

FAMINE DRIVES MANY CHINESE FROM HOME

Long Processions of Men Trudge Hundreds of Miles in Hope of Finding Work or Begging.

LITTLE CHILDREN DIE FROM STARVATION

Elm and Locust Trees Are Stripped of Leaves Which Are Used for Nourishment in Peasants' Homes.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

PEKIN, Nov. 17.—The correspondent of the Associated Press, who has just visited the famine district met long processions of men carrying little bagsful of clothes over their shoulders leaving their homes to seek new ones where food can be obtained. They were trudging from 100 to 300 miles to Tientsin or Pekin, in the hope of finding either work or charity.

Their women and children have been left at home, obviously for the reason that the regions which they have to traverse is so impoverished that there is little hope of successful begging.

Asked why they had not brought their families, one man produced what looked like slabs of baked mud. They were made of millet chaff, clover and weeds, with minimum of grain. "Can little children and old women walk all day with such food to eat?" they asked in reply.

In half a dozen villages along the Grand Canal, nine out of ten farmers have sold their lands at one-tenth to one-fifth the normal price. Wealthy business men from the market towns were said to have bought most of the parcels of land, driving hard bargains with the owners, who have no recourse but to sell or rent. If the owner chooses the latter expedient he is likely to get $3 a year for his few "mu" of land (a "mu" is approximately one-sixth of an acre) and the renter takes the whole crop for the period of the lease.

Leaves Stripped for Food.

In Chia Hwang village was a row of young elms and locusts, from which the leaves had been stripped for food. Four or five persons were sick in the village, two of hunger. Here the children have been dying from lack of proper nourishment. Eight had succumbed in the previous 10 days. The sale of clothes has been the chief means of support. Every few days some man walks 30 miles to Tehchow as selling agent for four or five families and with the meager returns brings back a few more days' rations.

For the most part, there have been few of the outward, physical signs of advanced starvation; but in the village of Shia Chung I saw babies with the faces of old men, children whose ribs were pitifully visible under the bluish skin. Here there had been a 100 per cent crop failure. All who could had gone and those left were held by extreme poverty.

At a village near Wu Cheng I met an old man over 60. He had been to the market town and sold two long coats and some boots. The proceeds he carried in a basket on his arm, about six pounds of red millet. His sons, he said, had gone somewhere north, where he didn't know. At home were his wife and his sons' wives and their seven children. Mixed with leaves and clover he figured that his purchase of millet would last several days. "After that if we die, we die," he said. The Chinese peasant takes his hunger smilingly as he does everything. Despondency is remarkably rare.

The only practicable way to save a majority of the sufferers seems to be to open food kitchens all over the stricken district on a gigantic scale. Road and canal projects intended to afford work for the population, even were it not attended by too much delay, will only partially meet the requirements.

Why You Want This Sedan Now

Lexington
MINUTE MAN SIX

ALREADY the reaction to the price excitement has come. As always—"Water finds its level."

Today the Lex-Sedan stands higher than ever in the public esteem. Its value appears greater, its price fairer, and its advanced design more desirable.

Here are the reasons why substantial people are now ordering Lex-Sedans:

—They are protected against price reductions.

—They realize, regardless of price, that it is poor economy to buy a closed car now that will be old-style next year.

—They know the Lex-Sedan is the leading style closed car type for seasons to come.

—They want the exclusive advantages of Lexington that include the Moore Multiple Exhaust System, the Lexi-gasifier, the Cable Foot Brake, the One-finger Emergency Brake, the 2-Way Head Lamps, etc.

—They want this Lex-Sedan because it is lighter, easier to handle, and decidedly more economical of gas and tires. There is no excess weight and no overload for the motor.

—They know only Lexington can offer this unusual value, because of a close working alliance between all material sources.

—They know the value to them of having a car built by a company that is closely affiliated with ten other factories specializing in motor car parts.

—They will not be satisfied with anything inferior, but want the fine appearance and perfect interior appointments of this Lex-Sedan.

—And, above all, they have been shown in actual demonstration that the Lexington leads in performance, comfort, and economy.

The above are a few reasons why we want an opportunity to show you how to get the most for your money right now in this Lex-Sedan. See us today.

TA
I OF SERVICE

YOUR PART IN OUR PROGRESS

Dunlop views all who are associated with the automotive industry or benefited by it as its partners in progress — a progress in transportation which affects practically every individual in America.

This partnership represents an obligation to those who purchase and use tires, to the builders of automotive vehicles and to the merchants who distribute the various products of the industry.

Mutual interest is the very basis of Dunlop policy — mutual interest between user, dealer and manufacturer in an effort to secure the greatest amount of continuous transportation service from every Dunlop Tire.

The maintenance of such a policy can be assured only by a tire-building experience and ability such as is represented by the history of the name Dunlop — a name which comes down in an unbroken line from the beginning of the pneumatic tire industry.

It is the name of John Boyd Dunlop, who invented the first practical, commercially successful pneumatic tire and whose successors were responsible for commercial development of the most important pneumatic tire principle — namely, the combination of an inner tube with a protective casing open on the inner side.

It has been associated with the progressive development of tire types for tricycle, bicycle, automobile, motor truck and motorcycle. It is associated with the development and improvement of the straight-side and also the clincher type of pneumatic.

The name Dunlop today also stands for a great tire-building enterprise, with factories in United States, England, France, Germany, Japan and Canada — with warehousing and selling organizations in every quarter of the globe — with vast rubber-growing lands in the Far East — with extensive cotton-raising activities and tire-fabric mills in different countries.

Such a policy also calls for adequate manufacturing equipment and efficient manufacturing methods. It calls for the production of high-grade tires in volume sufficient to make such production economical. It calls, too, for unceasing application to the problem of tire development and tire improvement.

The Dunlop Plant at Buffalo is, in itself a very impressive and important evidence of our ability to serve in a way consistent with Dunlop reputation and Dunlop policy. Its various buildings, now practically completed, rank in size, in number and in capacity for production among the few largest tire plants in America. They are of the most advanced type of construction and equipment, and cover thirty-five acres of a great tract of land fronting on Niagara River with direct rail and water connections. They are capable of producing over 12,000 tires a day and that capacity can be doubled when necessary.

Dunlop will make only a high-grade product, consisting of cord pneumatics and tubes for passenger cars, trucks and motorcycles; solid truck tires and repair and accessory materials.

* * * *

Production of Dunlop Tires will be under way about the first of 1921 and distribution will be effected through retail channels as rapidly as is consistent with sound policy. We will welcome the opportunity to discuss distribution plans with retail tire merchants who may be interested.

BIG CONSTRUCTION PROJECTS PLANNED FOR DOWNTOWN

Building Projects Likely to Have First Realization on Chestnut and Pine Streets, Promoters Say.

ONE STRUCTURE TO COVER WHOLE BLOCK

Notable Improvement Along Widened Washington Avenue Said to Be Near-Future Probability.

By Berry Moore.

The stage is being set for a campaign of construction of broad dimensions which is destined to have its start in the business center of St. Louis and which will embrace thoroughfares hitherto regarded as too far removed, or rather out of line, for the large retail and jobbing trade, as well as big-scale automobile business.

While actual construction on a big scale, will hardly be launched for several months, and certainly not before the first of the year, the promoters are engaged in assembling sites in order to be ready to begin action as soon as the signal is given.

The curtain is scheduled to rise on Chestnut and Pine streets, as the theater of greater performances in that the volume of traffic on these arteries has reached a stage that is challenging attention, notably from the automobile and other interests which can flourish only in the maelstrom, so to speak.

While many of the projects that will be embodied in the scheduled building revival are as yet in the abstract, or in tentative form, plans for several of them are virtually completed. Construction in these instances is to be commenced as soon as sites are available, it is said.

Entire Block Enterprise.

The most notable of these projects contemplates a structure to cover an entire city block, preferably one in the district north of Olive street, between Ninth and Twelfth streets. The nature of this project is being closely guarded. The vacant block owned by the Eighteenth Street Realty Co., of which Isaac H. Lionberger is president, extending from Eighteenth to Seventeenth streets, and from Pine to Chestnut streets, is also under consideration for this as well for several other ambitious improvement projects. The promoters in the first instance, however, do not care to go west of Twelfth street.

Sites are to be had in the business district north of Olive street at prices obviously low, especially, as compared with those asked for ground on Washington avenue and on Locust street, while Chestnut and Pine street property values are fast being enhanced by traffic.

Washington avenue, the indications are, will be the center of a notable building splurge in the near future, as a result of the widening of that thoroughfare from Jefferson to Grand avenue, which gives it the status of a boulevard that should be especially attractive for shops or for other enterprises for which prominence of location is a prime requisite.

Building Wave Impending.

What has been said gives only a vague idea of what is in prospect for downtown St. Louis. Sites are being sought in various parts of the city for large apartment buildings and hotels, while it is understood that a group of operators who have been in the forefront of the building movement in the West End during the last four or five years is acquiring sites for a score or more of large apartment buildings, construction of which is to be started as soon as the sites can be corralled, regardless of the prices of building material and of construction.

An appreciable recession in the prices of building material and construction will be the cue for a resumption of building, but the demand so far exceeds the supply that it will be several years at least before the supply and demand are equalized, taking into consideration the growth of the population of the city, which recently has set a new pace.

350 Acres to Be Added to Area of City's Industries

Clarke Tract, Adjacent to Southampton, Acquired by C. C. Wilmore for Resale Through Syndicate.

It was disclosed yesterday that Cyrus C. Wilmore has exercised an option to purchase the Clarke tract of 350 acres adjacent to Southampton, acquired by him several months ago through Cornet & Zeibig. The tract is to be resold by Wilmore through Benjamin G. Brinkman, president of the Lafayette-South Side Bank, who is to act as trustee to a syndicate to be formed under the auspices of Brinkman, and of which he is to be the head.

According to announcement made by the promoters last night, the operation contemplates the conversion of the tract for industrial purposes by the installation of rail facilities connecting with the tracks of the Terminal Railroad Association.

Wilmore, who was formerly treasurer and general manager of the Olive Street Terrace Realty Co., was represented in the transaction by the switch property department of the Mercantile Trust Co., while Cornet & Zeibig represented the former owners of the tract, who live in the East. Ralph Coale of Cornet & Zeibig, and John F. Schopflin, industrial commissioner for the Mercantile Trust Co., were actively identified with the negotiations.

The Clarke tract deal is the largest in St. Louis realty in many years, in point of acreage. The amount of money involved is understood to be in the neighborhood of $500,000.

The tract extends southward from Eichelberger street to the right of way of the Lakewood electric line, and westward from a proposed extension of Hampton avenue to the city limits. The southern end of the property is adjacent to Gravois avenue and the Cherokee car line, and its northwestern corner adjoins the southwestern corner of Southampton subdivision, near the end of the Southampton car line. Virtually the entire tract is high and level and well adapted for industrial purposes. The larger part of it is unrestricted under the city zoning law, and the remainer is designated as industrial property.

Willmore, who is chairman of the Real Estate Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that he had been interested in the Clarke property and its possibilities for industrial purposes for some time. He has severed his connection with the Olive Street Terrace Co. in order to devote all of his time to aiding the syndicate in its plan.

Fred G. Zeibig of Cornet & Zeibig said yesterday that while the Clarke tract had been on the market in a general way for years, the Massachusetts owners in whose family the land had been held for several generations never would consent to any part of it being disposed of separately, and never had been eager to sell it as a whole. Younger members of the family had come into control recently, he said, making the present deal possible.

HOME BUILDER FORMS COMPANION CONCERNS

Walter Jones has incorporated the Walter Jones Real Estate Co., to conduct a general real estate business, together with a mortgage company, known as the Walter Investment Co., to lend money on second deeds of trust. The companion companies have acquired a lease of the ground floor store at 618 Chestnut street, through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., of which they have taken possession, with six salesmen and a large office force.

The Watler Jones Realty Co. wil specialize in the building of houses Jones individually having already built 35 flats in the Fairground Park district, 40 bungalows in Northwest St. Louis and a number of cottages on the South Side. The company is now erecting three bungalows on Pershing avenue and a $19,000 residence at 66 Aberdeen place in Hillcrest.

CREDIT COMPANY LEASES SPACE; SUPPLY COMPANY BUYS BUILDING

A lease has been closed by the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co., to the American Security Credit Co. on the entire second floor in the building at the southwest corner of Broadway and Pine street with an entrance at 117 North Broadway. Contracts have been let for altering this space into offices. The lease was made for Harold H. Tittman, trustee for Emma C. Copelin, deceased.

The four-story building at 19-21 South Third street, has been sold by the Martin-Breitt company to the Premier Supply Co., manufacturers of extracts, for a sum above $20,000. The sale was made for the Cass Avenue Bank.

HILLCREST AND DELMAR HEIGHTS LOTS SOLD BY SCHOLLMEYER

A. R. Schollmeyer & Co. effected the sale of a number of lots in Hillcrest the past week, and report deals pending for others in that addition.

Schollmeyer & Co. are closing out the remaining lots in the addition at special prices.

Purchasers in the majority of instances are said to have plans for homes.

This agency also reports many sales of lots in Delmar Heights, in University City, which was recently placed on sale.

THREE-APARTMENT BUILDING SOLD TO WOMAN FOR $25,000

The Dyas-Shelp Realty Co. announce the sale of 714 Westgate avenue to Miss Mae Miksicek. The building contains three apartments of five rooms and sun parlor each, with four garages in the rear, bringing in an annual rental of $4250. The property was sold for John Meyers, and the price paid was $25,000. This building had been listed only 10 days when the sale was effected.

BIG EASTERN MANUFACTURER OF SHOE PARTS TO COME HERE

The Proctor Counter Co., manufacturer of shoe counters, insoles and shoe parts at Havervill, Mass., will remove its plants to St. Louis, having purchased the property of the Dingraph Machine Co. at Ninth and Clinton streets. The company has several plants in the East.

The site purchased will have be improved with an additional building, and the present structure will be overhauled.

PLOW COMPANY NAMES EDLIN TRADE MANAGER

Will Quit Management Here of Rival Concern to Direct Entire Domestic Business.

The Moline Plow Co. of Moline, Ill., announces the appointment of Frank W. Edlin of St. Louis as domestic trade manager in charge of its entire American business. Edlin has for more than seven years, been secretary and general manager of the St. Louis branch of the John Deere Plow Co. at 2212 North Broadway. He is a director of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., a governor of the St. Louis Club, and a member of the Missouri Athletic Association.

His change is mainly due to the fact that George N. Peek, formerly trade manager for Deere & Co., has lately accepted the presidency of the Moline Plow Co., and he and Edlin have been closely associated throughout their business lives.

"It is particularly hard to leave St. Louis now," Edlin said yesterday, "when the city, the State and this entire section are on the threshold of a development which, in my opinion, will surpass anything they have seen in the past."

"In seven and a half years of more or less close connection with St. Louis interests and those of the city's tributary territory, I have learned to take a great deal of interest and pride in the city and have formed business and social connections which I do not expect to replace. I have seen the Missouri farmer cease to be a man who bought his supplies and machinery on long credits, who depended on Providence for the stability of his home and whose land was often heavily mortgaged. But I shall not be surprised to see the State do more for itself and its people in the next three years than it has in the past ten. Missouri has never lacked anything but confidence in herself. I have seen this confidence grow and this year it has concrete expression in its $60,000,000 road bond enactment, its splendidly enlarged provision for public schools, its waterway improvements and the closer connection which is being established between the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce and the rural districts.

"St. Louis is one of the largest distributing centers for the products of the Moline Plow Company, and it would not surprise me to see it pass every other city in the United States as a market for everything that the farmer uses and sells."

MORE THAN $100,000 PAID FOR BUILDING IN EAST ST. LOUIS

One of the largest real estate transactions in improved property in the business section of East St. Louis was consummated yesterday in the sale of the Vogel Building at 206-12 Collinsville avenue. The Fischer-Schein Co., owners of the property, was represented by Robert J. Koenigsmark, and the buyer, F. L. Huntoon, by Robert M. Smith of L. G. Smith & Bros. The consideration is said to have been in excess of $10,-000.

This is the second large deal the Fischer-Schein Co. has closed in the past 10 days, having sold the Donahue Building at Tenth street and Gaty avenue of which it was the owner for a consideration said to be in excess of $50,000.

CENTRAL STATES LIFE ERECTING NEW BUILDING

Washington Avenue Improvement for Insurance Company Featured by Modern Facilities.

The Central States Life Insurance Co. building, in course of erection on the north side of Washington avenue, between Compton and Leonard avenues, is said to be an innovation in office building construction. The plan is by the T. P. Barnett Co., and provides every facility for business requirements. In addition to its utilitarian character, the insurance company has provided for the comfort of its employes to a marked degree.

The building will be fire-proof and is designed in the Spanish mission style of architecture. The exterior will be of cream-colored stucco, and the ornamental features of doorways and windows treated in carved Bedford stone. Ground on the east and west of the building will be laid out in Spanish gardens of formal character. Special attention has been devoted to natural lighting of the structure, together with its ventilation. A comprehensive scheme of artificial lighting will also be installed.

An attracitve feature of the interior is the large patio, which forms a rotunda at the entrance, extending two stories in height, surrounded by arcaded cloister with balconies at second story.

The insurance company commenced business Jan. 1, 1911. It is a St. Louis institution and has grown rapidly. It has $58,000,000 of insurance in force and has issued thus far in 1920 $20,000,000. The company has assets of $3,300,000, of which $2,500,000 is deposited with the State as reserve on its policies.

Officers and directors of the company are: Frank P. Crunden, president; James A. McVoy, vice president and general manager; V. F. Larson, secretary; Dr. Henry Jacobson, medical director; E. M. Grossman, general counsel. Directors: Warren Goddard, John H. Gundlach, P. F. Willis, W. L. Wright of St. Louis; Cyrus Thompson, Belleville, Ill.; Hugh Stephens, Jefferson City, and Homer E. Shaw, Bement, Ill.

GROUP OF 11 HOUSES FINISHED BY HOME AND HOUSING ASSN.

A group of 11 houses in the 3600 block on Michigan avenue was completed last week by the Home and Housing Association, Secretary Nelson Cunliff announced yesterday. One of the houses at 3656 Michigan avenue has been sold to E. E. Buchanan. This was the twenty-fifth residence sold by the association since it was formed.

Cunliff said that sales were progressing more rapidly than at first and that real interest was being manifested in the construction of the group of poured concrete houses in the 6200 block of Wagner avenue.

Four sales have been completed in the last five weeks. The purchasers and the houses bought are: R. L. Lucas, 6100 Bartmer avenue; Chauncey Schultz, 6111 Crescent avenue; S. C. Plummer, 5150 Maffitt avenue, and R. S. Gillingham, 4973 Sutherland avenue.

REALTY EXCHANGE TO CONTINUE ITS DRIVE THROUGH DECEMBER

The St. Louis Real Estate Exchange has practically reached the goal of 1000 new associate members, but the committee has decided to continue the campaign through December. This was done at the request of several team captains.

While the campaign is primarily for associate members, from property holders and home owners, a number of dealers have become actives and many salesmen have joined as active associates.

With the increased membership the directors and officers feel that the exchange wil take its rightful place as a leader for suburban development. Plans are being made to give service to the associate members which will increase their interest in the work of the exchange.

FELDHAUS GIVES UP OFFICE POST TO BECOME SALESMAN

A. E. Feldhaus, who has been head office man and bookkeeper for the George J. Wanstrath Real Estate Co. for several years, will in the future be on the street for that company as a salesman.

Feldhaus has a wide acquaintance among both property owners and investors and is conversant with the general details of the realty business by reason of his tutelage under Wanstrath.

Residence Sold by Dickmann.

The Joseph F. Dickmann Real Estate Co. announce the sale of 3633 McDonald avenue, a nine-room house, for the Kellenberger estate to Frances T. Bottl.

Merchant Buys Aparament House.

Louis Adler, a south Broadway merchant, has bought, through the M. Hammel Real Estate Co., the apartment on the southwest corner of Blackstone and Julian avenues.

Koplar Sells Two Homes.

Sam Koplar announces the sale to Fred Schnitzer of 2521 South King's highway, a 6-room bungalow, and to Otto Hippenmeyer of 2519 South King's highway, also of six rooms.

Live in Beautiful Maryland Terrace

ADJOINING WASHINGTON UNIVERSITY

In Maryland Terrace there is no crowding—no congestion. Each home is individual—each different architecturally.

The grounds are 190 and 200 feet deep—wide. You have room—so have the children.

Five Maryland Terrace homes have been sold recently, two new Maryland Terrace homes were started this week by customers, one costing $29,000 exclusive of grounds; the other $23,000 exclusive of grounds.

We have three homes completed, ready for your inspection. We have two more that will be completed early in the Spring.

See these new homes.

Drive to Pennsylvania avenue (west boundary of campus)—Maryland Terrace extends west on both Maryland and Westmoreland drives.

A LIFELONG VACATION IN FLORIDA.

A few memberships are available in the most remarkable club in the world. Here, in Florida, amid rolling hills, perpetual sunshine and flowers, you may have a lovely homesite on a millionaire's estate. Hundreds of acres of fruit-laden orange groves surround you, and you will share their profits. On the property is a beautiful clubhouse, a golf course, a pavilion, in which dancing, motion pictures and other entertainments will be provided. Tennis courts, croquet grounds and a swimming pool are being installed. There is fine fishing and hunting in nearby territory. Nothing is wanting to make it the home of your dreams. This estate is on a main-line railroad and is only 30 minutes' drive over a picturesque boulevard from the booming city of Tampa; $750, either cash or payments, is the price of a club membership, which includes a choice building plot for your home and an interest in the proposition. Your dividends may shortly pay your living expenses. Some of the most prominent men in Florida have joined the club, and you will be fortunate if you can act quick enough to secure a membership. They will soon be worth many times the present price. Write today for particulars. Secretary, Valrico Hills Club, Valrico, Fla., Box 102. (c99)

FOR SALE—TRUCK FARMS

Your last chance to get a truck farm for which you can have free water to irrigate; electric lights; hard roads into town; common school; high school; water from Falling Springs right in your house; street car service; train service into town; absolutely high and dry and level, and as rich sandy soil as there is in the State. Don't miss this chance, for there is not any place in the United States that will equal this place for a truck and chicken farm and a place to raise your family. Just one mile from where the new locomotive works is to be built, and one mile to the Dupo yards and shops; 20 minutes' ride to East St. Louis. The Waterloo car gives the best service to St. Louis, to all of the railroad offices and yards. If you live on the Waterloo car line you will have the car service that takes you near all these manufactories: Aluminum Ore, American Steel Plant, Malleable Iron, General Roofing, Durbin Foundry, Valley Steel Works, the Glass Works, the Frog and Switch Works, the I. C. Shops, the Big Four shops, the American Bag Factory, the Monsanto Chemical Works. Also passes the corner of Collinsville avenue and Broadway, where all of the suburban cars make connections. I am going to divide this in half-acre tracts. You can have as much as you want if you get there in time. There are only about 100 acres left. Easy terms. I will build for you with a small payment down.

IMPROVED FARMS AND ONE THE SIZE YOU WANT

Why buy undeveloped land which you know nothing about what it will cost to get in cultivation, when you can for the same money, often less, buy a farm that you can move onto or rent at once. Prices range from $25 per acre up, according to location and improvements. We believe you will find these farms the best value for your money on the market today. A general farming proposition combined with ideal conditions for thoroughbred stock breeding, it not being necessary to shelter and feed more than two months out of twelve. Land will never be cheaper than today, write for our booklet on Ashley County, Arkansas.

WE can make a pair of pants to match that good coat hanging in the closet; send us sample of goods. Famous Tailors, 400 Benoist Bldg.

IF this "means anything to your young life," where you can "doll up" and look prosperous at "little or no cost to you," "play our way today." We are working on all our "six cylinders for you now." Everyone in life must have some "incentive," some "goal to reach," something to look "forward" for, to go ahead, to rise, to be prosperous. You can reach it all if you don't go around looking "down and out." For 10 years we have "helped the under dog" to "keep his head above water and looking prosperous" at "all times" we have driven "home" that "saving and prosperous looking habit," to thousands of people, "dressing them up" at little or no cost to them. Buy our uncalled for clothes; "start anew;" we are "calling you." What you save when you spend your dough is your profit. Install the "Abrams System" of clothes buying and save. We have in "store" for you high-class suits; you can afford to wear two or three suits a season for the price of the customary one by purchasing our uncalled-for garments from our cleaning department; garments are tailor-made and from the best manufacturers; $10 to $20. Can you wear 34, 36, 40, 46 to 50 sizes? Also English and plain models. Vests, 50c; pants, $2 to $3.95; coats, $5 to $10; uncalled for Stetson hats, 95c to $1.50. Open Sundays until 6 p. m. Abrams, Cleaners and Dyers, 926 S. Vandeventer, near Chouteau. Mail orders filled. Both phones.

Society Wardrobe Exchange

Announces an unusually large assortment of men's and women's slightly worn clothing at this week's sale; open Saturdays and Mondays from 9 a. m. to 9 p. m. 3109 S. Grand. (c7)

IT NOW "Becomes our duty" to inform you that the "crash to high prices has come." All these "high-price merchants" will certainly have to come off their high horse ("Man-o'-War"). You can't pull that $65, $75 and $100 stuff and "get across with it" at all. "We are with you" for 10 years, have led the way fighting for low prices, assisting thousands to "help keep up that prosperous appearance," which "means everything today," by dressing them up at little or no cost. In cloth and wool suits, 20 to 40 per cent savings on our drummers' samples, suits and overcoats, $19.98, $24.98, $27.98, $29.98. Mackinaw coat, $9.98, $11.98, $12.98, $14.98. "We claim $5 is all we need on any suit." We have saved thousands of dollars for the clothes-buying public. "We're out of the high-rent district." "What the Drummers' Sample Clothes Shop means to you." These fine garments are made by the manufacturers for display or modeling purposes for traveling salesmen; they are made much better than the regular goods; after they show them off we buy them at a big discount; we give you the benefit of our immense buying capacity; this policy enables us to save you money. All we ask you is to "go shopping around" first and come here last, and we will certainly get your "dough." "Buy more, pay less." Vandeventer, Market, Sarah, Manchester, Chouteau and all other lines transfer to our door. We again announce our "Trade-In Sale" Department. We will make you a liberal allowance on your old clothes for new ones. "Abrams." "The Place to Buy Clothes." 926 S. Vandeventer av., near Chouteau. (c)

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

As we have no information bureau, it is impossible to answer queries by mail or telephone. Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

A READER.—We do not attempt to answer puzzle questions.

A READER.—Tincture of logwood may be used to dye the furs brown.

D. S. V.—See answer to Everyday Reader which appeared in this column on Nov. 17.

MRS. R. K. Mc.—You should acknowledge the wedding invitation by a congratulatory note.

W. R. POWELL.—Address the United States Merchant Marine, Shipping Board, Washington, D. C.

B. L. SLONE.—Address Virginia Terhune Van de Water, author, at 311 West Ninety-fifth street, New York City.

J. G.—One hundred dollars American money would be equivalent to approximately 38,400 Polish marks at the present rate of exchange.

NOTARY.—There is a general class in printing, in which typesetting also is taught, at Central High School, and also at the Franklin School.

MRS. FRANCES.—Your selling the story again would depend entirely upon the terms you made with the publishers or with the moving picture company. We could not undertake to set a price, this depends upon the merit of the story.

H. W. A., E. St. L.—Arthur Duestrow shot his wife and baby at their family home, 1724 South Compton avenue, on Tuesday, Feb. 13, 1894, at 4 p. m. They lived until Feb. 16. The murderer was hanged at Union, Mo., on Feb. 16, 1897.

CURIOUS I. M.—The largest bell in the world was cast in 1734. It is called the Great Bell or Monarch of Moscow. This bell is over 21 feet in height and diameter and weighs 193 tons. It fell down during a fire in 1737, was injured, and remained unrestored until 1837, when it was raised, and made the dome of a chapel by digging out the space beneath it.

A POST READER.—The pay of a third-class Postmaster ranges from $1000 to $2300 per year. He is allowed assistance in the form of clerical help, which varies according to the size of the office, the pay also varying accordingly. The Government pays the rent and the fuel supply in some places, this also depending upon the size of the office. No Postmaster can be removed from office before his term expires, unless proper charges are brought against him.

BECKET.—You probably refer to the story which is told of Canute, called the Great, King of the English, Danes, and Norwegians, who was born about 994. His father, Sweyn, King of Denmark, died in the midst of his conquests in England, and Canute immediately began a struggle for the English throne. He landed with a powerful force and soon overran a large part of England. The struggle ended by the division of the country between Canute and the Saxon, Edmund Ironside, whose death in 1017 gave the whole kingdom to the young Danish conqueror. He put to death some of the more powerful English nobles, but after this his character seems to have completely changed, and putting aside his revengeful nature he became a wise, temperate, devout, and law-abiding ruler. He made a pilgrimage to Rome, and wrote a letter back to his subjects which showed the simplicity of his character, and the high idea he had formed of the duty of a King. He gave England 18 years of peace and order, but at his death his kingdom fell to pieces, as it had depended upon his own personal greatness. The story is told of his rebuking the flattery of his courtiers, who had said all things were possible to him. He had his chair placed on the seashore while the tide was rising, and when the water came near him, he ordered it to go back, and not to wet him who was lord of the sea. But the water soon wet his feet, and turning to his courtiers he said, "Let all men know how empty is the power of Kings; for there is none worthy of the name but He whom heaven, earth and sea obey."

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(Prepared by a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

12.—See the Chief of Police and ask him to protect your man.

A TENANT.—The landlord can force you to move unless you have a written lease.

H. T. B.—It would be lawful for you to display newspaper cartoons in your show window and charge for the service.

BROKEN HEARTED.—It is your husband's duty to support you until he gets a divorce, and he must support the children anyway until they are of age.

DOUBTFUL.—The law does not permit the making of any beverage containing more than ½ of 1 per cent alcohol, whether for home use or not.

L. M.—If the payment of the bonus was conditioned on your staying until the end of the year, upon laying you off, the company does not have to pay the bonus.

BADEN BILL.—There is no law on the subject of trapping strange pigeons which fly into your yard, but unless they become a nuisance you ought not to interfere with them.

A. L. B.—If you came to the United States when you were 7 years of age, and your father is now a naturalized citizen, you do not, at the age of 21, have to take out second papers in order to vote, as you are already a citizen of the United States and entitled to that privilege.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

(Answers prepared by a physician of authority. Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnoses or treatment of individual cases will not be given. Questions that cannot be publicly discussed, if showing evidences of sincerity, will be answered when accompanied by stamped envelope.)

MRS. T. J. M.—The medicinal treatment of goitre consists principally in the topical application of the tincture of iodine. It is undoubtedly efficient at times. The simple iodine ointment or the ointment of the red iodide of mercury may be daily rubbed into the goitre. It is recommended that after such application the neck be exposed to the rays of the sun. Internally iodide of potassium 5 to 20 grains, should be taken three times a day.

MRS. J. T. S.—If the busts are collapsed, as they often are after childbirth and nursing, nothing will restore them, so far as we know. If this condition does not exist, persistent massage might benefit. The rubbing in of such fats as cocoa butter is advocated, but we doubt their efficiency, as any fat rubbed into a certain part is absorbed by the general circulation.

F. E. D.—Between the years of 1850 and 1860, incomplete, if, in fact, any, records still exist of hospitals and orphanages. At that time there were probably few hospitals or orphanages. The only hospital records we can think of as perhaps being available would be those of the city hospital. The city directory of these years would, no doubt, be the only guide to the information you seek. Consult the Polk-Gould Directory Co., 204½ North Seventh street.

Sadly missed by
HIS PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of our dear father, Adolph Burkhardt, who died Nov. 20, 1919:
One year has passed since that sad day,
When our dear father was called away;
The hours he spent on earth in pain,
Can never come to him again.
He did his part and did it well,
So God has called him home to dwell,
Where there is no pain or sorrow.
Sadly missed by
HIS CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.
Anniversary mass Monday, Nov. 22, at St. Mary Magdalene Church, at 8 o'clock.

In loving memory of my dear son, Harry Brockschmidt:
In a lonely grave he is sleeping as the shadows onward fall, and my lonely heart is keeping.
No more his presence can I call.
Do not ask me if I miss him. Oh, there is such a vacant place. Oft we think we hear his footsteps or I see his smiling face.
Not gone from memory, not gone from love,
But gone to a fatherly home above.
Sadly missed by MOTHER AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Bertha Link, who departed this life Nov. 21, 1916:
When the evening shades are falling,
And we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing,
If she only could come home.
God called her home; it was His will;
But in our hearts she lingers still.
For all of us she did her best;
May God grant her eternal rest.
Sadly missed by
SONS AND DAUGHTER.

In loving remembrance of our dear wife and mother, Olivia Leeker, who departed this life two years ago today, Nov. 19, 1918:
Two years has passed since that sad day,
One whom we loved has passed away;
Your loving smile, your loving face,
None can fill your vacant place.
Little did we think that day
That she so suddenly would be taken away.
God took her home, it was His will,
But in our hearts she liveth still.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, SON, RELATIVES AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In loving memory of our darling daughter and our dear sister, May Hauser, who died two years ago, Nov. 23, 1918:
Silently the shades of evening
Gather 'round our lonely door;
Silently they bring before us
The dear face we see no more.
So often do we go to her grave,
Lingering there and trying to be brave,
But, oh, 'tis hard to bear
To go away and leave her there.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, FATHER AND BROTHERS AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In loving memory of our darling wife, daughter and sister, Theresa Boggiano who departed this life two years ago, Nov. 23, 1918:
Two years since you have left us;
Why it seems but yesterday;
For in thought you will always be with us,
Though far away in that lonely grave.
When the sun is slowly sinking
And the evening shadows fall,
And we gather around the fireside,
Then we miss you most of all.
We miss your happy, smiling face,
Your ever-ready words of cheer,
Your lovable disposition
That to everyone made you so dear.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, FATHER, MOTHER, SISTER AND BROTHERS.

In memory of our only dear son and brother, William H. Jacob, who died one year ago, Nov. 23, 1919.
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be.
As long as life and memory lasts
We shall remember thee.
If we had seen you at the last
And held your dying hand,
And heard the last sigh from your heart,
We would not feel so bad.
We did not know the pains you had,
We did not see you die.
We only know you went away
And never said good-by.
It is one year since you left us,
And we miss you more and more.
Our hearts are filled with sadness
For the smile we see no more.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTERS AND UNCLE JOHN RASCHER AND FAMILY.

In loving memory of our dear son and brother, Private Oliver V. Thuet, Company E, 107th Infantry, Twenty-seventh Division, who so nobly answered the call of his country; and of whom our dear Lord asked the supreme sacrifice on Nov. 21, 1918, in the Hindenburg battle:
Sad, alone, I go my way,
Since you died two years today;
If we had seen you at the last
And held your dying hand,
And heard the last sigh from your heart,
We would not feel so bad.
The glorious work of a soldier
And with the first of them, strongest and best,
He sailed away in glory
From the land of the free and blest.
At rest in peace, an American soldier true,
Buried beneath the Red, White and Blue.
When our work on earth is done,
Then we will meet our beloved one.
Sadly missed by
PARENTS, BROTHERS, SISTER, AND ALL WHO LOVED HIM.

Cadillac
STANDARD OF THE WORLD

Rebuilt Cadillacs

We cannot say too much about these wonderful cars. Rebuilt, refinished and guaranteed just as we guarantee a new car. Under its hood is an engine that is the most wonderful power plant yet created for motor vehicles. It has no rival, except in other Cadillacs. No car of any other make offers anything like relative value at these prices. To own one of these rebuilt models is to own in every sense a practically new car.

The Old Order Changeth

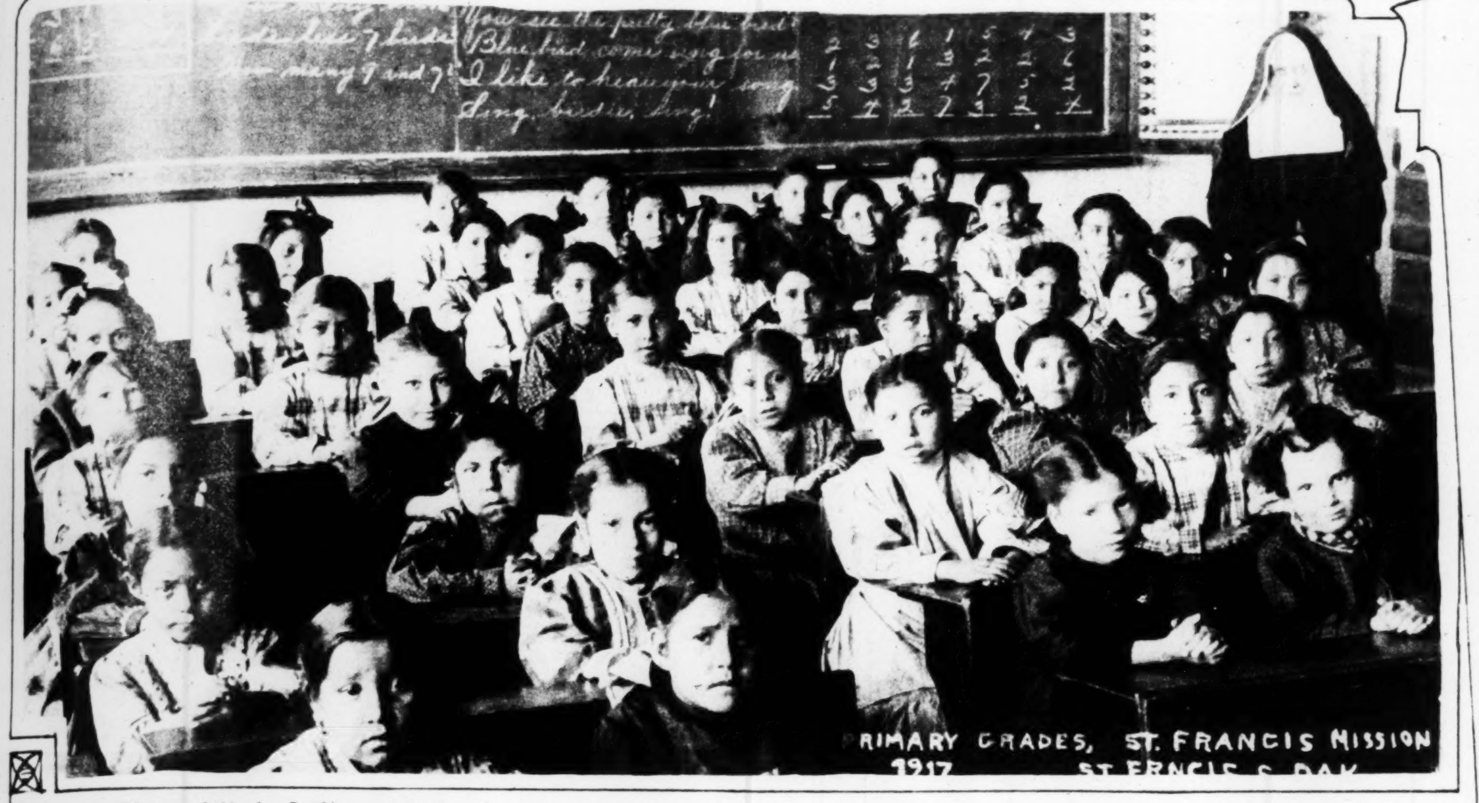
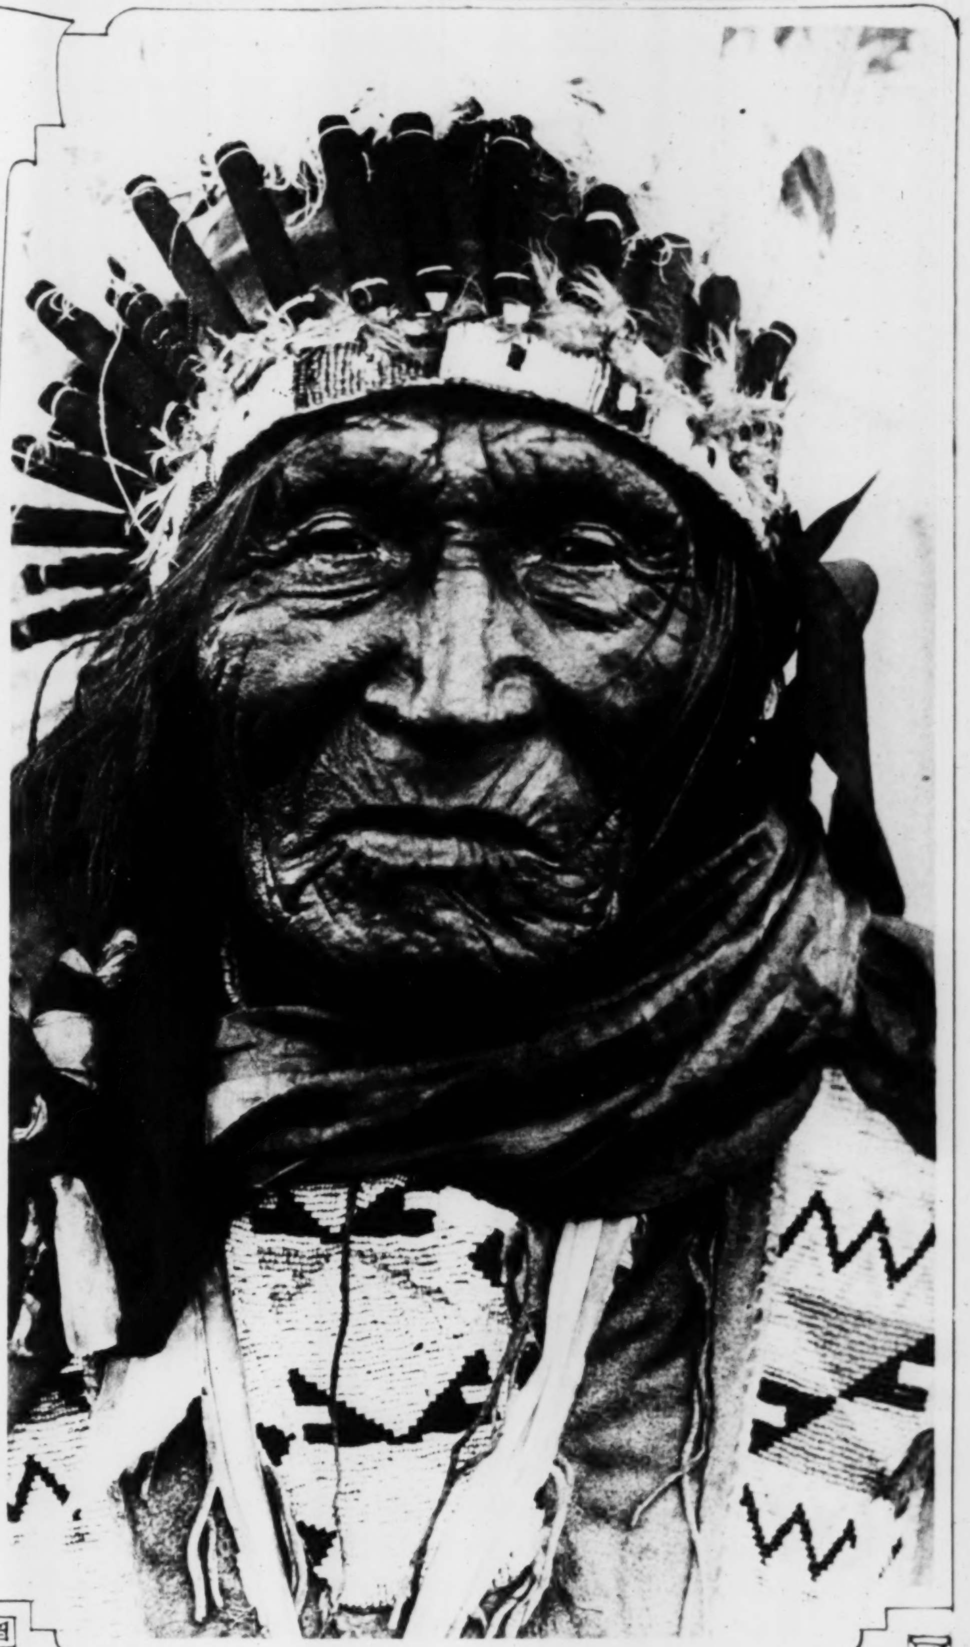
These interesting pictures were made at the St. Francis Mission on the Rosebud Reservation, South Dakota. About 320 young Sioux Indians of the Lakota branch are enrolled in the school, where a practical education is given them. The boys are taught by Jesuit priests and the girls by the Franciscan sisters. The mission was established in 1885. The photographs were taken by Joseph A. Zimmerman who was a teacher in the school for several years and is now taking advanced work at St. Louis University in preparation for returning there. On the Rosebud reservation are between 5000 and 6000 Sioux Indians.



You see the pretty blue bird
Blue bird come sing for us
I like to hear your song
Sing, birdie, sing!
RIMARY GRADES, ST. FRANCIS MISSION
1917
ST FRANCIS S DAK

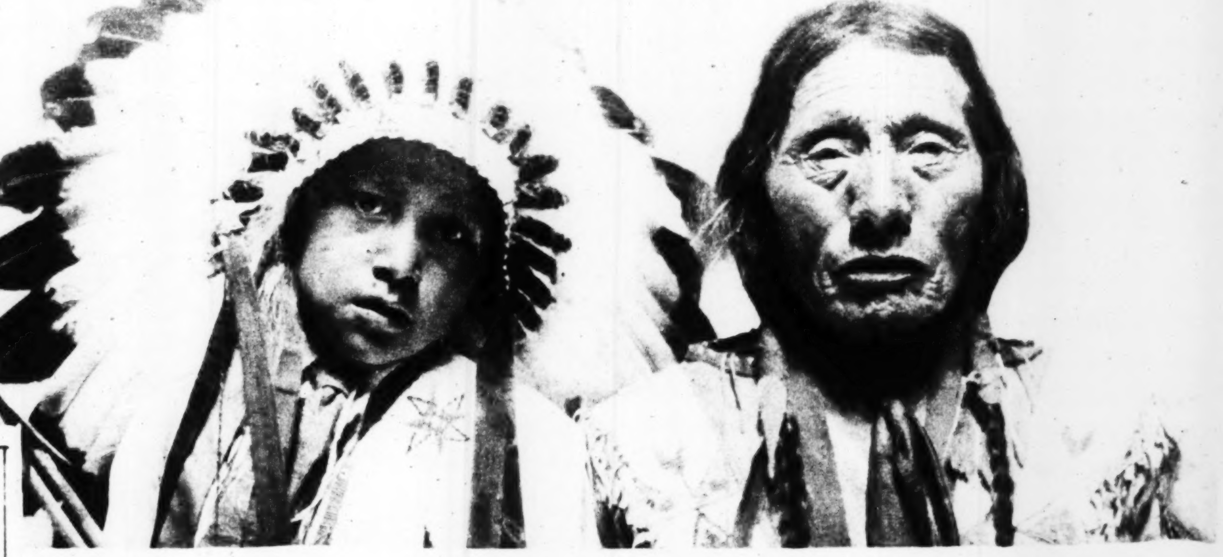
Class of little Indian girls in the primary grade at St. Francis Mission. They enter at age of 6 years and usually don't know a word of English. Within two months they have enough of the new tongue for daily needs.



Chief He-Dog, one of the old timers of the tribe who accompanied Chief Spotted Tail to Washington in 1872, when formal peace was made between the Sioux and the United States Government. This picture was taken Aug. 1, 1920.

Arthur Runs (left) and Joe Runs, grandsons of Chief Spotted Tail, who was a famous leader for 50 years and a friend of Chief Red Cloud, head of Ogalala branch of Sioux. Spotted Tail was active in uprising which grew out of the "Messiah craze" and which culminated in fight of Wounded Knee.

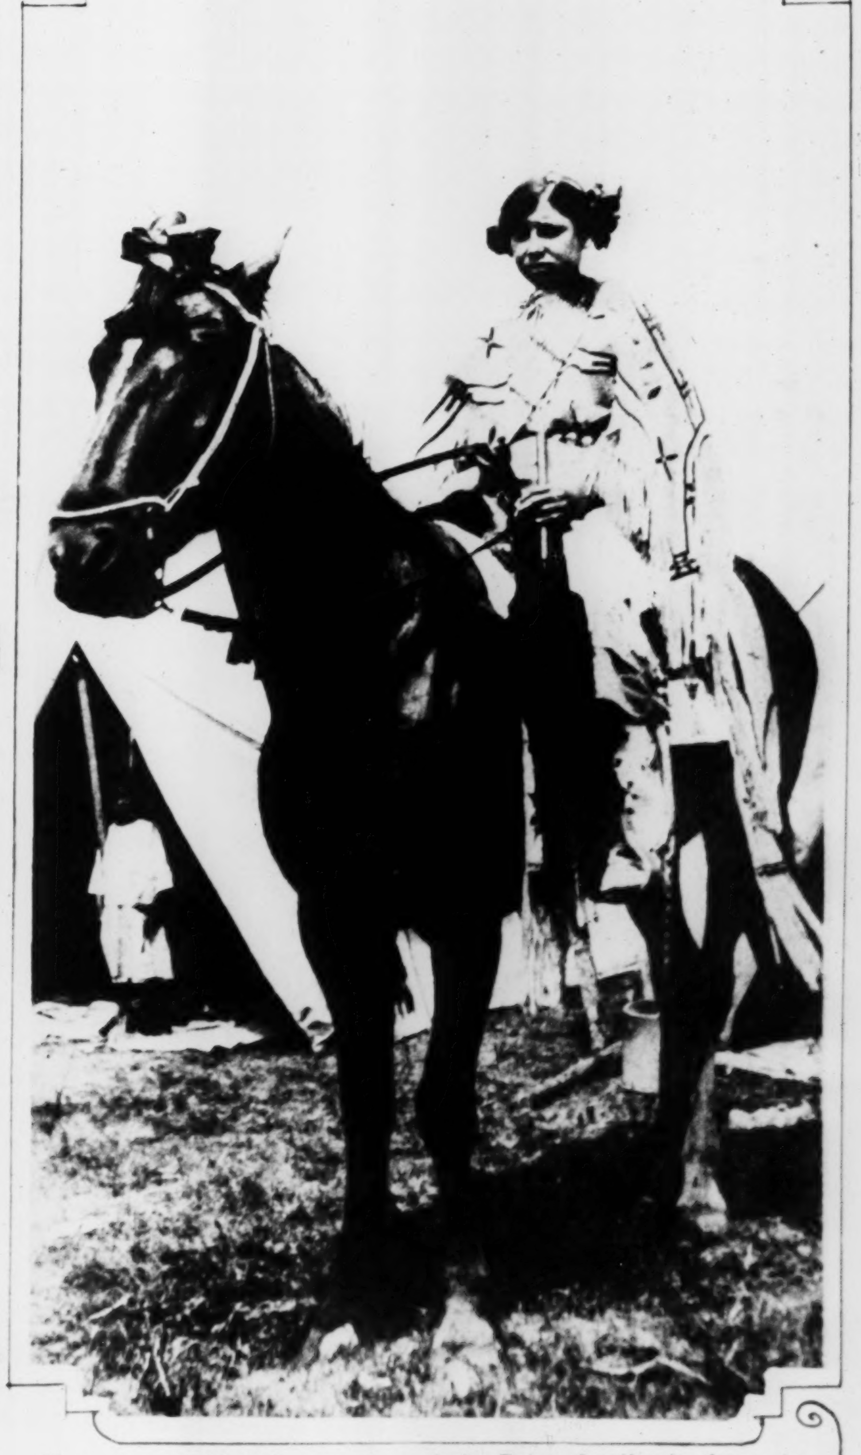
When the mission laundry burned down, several months ago, young Indian women who are in upper grades got out old-fashioned washtubs and did the school washing until better arrangements could be made.



Albert Thunder Hawk, photographed with his grandfather, Chief High Horse. This boy is regarded as one of the brightest children who ever entered school at St. Francis Mission His plans are "to be a farmer."

Philip Gurue, 13 years old, who is part Indian and part French. He is shown practicing for a good score in competitions of junior rifle corps. Behind him, wagon and tent of a family camping on mission grounds.

These plump Indian girls evidently like the product of the machine which they were using when caught by the camera. It is a churn, and only pure milk and cream go into it. Besides a dairy course, the girls are taught cooking, sewing and other items of housework.



This 14-year-old girl, a member of the Brave family, is shown in the finery in which she (and the horse) participated in the last Fourth of July races at Rosebud. The Indians make a big celebration of the Fourth. It begins on July 2 and lasts for three days

Your hands express your real self —be sure you manicure them the right way

How you can have hands as well groomed as these

THE consciousness of unbecoming or unattractive clothes may hurt—but it cannot strike deep down as can the fear that you are judged wanting in real refinement. That you are judged unmistakably lacking in personal nicety.

Of all the indications of personal refinement, the most significant, next to personal cleanliness, is well-kept nails. To many, ill-kept nails indicate actual vulgarity.

The most important part of the manicure is the care of the cuticle. Never cut it. Well groomed women the country over know that cutting ruins the cuticle—that it leaves it rough and uneven. But with the Cutex way you can always have perfect nails and cuticle.

With a bit of cotton wrapped about an orange stick and dipped in Cutex work around the base of the nails. Then wash the hands, pressing back the cuticle with a towel. For snowy nail tips apply a bit of Cutex Nail White underneath the nails. Finish your manicure with Cutex Nail Polish.

Give yourself a Cutex manicure regularly, and you can have nails and cuticle that you are always proud of.

To keep the cuticle particularly soft and pliable, so that you need not manicure so often, apply Cutex Cold Cream at night.

Six manicures for 20 cents

Mail the coupon below with 20 cents for a Cutex Introductory Manicure Set, containing enough of each of the Cutex products to give you six manicures. Send for it today. Address Northam Warren, 114 W. 17th St., N. Y. City.

You can get Cutex in all drug and department stores. Cutex Cuticle Remover, Nail White, Nail Polish, and Cold Cream are each 35 cents. The Cuticle Remover comes also in 65-cent bottles.

BOURJOIS' JAVA FACE POWDER

An Autumn Beauty Hint

Monsieur A. Napoleon Bourjois' "Java" Face Powder shields delicate feminine skins against the coarsening effects of chill winds and grimy dust.

For over 50 years this adorably French face powder has enjoyed world-wide feminine favor because of the gradual complexion enhancement its purity confers.

Bourjois' "Ashes of Roses" (Reg. U. S. Pat. Off.), a French hand-made rouge of unique naturalness, lends the elusive touch of color so necessary to beauty.

Certainly—a deodorant that simply cannot stain!

Science has discovered a new lotion which protects one from even the slightest suggestion of perspiration offense

This new lotion is called Immac—it is exquisite, dainty and colorless. It simply cannot stain. Yet it effects instant underarm dryness without slightest injury to the most delicate skin. The magical thoroughness with which Immac solves the whole distressing problem of perspiration makes it truly a pre-requisite to faultless daintiness. At your dealer's or send fifty cents.

How to reduce them

Complexions otherwise flawless are often ruined by conspicuous nose pores.

The pores of the face are not as fine as on other parts of the body. On the nose especially, there are more fat glands than elsewhere and there is more activity of the pores. These pores, if not properly stimulated and kept free from dirt, clog up and become enlarged.

To reduce enlarged nose pores: Wring a soft cloth from very hot water, lather it with Woodbury's Facial Soap, then hold it to your face. When the heat has expanded the pores, rub in very gently a fresh lather of Woodbury's. Repeat this hot water and lather application several times, stopping at once if your nose feels sensitive. Then finish by rubbing the nose for thirty seconds with a piece of ice.

Notice the improvement the very first treatment makes—a promise of what the steady use of Woodbury's Facial Soap will do. But do not expect to change completely in a week a condition resulting from long continued exposure and neglect. Use this treatment persistently. It will gradually reduce the enlarged pores and make them inconspicuous.

Get a cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap and begin tonight the treatment your skin needs. You will find Woodbury's on sale at any drug store or toilet goods counter in the United States or Canada. A 25 cent cake will last a month or six weeks.

Beauty Secrets Revealed. Anna Q. Nilsson the Popular Actress Tells How To Instantly Have a Beautiful Rosy-White Skin and Complexion.

MISS ANNA Q. NILSSON

New York—"The secret of beauty is the proper care of the skin," says Miss Nilsson, the popular Metro star. "It only requires a few moments time and anyone is more than paid for the little effort it takes. In the first place, the skin should be kept scrupulously clean. Use a good cleansing cream (Liska cold cream I have found to be the best), follow this by bathing the face with warm water, then rinse with cold water and dry thoroughly with a coarse towel. After this process select a beautifier which in addition to being a beautifier has a healing effect on the skin. The very best I have found for this purpose is derwillo, as it instantly beautifies the complexion and its continued use makes the results permanent." Derwillo takes the place of face powder, as it stays on better and is wonderful for a shiny nose, oily, dark, sallow skin, freckles, tan, wrinkles, and other facial blemishes. Just make this test: Put derwillo on one side of your face, then look in your mirror and compare it with the other side—you will need no further argument to convince you that nothing beautifies like derwillo. It imparts a youthful appearance and if you would keep your complexion at its best all the time make derwillo a part of your toilet as you now do face powder and note the favorable comments of your friends. Short sleeves are now in vogue, use derwillo to beautify your hands and arms and protect them from roughness and ruddiness, which always follows exposure to sun, dust and wind. It is guaranteed absolutely harmless on the most delicate skin and will positively not stimulate or produce a growth of hair. Give it a thorough trial and you will never be without it. Accept no substitutes as there is nothing "better," "just as good" or "just like it."

NOTE—Ask your druggist about derwillo and he will tell you that he has never sold any toilet article which has become so popular in so short a time. This is due to the satisfaction it gives. It is guaranteed by every druggist or department store to give complete satisfaction or they will refund your money. If you don't like it, take it back. Could anything be fairer? It is sold at all toilet counters in this city, including Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph, Johnson Bros. and the Enderle Drug Cos.

POLISH BEAUTY WHO MARRIED AMERICA'S RICHEST BACHELOR

MME. GANNA WALSKA, the bride of Alexander Smith Cochran, multi-millionaire carpet manufacturer and yachtsman, whose bachelorhood was supposed to be impregnable to feminine charm, is a woman of great beauty and rare fascination. A Pole of distinguished family, she came to New York after the death of her husband, Col. de Eighorn, a Russian officer who was killed in the first year of the war, and she sought her fortune on the operatic stage. After some brief appearances here she married Dr. Joseph Fraenkel, the eminent neurologist, one of New York's most intellectual physicians. After Dr. Fraenkel's death last summer, Mrs. Fraenkel, on her way to Europe, met, as a fellow passenger, Mr. Cochran, and their marriage in Paris occurred soon afterward. Mme. Walska proposes to continue her operatic career, and she will sing with the Chicago Operatic Company this fall, in compliance with a contract she entered into before Dr. Fraenkel's death.

'Profiteering Off the Profiteers'

A New Industry That One Individual Raised to an Art

Shrewd adventurer, taking advantage of general resentment against post war prices, succeeded in arousing customers against merchants and making money out of both sides in the controversy — Tour across the country resulted everywhere in profit for himself

THE AMERICAN LEAGUE AGAINST PROFITEERING!

Many persons have never heard of this particular outgrowth of the clamor against high prices. In that case they have missed something. For, under cover of symbolic titles similar to the one mentioned, certain shrewd individuals have "cleaned up" handsomely in various cities by playing the merchants and their customers against each other and pocketing resultant profits themselves.

One man in particular developed "league" work to such a fine point that he left a trail clear across the country and is still well remembered in some of the smaller cities.

Six or eight months ago this blithe adventurer was loafing about New York wondering where a winter's sustenance might be coming from. Times were lean with him and prospects dreary. The city seemed to offer little chance of easy money—the only sort with which this young man has any acquaintance. So he turned his eyes westward and shortly took his steps in the same direction.

One morning last spring this blithe rascal (let us call him Jones for convenience) arrived in a Pennsylvania town of moderate size and went presently to a newspaper office where he paid for the following advertisement:

> WANTED—Young American veterans to aid in fighting the profiteers. Come in uniform only. Easy canvassing. Good pay. Apply American League Against Profiteering. Thomas Jones, grand commander, 111 Blank Building. Tuesday between 9 and 11 o'clock.

A few minutes earlier the same Thomas Jones had rented desk room in the Blank Building. A little later he appeared at the shop of a job printer and gave an order for a small amount of stationery, with "The American League Against Profiteering" largely displayed in type and the grand commander, Thomas Jones, not overlooked.

These details attended to, Jones set out to enjoy the fine weather and to wait for morning. He sauntered about the town with his eyes open. At dusk he permitted himself the best dinner the hotel afforded. Afterwards he settled himself into a big chair in the lobby and considered.

This little scheme he was about to put into operation was not without antecedents. Indeed, Thomas Jones had derived the idea from the old trading-stamp game, in which he had figured in earlier years. It was customary with trading-stamp magnates to go to merchants who had slow or unsalable stocks in their cellars and to point out to the shop keepers how these stocks might be moved. The plan was simplicity itself. The merchants advertised a cut-price sale. He listed a lot of goods at fair prices and had dodgers or handbills printed and distributed announcing his sale and the fact that he gave Mauve Trading Stamps. At the bottom of the bill, in extra-sized type was this legend:

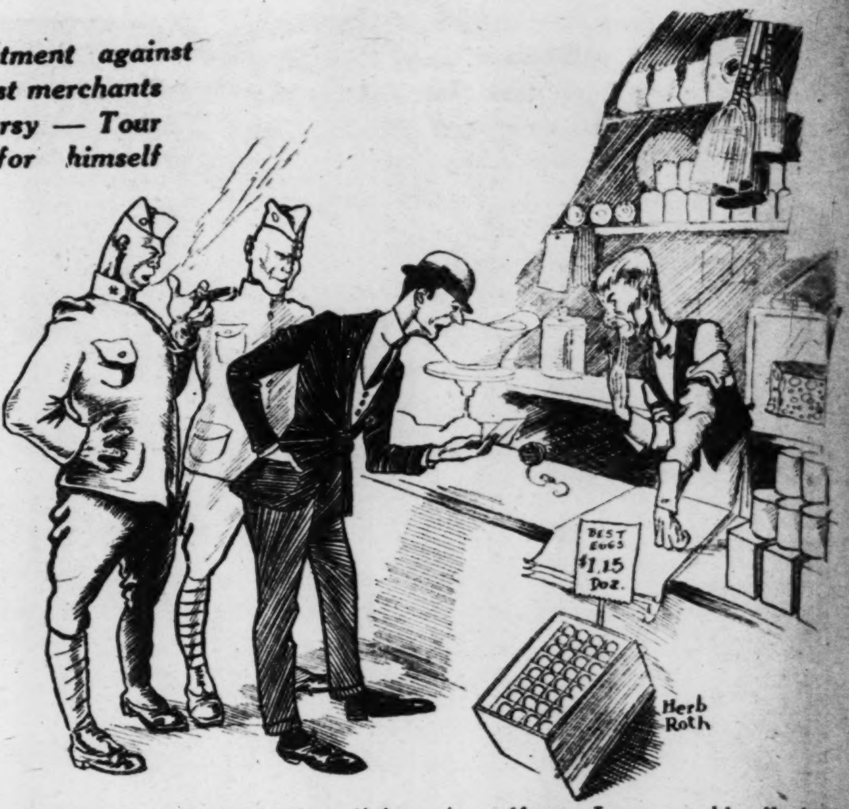
"Special.—Extra fancy XXXX brand French peas; regularly 35 cents. In this sale tomorrow only—27 cents. Ten Mauve Trading Stamps with each can."

These peas had been in the shopkeeper's cellar for two years. They were particularly unsalable. But the trading stamp man had shown the merchant how to move them. Their regular price was 25 cents and not 35. A couple of cents were added to the price to cover in part the value of the trading stamps which were given as an inducement to gullible women. And the peas moved.

This bit of merchandising methods was about to be applied in a new and elaborate way.

At 9 o'clock the next morning Thomas Jones found 20 young men in olive drab waiting at his office. He took his place before his rented desk and outlined briefly what was wanted. He was, he said, the founder and grand commander of the American League Against Profiteering, which was a national organization formed to combat the unfair prices and to get a square deal for the consumers, among whom were the parents, wives, relatives of the assembled heroes.

Jones was careful not to explain that he had chosen the name American League because it sounded very like American Legion. Neither did he say that he expected most people to mistake it for the American Legion, in view of the fact that its propaganda would be spread by ex-soldiers in uniform. These subtleties were known only to the Grand Commander himself.



Accompanied by two burly solicitors in uniform, Jones would sally forth to take the merchants to task for profiteering.

The mission of the soldiers was made clear. They were to start out and canvass the town, soliciting housewives to join the league at 25 cents per membership. For this 25 cents the canvassing soldiers were to promise, first, a daily list of fair prices on standard commodities; second, the right to complain to the league in case of overcharge and to have the league right the wrong; third, the official button of the league. This last was more than a promise. It was handed over on the spot, a plain celluloid button with naught thereon but the joyous words: "Down With the Profiteers."

"Now, boys," said Thomas Jones to his assembled soldiers, "I want you to go out and get the members. The money you collect is yours. Yes, I mean it. We don't want any part of the membership fees. The quarters you collect go into your own pockets. They're yours for your work. But we want the names and addresses of all the members you get. Is that fair? Well, I should say so.

"Now, then, let me give you a few tips. Don't go to the door and ask the woman to join the league. Go up and ask her point blank if she knows the price of potatoes today. Show her how she's being robbed. And, er, by the way, make her think she's being robbed whether she is or not. If she isn't on potatoes, she is on something else. Then, after you've shown her how her grocer is profiteering on her, spring the league on her, get her name, her membership and her quarter.

"And, boys, make this strong. Tell them to be dead sure to send us a postal card and tell us of any merchant that overcharges them. Tell them we have a complaint department that goes out and handles these merchants. Tell the ladies to send us the name of every merchant that overcharges them, with the price they paid for the article and all about the transaction. This is most important. Get me? Fine. Now, boys go to it."

And the 20 amiable heroes went grandly forth in the service of the downtrodden consumer—and Thomas Jones.

This matter attended to, Jones went down the street to his printer and gave a second order. This time he contracted for some hundreds of large sign cards. In the center of each was the Star-Spangled Banner in colors. Above was the legend "Square Deal Store." Beneath were the words "Member of the American League Against Profiteering." Another stack of cards was prepared on the same general design, but with the difference that the principal legend was changed to "Anti-Profiteering Store." On still another batch of these cards appeared the words "Fair Price Store." These cards were delivered to the impresario of the league the following day. And thereupon he set out in person to do a little canvassing.

Not many squares from his office Thomas Jones came upon the shop of a grocer and entered.

"Mr. Grocer," said he blandly, "I represent the American League Against Profiteering. All your customers are members or will be in the next few days." At these fell words the merchant blanched and began to expostulate.

"Don't get excited," said Jones, suavely. "We haven't had any complaints against you—yet. But"——

The hapless grocer moved in the direction of the cash register.

"I think you ought to be a member of the league," said Mr. Jones, bringing one of his beautifully printed cards from his portfolio. "Put this up in your store and the thing is done. We will allow no other grocer within a radius of four blocks to be a member of the league. The result will be that everyone will come to you. You'll have the only Square Deal store in the neighborhood and be the only member of the league. Membership to you is $5 and up goes this beautiful card."

The cash register flew open with a cheerful tingle and Thomas Jones departed with a nice, crisp banknote which had not been among his possessions five minutes before.

Turning the corner, Jones came upon grocer No. 2 and repeated the operation practically as before, with the sole difference that the card he gave this merchant read "Anti-profiteering Store."

Thus did the busy Jones improve each shining hour. At night he returned to his desk, weary but happy and copiously supplied with notes in the denomination of five dollars.

The next morning Jones greeted his soldier solicitors with a cheerful smile and good news. He wished to organize the league at once in a regular military way. While he was the

When a town was sufficiently "organized," Jones would take his departure, bearing with him a roll of bills ever increasing in size.

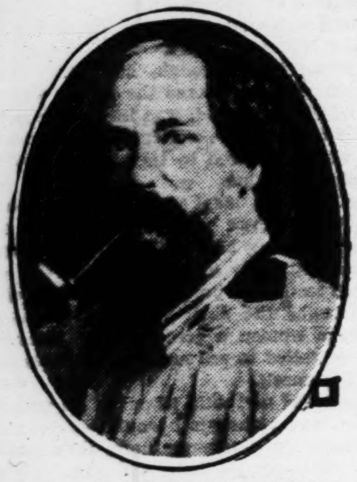
THE CURIOUS LAWSUIT OVER LORD LEVERHULME'S PORTRAIT

Augustus E. John, noted British artist, is involved in litigation with Britain's "soap and fish millionaire" over the mutilation of a portrait that John painted for the peer and from which the latter cut out the head—Question involved, as to whether artist retains creator's rights in picture after sale, interesting London

WHEN a noted artist disposes of one of his paintings does he thereby lose proprietary interest in the canvas as a work of art?

This question is now being thrashed out in the law courts of England in a suit that has attracted international attention. For August John, celebrated portrait painter, has become involved in litigation with Lord Leverhulme, Britain's largest employer of labor, over what he terms mutilation of the likeness he painted of the peer.

John claims in his suit that the exhibition of the mutilated portrait with his name attached would do him injury, as it does not truly represent his handiwork. Lord Leverhulme, on the other hand, asserts that he paid for the canvas and that it is his own to do with as he pleases.



—Copyright, Kadel and Herbert.

Augustus E. John, British portrait painter who disputes the right of a purchaser to mar his work.

Artists of practically all countries support John in his position. They assert that the art of a man is a tangible asset and that any injury to it by creating mistaken public impressions, is an offense coming under the law of liabilities.

On the other hand, the stolid British populace, with its fixed ideas of property rights, seems to have taken the general ground that selling a portrait was much the same as selling a house and that the purchaser has the right to make alterations in one as much as in the other.

So the tangibility of "art" is really the point at issue. The courts will have to decide just what status the term holds under the law.

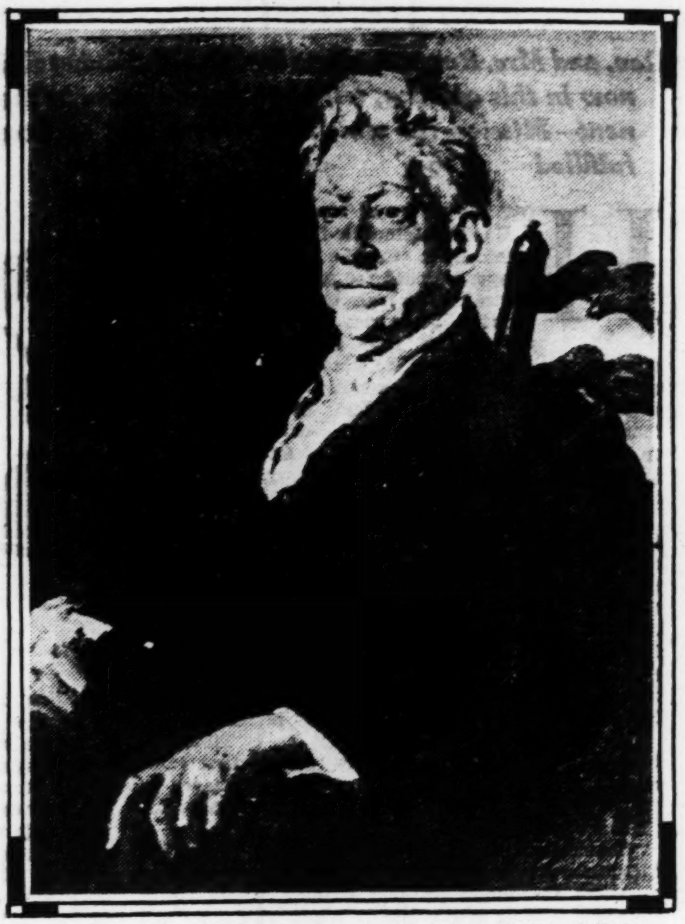
The portrait in question was painted at the special request of Lord Leverhulme, who is known as England's "soap and fish" multimillionaire and who attracted great attention while on his trip through this country last year on account of his views on the labor question.

August John accepted the commission for painting the likeness and duly delivered a portrait of Lord Leverhulme, seated in a chair with his hands resting idly on his lap. There was no dispute over the likeness. But the peer decided that it would look better if only the face and neck appeared.

Accordingly, he had the canvas reduced by cutting out the head to a point just above the chest, leaving the face and the old-fashioned stock in which he had chosen to be painted as the sole portions to be framed.

What many persons believe is the crux of the whole situation then occurred. The persons to whom he had intrusted the work of removing the head from the canvas, through some misunderstanding, boxed up the mutilated remainder and sent it back, not to the Leverhulme offices, but to the studio of the artist.

Possibly those of artistic temperament can realize the emotions that filled the breast of August John when he opened the case and saw therein his masterpiece, over which he had labored for months, apparently ruthlessly defiled. So unexpected was the arrival that it is hardly surprising that he fancied some deliberate slight was intended.



—Copyright, Kadel and Herbert.

Portrait of Lord Leverhulme as it appeared when delivered by the artist to the peer.

In reality, Lord Leverhulme seems to have intrusted the job to some person who, not knowing what else to do with the canvas, shipped it back to the address it bore without further ado.

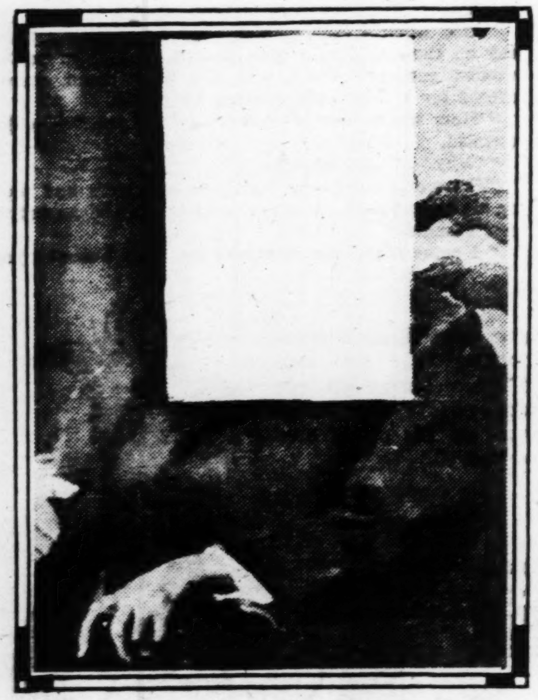
Now, Lord Leverhulme, although of undoubted genius in business, in which he started as a grocer's clerk, has a reputation for doing things in a "go-ahead" sort of fashion that has frequently aroused protests. A couple of years ago he purchased two islands off the Scottish coast and the fashion in which he set about "improving" those places has already involved him in litigation with the British Government. A hearing in the case was held Oct. 4 last.

Accordingly, Artist John is probably not to be blamed for his supposition that some unusual affront was intended to him when his canvas "with the soul removed" suddenly reappeared before his vision.

Lord Leverhulme started life as William Hesketh Lever. He commenced as errand boy for a grocer, and when he was 25 had worked his way to an assistant's position, had saved some money and had been married three years. On one of his half-holidays, while on a trip to Hindley, he noticed a wholesale grocery business for sale, on which the proprietors were willing to accept a small initial payment. He bought the property deciding that it would be a good place from which to push the sale of a small soap tablet he had invented in 1874. A study of the advertising columns of publications at that time will show the dearth of toilet requisites in England as compared to today, and the huge manufactories of England were turning out soap in the same stereotyped designs and scents that had prevailed for years. In fact, antiquity in recipes was one of the proudest boasts of the manufacturer of the day. Modern methods of soap making were scoffed at.

Young Lever saw the possibilities in the market, borrowed enough money to start a small factory, and by 1891 was making clear profits of $250,000 yearly. A short time later he refused an offer of $3,000,000 for his property. Today, his business is capitalized at $500,000,000 and "Port Sunlight," his vast factory site, where he turns out soap, is one of the best known manufactories of the sort in the world. It is just opposite Liverpool.

Possibly the peer's reputation for quick action may have impelled Artist John to resent his handiwork being treated so cavalierly when he might not have objected to reducing the picture himself, had he been consulted.



—Copyright, Kadel and Herbert.

The mutilated canvas, showing the portion of the painting that was shipped back to artist John after the head had been cut out by Lord Leverhulme's orders.

His attitude in the matter is strongly upheld by artists in England and this country and several St. Louis portrait painters, when asked for their opinion in the matter, stated emphatically that John had a perfect right to object to any alterations in his handiwork unless he made them himself.

The consensus of opinion in the local artists' colony seems to be sized up by Edmund H. Wuerpel, director of the art museum of Washington University, who believes that John is well within his rights.

"If Lord Leverhulme cut out the head from the portrait, he had no right to show it as John's work," he said, "as it in no sense represented the finished masterpiece that John had created, but only a fragment—and this fragment may not be typical of the artist's work when shown without the background and the perspective for which he designed it.

"Any artist would object to such treatment. Lord Leverhulme is not showing John's work. He is showing a portion of it that the artist may regard simply as a caricature.

"This proprietorship of the artist does not extend to any physical interest in the picture, you must understand, so far as the actual possession of the canvas is concerned. Lord Leverhulme could have sold the portrait or destroyed it if he wished, for the physical property was his.

"But the reputation of an artist has a distinct standing in the courts of law. And Mr. John has a perfect right to question whether his reputation has been injured by the mutilation of his painting and its possible exhibition as a sample of his work.

"I cannot recall any exactly parallel case in art circles. But I remember that the artist, Whistler, once painted a portrait of Lady Eden that Lord Eden refused to accept as it stood. There was a case of likeness and treatment involved, I believe, and litigation followed. Whistler, I believe, was awarded some small nominal sum in damages. This was in 1893 or 1894."

Artists in general take the same attitude concerning John's right of protest. In the meantime, while British art circles are viewing the suit from esthetic grounds, the social world of London is really vastly amused over the entire proceedings in the hope that when Lord Leverhulme is called to the stand he will take some attitude that will be unconventional enough to be of interest.

So London is waiting in quiet amusement for the outcome of the litigation. Augustus E. John, the artist, is president of the National Portrait Society of England.

Taking the Baby Along on a Missionary Tour Through Cannibal Africa

Rev. and Mrs. Roger S. Guptill of the Methodist Episcopal church, now in this country, tell of their five years in the dark continent—Mission for which they were sent to Congo region is fulfilled* -o- -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-

While the missionary party was stopping at a kraal one evening, on the arduous journey to the Coast, a lion raided the camp and carried off a native.

HOW the Rev. and Mrs. Roger S. Guptill, Methodist Episcopal missionaries to the Belgian Congo, marched for more than 100 miles through the jungle country of Africa, carrying their young baby in a meat safe and receiving everwhere kindly treatment from natives, who are admittedly cannibals, is being graphically told by the couple, who have returned to this country on leave. They were in the heart of Africa for five years, in the region beyond the Cape to Cairo railroad.

This march, through one of the most densely wooded regions of the Dark Continent, traversing districts where they were entirely out of touch with civilization, with a young baby as an added care, was an experience which any person might dread. The Guptills were not dismayed, however, and cheerfully, intrusting themselves and their infant to the savage tribes, they found their confidence upheld and reached the seaport in safety.

But Mrs. Guptill, who is now staying at Tilton, N. H., admits that when the native carriers first came to take charge of her baby, which was suspended in its "meat safe" of wire netting on a pole, carried between two men, her heart misgave her.

"No one had ever carried a baby through Central Africa in a meat safe before," she said, "and we had no precedent to follow. In that country, where ice is unknown, a meat safe is simply a box with sides and top made of wire netting. This keeps off flies and allows the air to circulate.

"We realized that to march through the insect-infested country with the baby unprotected would be to sign its death warrant—for its tender skin could not have resisted the constant attacks of stinging and blood-sucking insects. So we decided to use a provision case, or a meat safe.

"We put a mattress from the baby's crib in the bottom of one of the safes, closed the lid of netting over him and there we carried him throughout the entire trip. Although the tset-se fly, so deadly to cattle, is not supposed ordinarily to attack man, we feared that it might be attracted by the baby and took every precaution when he was removed from his 'cage.' But he escaped without injury.

"The first time the natives took complete charge of the baby, I was much afraid. They have been more or less cannibalistic since time began, and although some tribes were presumably reformed, they were still uncertain quantities. The box was padlocked, to be sure, and I carried the key. But that would have done no good if the natives had decided to break open the fragile cage. Moreover, I could not help wondering what the carriers thought when they looked at the baby, and I was always more or less nervous."

Yet, although the Guptill caravan was the first to go over that particular trail since the disappearance of another expedition that had attempted the same route a few years before, they received kindly attention from the natives Their presence in the heart of wildest Africa was evidently known to all the surrounding tribes, by some mysterious means of communication which savages have, and their coming to a village was always known beforehand.

This foreknowledge of their coming was a surprise to the Guptills at first. In every village they found the natives waiting to receive them. One system of communication is by drum signals and although it seems incredible that these can carry to the distances through which their warning notes seemed to have been sent, the explanation has been advanced by scientists that the beat of the drums is in such a pitch that the natives can distinguish it from the ordinary sounds of the jungles for miles. Certainly they seem able to hear the drums at a distance when the sound is entirely inaudible to a white man.

Sometimes the booming notes of the drums could be heard as they neared a village, however, warning the natives that a "malungu," or white party, was approaching. The natives invariably turned out en masse to receive them, and every individual of the party was subjected to the closest scrutiny. The party had taken along some bicycles, with the idea of riding at times when the trail was smooth enough, and these were objects of the greatest interest to the natives. The savages considered the caravan of as much interest as a circus procession and enjoyed themselves accordingly.

Stops at villages always resulted in close attention being paid to Mrs. Guptill by the women, especially when she let down her long, black hair for combing. The native women all have short, kinky hair, and even this sparse head covering is kept clipped.

"Once when I was combing my hair after a hard day on the trail," said Mrs. Guptill, "a mob of native women gathered about, and one big woman, naked except for a loin cloth, stalked up to me.

"'How much your husband pay for you?' she demanded.

"'Why,' I said, 'nothing.'

"The woman drew up her bare shoulders and took on a swagger such as only a child or an African native can assume.

"'I come high,' she informed me. 'My husband pay four good cows for me—and I not got long hair like you.'

"Then she swaggered off to her own hut with evident pity at my inability to defend myself for being so cheap. She was a lady of quality.

"The women were kindly enough, however. They advised me in what they considered the proper way to carry the baby, which, they said, was in a cloth hung about my neck. I declined the advice, even when one kindly disposed woman offered to tie up the baby in the approved fashion for me.

"In one village, after the usual exchange of presents, I gave an old chief—Dibwe was his name—an old plaid walking skirt, telling him it was for his favorite wife. He was extremely grateful and showed all of his sharply filed teeth in a broad grin as he fingered the pleats. I thought the skirt would give one of those simple savage women a great deal of pleasure. But when the chief called to see me the next morning, he was wearing it himself.

"The women regarded my build as out of all proportion to my height, and although I would be regarded as having a tendency to plumpness here, they named me Nakantepa, which means 'long and thin,' or, as my husband disrespectfully suggests, 'skinny.' He himself had various names given to him by the natives. 'Bana ba lesa,' which means 'Child of God,' and Mefundisi,' or 'teacher,' were the most common. On account of his knickerbockers, he was also known as 'kapatulu,' which seems to mean 'short dress.' I presume they have no word for trousers."

Description of the district through which the party passed shows that the trip was not all a pleasure jaunt. The caravan went through swamps and around morasses, where the brown papyrus grew everywhere. Broad veldts, with jungle grass higher than a man's head were then traversed. Rivers had to be forded and Mr. Guptill often carried his wife over on his shoulders, with the water up to his own neck.

One of the hardest passages was on a swinging bridge made of vines across the Luvoi River, a stream filled with crocodiles. The carriers made their way across with the utmost difficulty and several lost their loads. Mr. Guptill carried over the baby in his arms.

At the kraal of Kabongo, where they stayed for a time, the natives erected a house for them of poles smeared with mud for the walls and with a thatched roof. This immediately became a haunt for all manner of vermin, from wood ants to lizards and snakes, who sought shelter and dryness within.

Through all the march, the baby lived contentedly behind its screen of wire netting. The swaying motion of the meat safe, suspended from the pole between the two carriers, seemed to be pleasing to the child, and he slept much of the distance on the march.

When a village was reached, the child immediately became a center of interest. The entire population, trooping out to meet the arrivals, would have its attention held by the mite of white humanity seen in his little cage. Then some woman—who had been crowded into the background while the lords and masters of the villages made the first inspection—would see that it was a young baby, and a howl of delight would go up. White babies are a distinct novelty—in fact, an unknown quantity—in that region, and the child seemed to win the hearts of the women. They

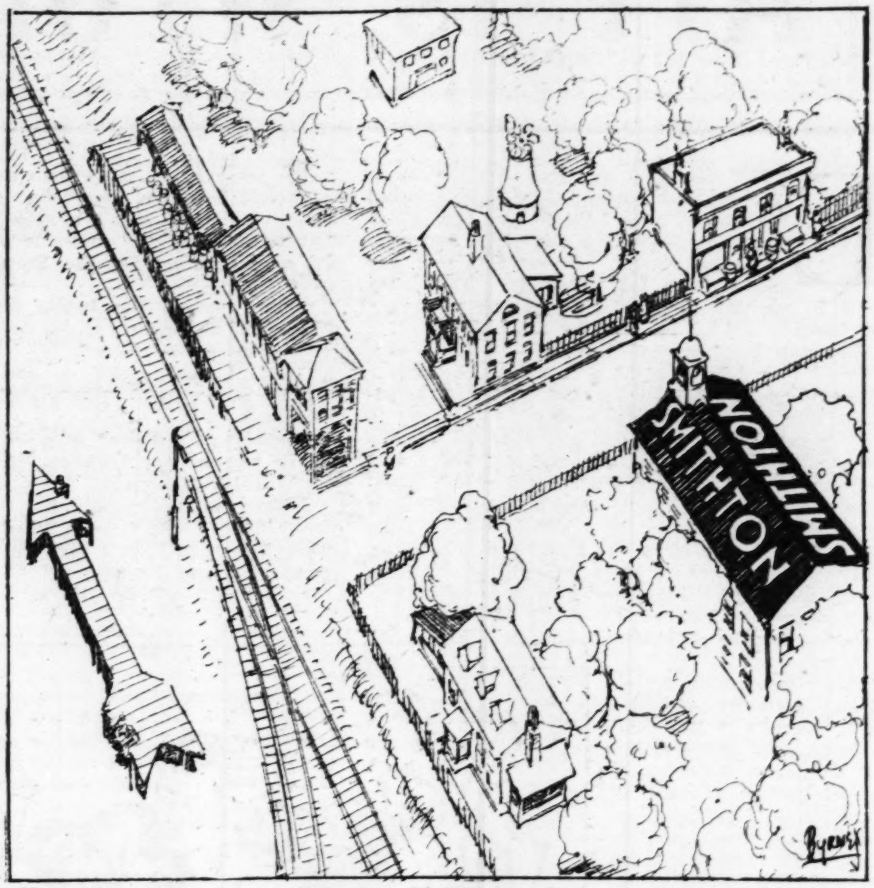
The Guptill baby, placed in a meat safe of wire netting that was suspended from a pole borne on the shoulders of two carriers, seemed to relish the swaying of his novel conveyance.

Sky Route for St. Louis-Chicago Mail Proves Worth, Now the Pilots Want Ground Signs

Performance figures of the St. Louis Air Mail Field high during 40-day period which included rains and storms — The flyers feel worse about it than anybody else when the airplane sacks have to be "trained" -o- -o- -o- -o- -o-



How the enterprising village of Smithton will look, after doing its part for efficient airplane service.

THE United States air mail service between St. Louis and Chicago has proven itself a practical enterprise. A study of "performance," not during the pleasant days of September, but over a period which included some decidedly bad weather, demonstrates that it is a success.

In the period from Oct. 1 to Nov. 9, inclusive, the service had to contend with nearly all sorts of weather conditions except winter's snow and prolonged cold spells. The score for performance, nevertheless, was just 95 per cent.

From Aug. 16, when the St. Louis-Chicago service started, until Oct. 1, the performance had been 94 1-2 per cent, as calculated under the drastic rules of the Postoffice Department. It was expected that October and early November, which brought weather much less favorable, including much fog and several severe rainstorms, would show a decided slackening in performance. However, it did not materialize.

In fair weather and foul, in breathless calm and heavy wind, in dusty drouth and pouring rain, the daily plane, with its sacks of mail, has left St. Louis in the morning. Only a few times has it been compelled to circle back, descend and abandon the trip. In the afternoon another plane, which left Chicago that morning, has landed in the air mail field in Forest Park and "taxied" up to the hangar.

There its sacks of mail were put into a waiting Postoffice auto truck, which usually was on its way to the main office at Eighteenth and Walnut streets in less than one minute after the airplane had touched ground. These Chicago letters have been delivered to downtown addresses on the same day they were mailed in Chicago.

The St. Louis service shows the best performance of all air mail fields in the United States, according to information which has been received from Washington. As yet, however, it has fallen short of satisfying the stringent requirements under which a bonus of either 5 or 10 per cent will be paid the personnel of a field which attains a certain percentage of performance.

These requirements are minute and voluminous, since each of the various types of plane used in the air mail service must be considered separately as to the speed demanded for high rating.

But briefly, the performance is based on the proportion of starts from the field made within 15 minutes of the schedule time; the proportion of trips in which the machine exceeded a certain speed per mile (which differs for the various makes); the proportion of trips made without other than scheduled landings; and the proportion of trips on which there was no damage to the plane or to the motor.

These statistics, recorded daily, are assembled by quarters, or three-month periods, and the performance is figured from the extent to which these different percentages have satisfied the bonus requirements. No bonus has yet been paid on any air mail field in the country.

In the period from Oct. 1 to Nov. 9, inclusive, there were 34 flying days, with a maximum of 68 trips possible. Under the first requirement in figuring performance, that of starting promptly, there were three marks against the St. Louis air mail field. Deducting these three late starts from the 68 total, and dividing the remainder by 68, gives a percentage of 95 1-2.

Under the second requirement, that of speed maintenance, there was only one mark against the local field, and dividing 67 by 68 gives a percentage of 98 1-2. Under the third requirement, as to forced landings, there was a total of eight such, or eight marks against the field. Dividing 60 by 68 gives a percentage of 88. And under the fourth requirement, regarding damage to plane or motor, there was none whatever, meaning a percentage of 100.

An average of the four figures obtained as above gives 95 per cent as the performance of the St. Louis field during the period from Oct. 1 to Nov. 9, inclusive. Another interesting point, although it does not come under the head of performance, is that of mail which, because of weather conditions, could not be taken by plane. The laconic entry of "mail trained" is one which the men at the field hate to put down, but sometimes it can't be helped.

On Oct. 25, because of dense fog, the mail was "trained" in both directions. On Oct 26, the fog continuing, St. Louis carried the mail as far as Rantoul, where the pilot decided he could not go any further, and the sacks were put on a train. The plane did not start at all from Chicago. On Nov. 1, because of thick clouds and low visibility, the pilots did not even "take off," as leaving the ground on a flight is called.

In 34 flying days, St. Louis only sent the mail out on a train twice, and from Rantoul only once. Excessive fog was the cause.

Pilots who are making the trips between St. Louis and Chicago say that the route is one of the best in the United States. Once the plane has gotten some 30 miles from St. Louis there are practically no woods on the rest of the trip, but practically all open country and many fields suitable for landing, if necessary.

Another favorable feature of the St. Louis-Chicago air route, say the pilots, is that from St. Louis to Rantoul, Ill., where the planes often stop for gasoline or oil, the direction is 45 degrees east of north, while section lines are laid out due north and south, and east and west. Therefore, the pilot has only to bisect the angles in the corners of fields to make sure of keeping his direction. The airplane compass, due to its rough life, is notoriously unreliable.

From Rantoul, the course is just 10 degrees east of north, which is also quite easy for the pilot to approximate, without the aid of a compass. This route is 160 miles from St. Louis to Rantoul and 110 miles from Rantoul to Chicago; total distance, 270 miles.

A slightly shorter route, but not so easily followed by the pilot, unless quite familiar with the country, is a straightaway, nonstop course from St. Louis to Chicago, passing a little east of Springfield and of Bloomington, and directly over Pontiac and Joliet. The total distance this way is 258 miles.

Between Aug. 16 and Oct. 1, the time required for the trip between St. Louis and Chicago, either way, varied from 2 1-2 to 4 1-2 hours, and averaged just 3 hours and 20 minutes. Weather conditions were good, and frequently a strong wind got behind one of the two planes and helped push it all the way across Illinois.

The 10 trips which were made between Nov. 1 and 6 inclusive, meaning five trips from St. Louis to Chicago and five more the other way, showed an average time of 3 hours and 50 minutes, or one-half hour longer time than during the mild weather. The week included days which were decidedly unfavorable for the aviator.

On a day of low barometric pressure and a steady breeze from the southwest, the pilots say, they find the St. Louis smoke blanket "way over in Illinois."

Clouds and fog are the greatest hindrances now to regular air mail service. Even pilots who have traversed a route many times may lose their course in a storm or thick fog, and, when they emerge, be unable to recognize anything on the ground. With compasses which may have a variation of as much as 90 degrees, the pilot does not know where he is nor even in what direction he is flying. He is, therefore, completely lost.

And this situation has interfered more with the maintenance of regular schedules than have thrilling accidents in midair or engine troubles.

As a remedy, the pilots flying out of St. Louis with the United States mail earnestly recommend that towns generally, even the small places, display their names for the benefit of the passing, and bewildered, aviator. One of the large roofs in a town, such as the railroad station or the schoolhouse, could be painted in some dark color, and the name of the town inscribed thereon in some prominent tint, such as white or orange.

If painting the name of the town seems like too big an undertaking, the aviators suggest that numerals be apportioned among the towns, according to some arbitrary plan which will prevent duplications, and that, instead of the names, these numbers be painted on the roofs.

These displayed names, or numerals, will help air navigators not only in stormy weather and in fog, but also

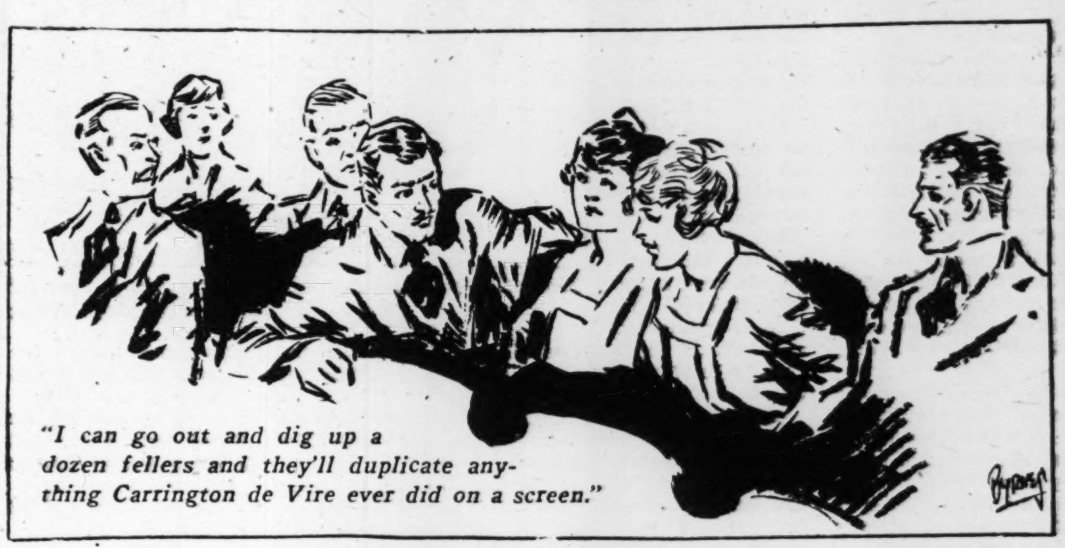
Art Is Wrong

By H. C. WITWER

EVERY time some guy goes over the top to notoriety and money in this movie called life, they is some 5,678,954 also rans which wags their heads from side to side and says: "Well—no wonder. He was born that way and couldn't help himself!" Then they go back to their dub jobs and wish they was lucky.

That stuff is all wrong! A guy may be born with different color hair from the next guy, but he's never born with any secret of success that the kid in the adjoinin' crib ain't got. All you need to be born with in order to get the world familiar with your last name is the usual number of arms, legs, and etc., and a mad habitual yearnin' to make good that a sudden hypodermic of success don't kill. Anything but failure is possible to a hustler, and by a hustler I don't mean one of them breezy birds which makes a lotta noise, thinks they is only one letter in the alphabet and that's the one after "H," but the guy which takes setbacks as encouragement and quits tryin' the day the undertaker is called in.

They's many a big artist whose ancestors thought paint was used for the sides of barns only, they's many a famous actor whose father figured Shakspeare was the name of a puddin', they's many a big league author come from families which confined their readin' matter to the city directory, and so it goes all along the line—Columbus' old man was a cotton picker. You don't inherit success, you take it by force, usin' your ambition, nerve and ability as the weapons.



"I can go out and dig up a dozen fellers and they'll duplicate anything Carrington de Vire ever did on a screen."

The above information was handed on to me by Alex. He says Broadway is too narrow and Vermont moonlight had it lookin' dark at night and he then proceeds to wed one of the prettiest girls that ever looked over the Winter Garden footlights—she makes homemade bread now, too! The first time he went to the Metropolitan Opera House he claims he'd like grand opera if they wouldn't sing and when does the acrobats come out, yet the next week he's able to take a apartment on Riverside Drive. This here is just a few of the things Alex done to break up the dull monotony of life in a burg where that and death is mere incidents.

The wife and I is sittin' together in the parlor one night and she's knittin' a sweater for me that will prob'ly make me off her for life, whilst I'm readin' aloud to her from the only novel in which true love and the like don't win out in the end. It's called "Simpson's Universal Educator," and the subject we are on is how wet is the Pacific, or some such hot stuff as that. They is a ring at the bell and the wife grabs the book outa my hand and slings about $30 worth of wool over my arms.

"Sit up straight," she says, "and look interested in this. You're helpin' me knit—get that? Look as if you like it and the minute the door opens call me dear."

"What's the idea?" I says, sittin' there with my arms out straight and stiff before me like a doll or the like. "I don't get"——

"Sssh!" she whispers. "That's probably Ruth Hopper and her husband. She's trying to get him to quit playing pinochle all night and she wants to show him what a ideal husband does."

"A penuchle fiend, hey?" I says. "Well, lead him on! We got a little game down at the corner and he'll just make up the set. It's gettin' around time for me to leave anyways. I been in a half-hour now and"——

Well, at that moment our charmin' maid leads in no less than Alex and his wife, Eve. Speakin' of good lookers, this dame would make Morgan forget about Wall street, and she's wearin' a dress that must of put some Fifth avenue store over. But the wife begins bein' pleasant to gaze upon and a delight to the naked eye where Eve leaves off. Why, she's got a movie contract which she holds over my head every time I stay out till 10 o'clock and the like. Them two dames in the one room is more than the average guy can stand and how they ever come to fall for a coupla guys like me and Alex is a subject for bigger brains than mine. They say women is peculiar, hey? Well, it's a good thing for the average guy that they are!

"Well!" remarks Eve, lookin' from me to the wife. "How perfectly sweet! If you two only knew what a pretty picture you make!"

"Yeh!" I says, gettin' up and dumpin' the near sweater on the table. "You'd almost think we wasn't married, hey?"

"Speaking of pictures," says the wife, allowin' Alex to kiss her—a thing I loathe, "let's all go down and see 'Wronged by Mistake.' They tell me"——

"Nothin' stirrin'," I butts in. "I wanna see Beryldine Nearer in 'The Woman Which Lost.' She's some dame, believe me! If I was the leadin' man in her pictures I'd work for nothin'."

"Is that so?" says the wife, her voice as cold as Cape Nome. "Why didn't you marry her, then, instead of me?"

"She didn't ask me till it was too late," I says, grinnin' like a wolf.

"Here, here," says Alex. "How is it you people is always quarrelin' every time I come here for a visit?"

"We figure you'll get sore and beat it," I says.

"Now, boys," says Eve, "let's forget we are all one family and be friends. Why aren't you folks out celebratin' peace tonight?"

"We wasn't invited," I says. "And I have bought my last ticket from a speculator."

"Invited?" says Eve, which always takes everything except Alex serious. "Why, all New York seems to be on Broadway!"

"That's what people from Chicago always thinks," I says. "But they's more to the town than that."

"Oh, hush that near comedy," says the wife. "C'mon, we're going to see 'Wronged by Mistake.' "

"I'll see Beryldine Nearer," I says in a loud and angry voice, "or we don't go nowhere!"

We went to see "Wronged by Mistake."

The movin' picture company which is responsible for this film claims it cost them $100,000 to make the picture. Maybe it did, I don't know. What I do know is that it cost me $1000 to see it! Why? Lend me your ears, as the dumb guy said.

The hero of this here picture was no less than Carrington de Vire. This guy's name is familiar in burgs where they don't know if Wilson or Washington is still President of the United States. His name is on more collars than you ever seen and he gets more money a week than you and me makes in six years, even if you cut his advertised salary in half. He's prob'ly caused more girls to take their pens in hand than any massage cream in the world, and to say he is a handsome dog is like remarkin' that the Grand Canyon is pleasant to look at. The only magazine which ain't printed his photo at least once with a auto, a country place and a coupla trick dogs at his side is the Hardware Trade Review and the Steamfitters' Friend.

The minute Carrington de Vire appears on the screen and gives the natives a treat by presentin' one and all with a pleasant smile, the wife and Eve begins to rave about him out loud. He kisses the leadin' woman and they let forth a sigh which would of made me jealous only I got too much brains. The villain slams him, prob'ly because he got sick of lookin' at the big fathead, and the women groans. He knocks the villain kickin' and they applaud their hands off and when he fights his way through a gang of supes which will lose their jobs if they don't fall when he hits 'em, I thought most of the female part of the audience would pass away with joy!

"I think he's perfectly wonderful, don't you?" murmurs Eve to the wife.

They is no argument about it.

Alex give a snort.

"If they's anything wonderful about that feller," he says, "then I'm more astonishin' than wireless. Anybody can do that stuff! Why"——

"Why, the idea!" butts in Eve. "I actually believe you're jealous. I think Carrington de Vire is simply divine—marvelous!"

"Wait till you see Niagara Falls," I says.

"Both of them are jealous," says the wife. "I'm surprised at Alex saying that anyone could act as well as Carrington de Vire. Why, I think he's got Faversham beaten a mile. You have to be born with talent like that!"

"I think the wife's right in one thing at last," I says. "I like them male movie heroes and carbolic acid the same way, but you got to hand it to this bird—he's some actor! Pep, Alex, you can't learn that stuff out of no book; you gotta be born with it."

"You're all crazy," announces Alex, with another snort. "I can go out right now and dig up a dozen fellers which never seen a camera in their life and they'll duplicate anything Carrington de Vire ever did on a screen. Where does he get off to be wonderful? Some feller with brains writes a play, another feller with money puts it on and then another feller with technical knowledge tells De Vire, which ain't got none of them things, where to stand and the like while he acts. Why"——

"Ridiculous!" butts in Eve. "Carrington de Vire has extraordinary talent. He has thousands of admirers all over the country. Why—why—he's famous!"

"Of course," says the wife. "It's too silly to talk about. Alex has reached the stage now where he thinks he can do anything!"

"Yeh?" says Alex. "Well, I reached the stage where I thought I could do anything about three minutes after I was born! I'll bet right now I can go down to the docks or some place and get a handsome stevedore and make him as big a star as Carrington de Vire in six months!"

"Don't be idiotic," laughs Eve. "Imagine a stevedore as a moving picture star!"

"Why not?" demands Alex, lookin' like the idea had made a hit with him. "Ain't a stevedore as good as anybody else? I'll bet a thousand dollars even that I can catch one or somebody like him and make him a movie star. What d'ye say?"

"I'll say this," I says. "We come here to see this picture and not to hear you make a speech. This here's a theater and not no race track and forget about that bettin' thing. If you can make a movie star out of a stevedore, I can make a watch outa a hard-boiled egg!"

They is some people behind us which can't see the picture on account of us talkin' and they begin to hiss at us. It bothers Alex the same as rain worries a duck.

"Is they steam escapin' somewheres?" he remarks, turnin' his head. "Why, brakemen have become railroad presidents," he goes on, "bootblacks have became bankers, prizefighters have turned evangelists and the United States has went dry. Why shouldn't a stevedore become a movie star?"

"We'll all become throwed outa here if you don't keep quiet!" I says.

"Ssh, Alex," says the wife. "Don't get so excited about it. There's no use attempting the impossible and"——

"They ain't nothin' impossible!" butts in Alex. "I'm willin' to prove it. Why don't somebody bet me, hey?"

"Why don't you hire Madison Square Garden for that speech?" hisses a guy behind us. "Heavens, what a pest!"

"Call the usher," puts in a dame with him. "Them people has did nothin' but talk since they come in here!"

"What d'ye want us to do—sing?" growls Alex.

"Alex, be still!" whispers Eve. "I've missed the whole picture through your talking. Now we'll have to stay and see it all over again."

"Have a nice time," says Alex, gettin' up and grabbin' my arm. "We'll wait outside for you. One dose a day of Carrington de Vire is all I can take!"

The bunch in back glares at us and says somethin' about what a crime it is to let drunken men come into a theater.

Outside on the pavement, Alex lets forth a snort and whiffs the fresh air like it was wine.

"Think of my wife sittin' in there and worshippin' that big stiff," he snarls. "And yours, too!"

"We all have our faults," I says. "I knowed a guy once which was crazy over fried parsnips."

"They ain't nothin' to laugh at in this," he says, slappin' his hands together. "I ain't a jealous man, but no movie hero is gonna be no god to my wife!"

"Why don't you go in the movies yourself, then?" I says. "They might hire you for a picture with Carrington de Vire in it, and you can knock him kickin' in five reels or the like."

"Huh!" says Alex, "what do I care about the movies? I got a better plan than that and it will accomplish the same purpose. I'll show Eve and the rest of you how easy it is to be a movie hero—I'll make money out of it, too!" he adds, with the old glitter in his eyes.

"What are you gonna do?" I says. "Speak quick, I can't stand excitement!"

For answer he takes me into the hotel across the street and leads me into the writin' room. He sits down and writes on a piece of paper for a minute and then he hands it to me.

"Cast your eyes over that," he says, "and if it's satisfactory—sign it!"

This is what I read:

"I, Alex Hanley, agree to hire one handsome, tall and perfectly built stevedore, longshoreman, truck driver or someone engaged in a equally honest profession, one who has never appeared before a camera or upon any stage and who has no knowledge of theatricals, and within six months from date to make him a full-fledged, acknowledged star of the moving pictures.

"In the event of said undertaking being successful, the undersigned agrees to pay Alex Hanley $1000. In the event of a failure, Alex Hanley agrees to forfeit the same sum."

I handed it back to him.

"Listen!" I says. "Don't be a nut all your life. You got as much chance of"——

"Did you ever see me fall down on anything?" he butts in, dippin' a pen in the ink and handin' it to me.

"Not even a banana peel," I admits. "But they is a limit to everything—even the war's over. In the first place, even if you could do this, it would cost you more than a thousand dollars and"——

"Leave that to me," he says, pushin' over the pen. "And sign here!"

"But"——I says.

"Hurry up, the ink will be dry," he cuts me off.

I give in.

"Alex," I says. "This is a crime! If I ever win one bet in my life, I'll win this one. You'll make a movie star outa a stevedore, hey? Why"——

"Want a thousand more?" he grins pleasantly.

"No!" I hollers. "Let's go over and meet the girls."

* * * * * * * *

The search for the future king of the movies begins merrily the next day. I went with Alex to see that he didn't put nothin' over on me and at the end of the week he had dug up three promisin' leads. They was a plumber's helper, which had a wonderful figure, but a scar on his cheek showed up in a snapshot Alex took of him and he was laid aside with a sigh. Then they was a waiter which was better lookin' than Mary Pickford, but a trifle stoop-shouldered. The third guy was hustlin' baggage at Grand Central Station and was a perfect Venus except for some missin' teeth which queered him when he smiled and what's a movie hero without a smile?

Well, I'm havin' the time of my life kiddin' Alex, when one day as we are walkin' along Third avenue in search of his prey, he grabs me by the arm, yells, "I got him!" and starts across the street on the run. They is a big truck standin' there and a husky on the back of it is engaged in coaxin' pig iron off of it onto the street. He stood about 6 foot 3 without bein' shaved and weighed accordin'ly, all bone and muscle not countin' his head. He turns around and—Oh boy!!!

Say! I seen some good lookers in my time, male and female, but this baby had it on 'em all! His hair is that black, wavy kind that the cabaret hounds wish they had and he's got a skin like a week-old baby. He must of painted his teeth with enamel twice a day and he's there with a pair of eyelashes that would make a chorus girl take carbolic. On the level, he's so handsome he don't look real—and that with all the signs of honest toil at the truck on him, too! Alex taps him on the shoulder and he swings around.

"What's yours?" he growls.

"I have come to make your fortune," announces Alex with a grin. Then he turns to me. "Ain't he a peach, hey?" he says.

The big guy drops the pig iron and looks from Alex to me.

"What kinda stuff is this?" he growls. "What d'ye mean I'm a peach?"

"You're the luckiest man in New York," says Alex. "I have come to make you famous and rich!"

The big guy grins.

"Listen!" he says. "They're awful tough on hop fiends in this burg now and they'll be a copper along in a minute, so you better duck. I know you guys is no less than J. P. Morgan and John D. Rockefeller, if not more, and you'll gimme a million dollars in nickels if I'll tell you where to get a layout. But I ain't got the time, I gotta get this stuff off here and"——

With that he turns around and goes to work again.

"Drop that iron!" says Alex. "You'll never soil your hands with manual labor again."

"Hey!" snarls the big guy. "Git away, will you? I always feel sorry for you dope fiends, but if you guys don't lay off me, I'll bounce the two of you. Now, beat it!"

"Well," I says to Alex, "he's ignorant anyways. We got that part all settled and"——

"Look here!" says Alex, darin'ly grabbin' the big guy by the arm. "We're neither dope fiends nor maniacs. I want to ask you a few questions and, if your answers suit me, I'll hire you for a hundred dollars a week to do some special work for me. To show you I'm not foolin', take this for your trouble, whether we do business or not."

With that he hands him a $20 bill.

"Aha!" yells the big guy. "Coupla counterfeiters, hey?" He snatches the bill and grabs Alex. "So you guys want me to pass this for you—I got it!" He starts to drag Alex along the pavement and half Third avenue stops to watch it. "I'll git a reward for this!" I heard him mutter.

Alex throws him off—he's stronger than he looks.

"You better not take that head of yours into a poolroom," he snarls, "or somebody'll get two billiard balls and play with it for a set. Take your hands off me and listen. That bill is as good as the inside of a church. C'mon into this store and I'll prove it!"

They's somethin' about Alex that makes this guy hesitate, and Alex pulls him into a cigar store, whilst I shoo away the disappointed crowd, which looked for manslaughter at least.

In a minute they come out. The big guy has 20 single bills in his hand and a dazed look on his face. Alex is grinnin'.

"Now are you satisfied?" says Alex.

The big guy shoves the dough in his overalls.

"The sugar seems o k," he says. "Say! I gotta work a week for that much dough, so I might as well give you five minutes of my time. What's the idea, hey?"

"Now, Delancey Calhoun," says Alex, "how would you"——

"Wait a minute!" grins the other guy. "I knowed they was a ball-up somewhere. Where d'ye get that Calhoun stuff? My name's Tim O'Toole."

"Not no more!" says Alex, returnin' the grin. "From now on it's Delancey Calhoun—get that?"

"A nut is a funny thing," says O'Toole, pressin' the dough in his pocket. "But—sure, I'm Delancey Calhoun! That's a swell name at that—it sounds like a Lennox avenue apartment house. What d'ye want me to do, outside of that?"

"How would you like to be a actor?" says Alex.

"Nothin' doin'!" says Delancey. "I got a steady job and I'm too fond of eatin'."

"Don't be a fool!" says Alex. "That stuff about actors not eatin' regular is a thing of the past. These days a actor makes more money than a banker. Did you ever appear on the stage anywheres in your life?"

"I did not!" snarls Delancey. "And I can lick the guy which claims I did!"

"Fine!" says Alex, lookin' at me. "Now, of course, you've seen movin' pictures, hey?"

"Sure!" says Delancey. "What d'ye think I am—ig'rant?"

"Not at all," says Alex. "Do you think if you had a chance and was well paid for it, you could do the things them heroes does in the movies?"

"Do I think so?" he says. "Why, say, pal—that stuff would be soft for me! I ain't no second Mary Pickford or the like and Chaplin might grab off more laughs to the reel than me, but when it comes to this here cowboy and full dress stuff—Oh, lady!!!"

"You're hired!" hollers Alex, slappin' him on the back. "Startin' right now your salary is a hundred a week. Drive that truck back to where it belongs an' throw up your job."

"A hundred a week, hey?" says Delancey, rollin' his eyes. "Oh, lady!! In a month I'll have Carnegie gnashin' his teeth!" He breaks off and swings around on Alex. "Look here!" he says, "I been drivin' this truck for two years. I got a good steady job from 8 in the mornin' till 10 at night, and I get 20 berries a week for it. I don't know nothin' about this nut job of yours, but if I don't get my hundred every week—well, there's gonna be a funeral, with you bein' featured in it—get that?"

"That's all right," says Alex. "I'll deposit your first six months' salary in the bank for you—how's that?"

"What could be sweeter?" says Delancey. "They's just one other thing."

"Speak up!" says Alex.

"As long as I'm gonna be a movie actor," says Delancey, "do I get a dress suit to wear?"

"Sure!" says Alex. "Why?"

"Well," grins Delancey, "I never had one of them open-faced suits on in me life and in fact I was savin' up to get one now. I'm simply nutty to put on one of them layouts and knock the innocent onlookers silly. If you hit a tough week, I might take ninety-five bucks and let the rest go over a few days, but I gotta have the dress suit, and that goes!"

"It's yours," says Alex, diggin' me in the ribs.

"All right," says Delancey. "I'll go down now and make the boss faint by quittin'. I'll meet you anywheres you say tomorrow."

"You will not," says Alex. "I'll ride right down on that truck with you now!"

About two weeks later, Alex comes up to the flat and tells me to put on my hat and cane. He says he's

West Wind Drift

A thrilling mystery story with romance closely interwoven

PUBLISHED FOR THE FIRST TIME IN ANY FORM

By GEORGE BARR McCUTCHEON, author of "Graustark," "Castle Craneycrow," "Brewster's Millions," and many others

THE STORY.

Set helplessly adrift by an explosion of bombs, planted by German agents, the great liner Doraine, bound from South America for a port in the United States, has been all but wrecked by a storm and then driven by wind and tide into a basin which is the center of an uninhabited island. Here the ship runs aground, and the survivors of the disaster set about planning for a future in which the hope of rescue seems hopelessly remote. The dominant figure among them is Algernon Adonis Percival, an American mining engineer, who started the voyage as a stowaway, his money having been stolen at the port of embarkation. In the general bewilderment over the strange situation, Percival's natural qualities of leadership have asserted themselves, bringing him a position of some authority, and, incidentally, the interested regard of two women—Ruth Clinton, an American girl, traveling with her aunt, Mrs. Spofford, and Olga Obosky, a Russian dancer. In directing the work of building huts and exploring the island, Percival clashes with Abel Landover, a famous capitalist, who refuses to submit to discipline and is worsted in a hand-to-hand encounter with the young engineer. This proceeding Ruth resents as needlessly brutal, and she begins treating the young engineer with marked coolness, though it is clear that, in spite of herself, she is already in love with him. Mutiny of a more serious nature develops presently among a lawless element led by Manuel Crust, a Portuguese gang foreman. One night Percival meets a woman who comes toward him, her arms oustretched, and Percival, thinking it is Ruth, kisses her. He has just discovered that it is not Ruth, but Olga Obosky, when two men run past in the dark and the sound of women's voices rises in the distance.

PERCIVAL'S blood was still in a tumult as he ran down the line of cabins. From every doorway men were now stumbling, half-dressed, half-asleep. Behind them, in many cabins, alarmed, agitated women appeared. Farther on there were lanterns and a chaotic mass of moving objects. Above the increasing clamor rose the horrible, uncanny wail of a woman. Percival's blood cooled, his brain cleared. Men shouted questions as he passed, and obeyed his command to follow.

The ugly story is soon told. Philippa, the 15-year-old daughter of Pedro, the head farmer, had gone out from her father's cabin at dusk to fetch water from the little reservoir that had been constructed alongside Leap Frog River, a short distance above the cabins. The pool was a scant 200 yards from her home. It was a five minutes' walk there and back. Half an hour passed and she had not returned. Her mother became uneasy. Pedro reassured her. He laughed at her fears.

"She could not have fallen into the pool," he said. "You forget the fence we have built around it."

"I am not thinking of the pool, Pedro," she argued. "Go you at once and search for her. She is no laggard. She has not stopped in to see one of the girls."

And Pedro went grumpily forth to search for his daughter. An hour later he came staggering down from the woods above the pool to meet the dozen or more friends and neighbors who had set out some time earlier to look for the two of them, father and daughter.

He bore in his arms the limp, apparently lifeless form of Philippa. He was covered with blood, he was chattering like a madman. Out of his incoherent babble the horrified searchers were able to put together the cruel story. It seems he had heard a faint cry far back in the dense woods—another and yet another. Then utter silence. Even the night birds were still.

Swift, paralyzing fear choked him. He tried to call out as he rushed blindly up from the pool into the forest, but only hoarse, unnatural gasps left his lips. He fell often, he crashed into the trunks of trees, but always he went onward, gasping out his futile cries. He knew not how long he beat through the forest.

He was not even sure that it was Philippa's cry he had heard, but his soul was filled with a great, convincing dread. He knew that his beloved Philippa, the idol of his heart, the sunshine of his life, was up there in the woods. Frequently he stopped to listen. He could hear nothing save the pounding of his own heart, and the wheezing of his breath, thick and labored.

Then, at last, during one of those silences, he heard something moving in the darkness near at hand. Something—someone was coming toward him through the underbrush. He called out hoarsely: "Philippa!" The sound ceased instantly, and then he heard a whispered execration. Wild rage possessed him. He plunged forward into the brush. Something crashed down upon his head and he felt himself falling forward.

The next he knew he was trying vainly to rise to his feet. Something hot was running into his eyes, hot and sticky. He lifted his hand to his head; it came away wet. He put his fingers into his mouth—and tasted blood! It was enough. His strength came back. He sprang to his feet and rushed onward, shouting, cursing, calling upon God! He had no recollection of finding his girl. Apparently everything was a blank to him until, long afterwards, he saw lights moving among the trees and voices were calling his name.

Percival and other cool-headed men were hard put to check the fury of the mob. Men and women, bent on vengeance, made the night hideous with their curses, howls and shrieks. In their senseless fury they prepared to kill. They had heard the stories about Manuel Crust and his disciples. Only the determined stand taken by the small group that rallied to Percival's support kept the maddened crowd from seeking out these men and rending them limb from limb.

The sailors from the Doraine were the first to listen to the pleas of the level-headed—just as they had been the first to demand the lives of Manuel Crust and his gang. Individually they were rough men and lawless, collectively they were the slaves of discipline. It was to their vanity that Percival and the others appealed, only they called it honor instead of vanity. The mob spirit was quelled for the time being at least. No one was so foolish as to believe that it was dead, however. Unless the man guilty of the shocking crime was found and delivered up for punishment, the inevitable would happen.

"We'll get the right man," said the voice of universal fury, "if we have to cut the heart out of every one of Manuel Crust's gang."

The women were the worst. They fought like wildcats to reach the cabins occupied by the known followers of Manuel Crust. With knives and axes and burning faggots they tried again and again to force their way through the stubborn wall of men that had been raised against them.

As for Manuel Crust and his little group of radicals, they had vanished. They had mingled with the mob at the outset. There were many who recalled seeing this one and that one, remembered speaking to him, remembered hearing him curse the ravisher. But as their own names began to run from lip to lip, they silently, swiftly disappeared.

Dawn found the camp awake, but grimly silent. No one had gone to bed. With the first streak of day the man hunt began in earnest. All night long the camp had been patrolled. Every cabin had been searched, even those occupied solely by women. This search had been conducted in an orderly, businesslike way, under the supervision of men chosen by Percival. The folly of beating the woods during the night was recognized even by the most impatient; there was time enough for that when the blackness of night had lifted.

Throughout the long night the restless crowd, with but one thought in mind, hung about the cabin of Pedro the farmer. The doctors and several of the nurses were in there. Down at the meeting house a bonfire had been started, and here were grouped the men to whom the leaders had intrusted their firearms and other weapons—men of the gun crew, under officers from the Doraine, the committee of 10, and others. It was accepted as a fact that two men were involved in the heinous deed. Percival's account of the mysterious runners seemed definitely to establish this. He called upon Olga Obosky to verify his statement. If she was surprised by his admission that he was in her company when the men rushed past them in the darkness, she did not betray the fact.

She indulged in a derisive smile when he went on to explain that it was so dark he had failed to recognize her until she spoke to him. She agreed with him that the two men must have come into the open a very short distance above them, having sneaked out between the cabins before suddenly breaking into a run. Avoiding the beaten roadway, they had laid their course 20 or 30 feet to the right of it, keeping to the soft, springy turf.

Percival looked hard into Manuel Crust's bloodshot eyes. An appalling thought had suddenly flashed into his mind. Sancho Mendez was to be sacrificed!

Percival had issued orders for the entire camp to congregate on the green at the first sign of day. The cold, gray light of dawn fell upon vague, unreal forms moving across the open spaces from all directions. There was no shouting, no turmoil, scarcely the sound of a voice. The silent, ghostly figures merged into a compact, motionless mass in front of the meeting house. It was not necessary for Percival to call for order when he appeared on the steps and began to speak. The only sounds were the shuffling of feet, the rustling of garments, the deep, restrained breathing of the mass.

He spoke partly in English and partly in Spanish, and he was brief.

"You know what we are here for and what is ahead of us. I don't have to tell you the story of last night. You know it as well as I. You will be glad to hear the latest word from Dr. Cullen. Philippa is conscious. He thinks she will recover. She is having the best of care and attention.

"I will explain why we are all here now. The first thing for us to do is to count noses. We will go about it as rapidly as possible. After that we will get down to business. Mr. Landover and Mr. Malone will check off the name of every man, woman and child. As your names are called, come forward, answer, and then move over beyond the corner of the building. We've got to find out just who is missing—if anyone is missing at all."

He raised his voice. "I want you all to keep cool. Don't forget that we are after the men who committed this crime. We have no right to say that Manuel Crust or any of his crowd did this thing until we have positive proof of the fact. It may not have been any of Manuel's gang; don't forget that, people. We must make no mistakes.

"I am saying this to you now because I see Manuel Crust and some of his friends standing over there at the edge of the clearing. Stop! Don't make a move in their direction. We've all had time to think—we've all had time to get ourselves in hand. There is a right and a wrong way to handle this thing, and we've got to be sure we're right. The guilty cannot escape. They haven't a chance, and you know it. So, let's be sure, let's be dead sure before we accuse any man.

"We have no right to charge Manuel's gang with this crime. The guilty men may be here among us, absolutely unsuspected. Chizler! You and Soapy Shay go over and tell those men that we are taking a count of all the people in this camp. Tell them to come and answer to their names. They will be safe."

The count was never completed. Manuel Crust did not wait for his name to be called. He pushed his way through the crowd, leaving his followers behind. Advancing to the foot of the steps he cried out hoarsely to Percival:

"If you want your men, I—I, Manuel Crust, will lead you to one of them. He is up there in the wood. Three men are guarding him. He is Sancho Mendez, the blacksmith. Listen, I will tell you. It is the God's truth I tell.

"There were seven of us hiding out there in the wood. We were scared. We heard our names called out. We had heard threats to burn us alive. We ran away. We were not cowards, but still we ran away. We would wait till the crowd cooled off. That was my advice. Then we would return—then we would help find the men who did it—and we would help to burn them alive.

"An hour ago Sancho Mendez crawled out of the brush up there above the landing, and begged us to protect him. His leg was broken. He had fallen over a log. You all know Sancho Mendez. He was a good boy. He was the friend of Boss Percival. He was no friend to me. But he swears he will be my slave forever if I will save him. Then he tells us everything. When I ask him why the hell he run away, he says he lose his mind or something. He just go crazy, he says. He says everybody was chasing him—he could hear them in the bushes, he could hear that girl screaming out his name—and all that. He was going to jump in the water and drown, because he say people tell him always it is the easy way to die.

"But he falls down and breaks his leg, here below the knee. He cannot run no more. It is all up. He is afraid to breathe. People are all around him with knives and axes and clubs. He can hear them in the bush. Then daylight comes, and he sees us down below in the wood, and he says he thanks God. I will be his friend—I will save him because I am an angel from heaven! Bah! I spit in his face. We tie him to a tree with our belts, and then I come down to tell Boss Percival we have his man—his good and loyal friend."

"Stop!" yelled Percival as the crowd began to show symptoms of breaking away. "Listen to me! I give you fair warning. I don't want to do it, but by God, I'll order these men to shoot the first who tries to start anything. We're going to have law and order here. This man Sancho is going to have a fair trial. What's more, he had a companion. What does he say of the other man, Manuel Crust?"

"Sancho Mendez says he was alone. There was no other man."

Percival looked hard into Manuel Crust's bloodshot eyes. An appalling thought had suddenly flashed into his mind. Many seconds passed before he dared to open his lips. As if by divine revelation the situation lay bare before him—the whole Machiavellian scheme as conceived by Manuel. Sancho Mendez was to be sacrificed.

Even as he stood there speechless, the plan began to work toward its well calculated end. Manuel's friends started to harangue the crowd. They were growling hoarse invectives, shaking their fists in the direction of the wood, fanning the pent-up fury of the mob into a whirlwind that would sweep everything before it. Once the tide turned there would be no stopping it until Sancho Mendez was torn to pieces. He would shriek his innocence into deaf ears. And that was Manuel's game.

Percival's heart leaped with joy as he saw the armed force under Lieut. Pratt move swiftly into a position barring the way to the woods. He thrilled with a mighty pride in the shrewd intelligence and resourcefulness of this trained fighting man from the far-off homeland.

Manuel Crust was turning away to mingle with the crowd. Quick as a flash Percival was down from the steps and at the "Portugee's" side. He grasped the man's arm.

"I've got a gun against your back," he cried in fierce, suppressed tone. "Stand still and keep your mouth shut, or I'll drill a hole through you. You're safe if you do as I tell you, Crust. I'm on to your little game. I'm not saying you're the guilty man, but you know who is—and it won't work."

Manuel Crust was as rigid as a block of stone. He did not even turn his head to look into the face of the man who held him.

Michael Malone and Landover were at Percival's side in an instant. From their position on the steps they could see what was not visible to the crowd beyond—the revolver that was pressed against the small of Crust's back.

"Cover this man," whispered Percival to Malone. "Shoot if he opens his mouth."

Malone's revolver was jammed against the "Portugee's" back, and Percival sprang up the steps.

Manuel Crust shot a look of surprise at Abel Landover.

"What the hell," he began, but choked off the words at a command from Malone. While Percival was rapidly calling out orders from above, he broke out recklessly again, addressing the stern-faced banker.

"Are you my friend or not?" he snarled. "What kind of a man are you? Speak up! Tell them I'm all right."

"Keep quiet," warned Malone.

Landover's eyes met the searching, questioning gaze of the Portuguese. Manuel Crust apparently was satisfied with what he read in them, for a quick gleam of confidence leaped into his own. His chest swelled with a tremendous intake of breath.

The remarkable personality, or perhaps the magnetism, of the "boss" again asserted itself. He made no allusion to the thing uppermost in his mind as he spoke hurriedly, emphatically to the tense throng. When he directed Randolph Fitts to take a few picked men with him up into the woods to bring down the captive, there were mutterings, but no move on the part of the crowd, either to anticipate or to follow the detachment. A few terse words to Buck Chizler sent that active young man after Fitts, the bearer of instructions.

Sancho Mendez was to be brought in alive. His guards were not to be given a chance to kill him when they realized that the scheme had failed and he would be allowed to tell his own story.

With the departure of Fitts and his men, Percival ordered the people to return to their cabins. He promised them that Sancho Mendez should have his just deserts. Slowly, reluctantly the crowd broke up and shuffled away in small groups across the dewy green. Manuel Crust was free to go. The few words that passed between Landover and Percival, although unheard by the man, sufficed to put courage into his heart. He had come to look upon the banker as his pal! And his pal had not failed him!

This is what Landover said to Percival:

"Whatever may be in your mind, Percival, I want to say this to you: I was in Manuel Crust's cabin when the thing happened. There were eight of us there. I can point out to you the other six. I must beg you to overlook the fact that we are not friends, and believe what I am saying. It is the absolute truth."

"I will take your word for it, Mr. Landover," said Percival, after a moment. "I am aware of your dealings with Crust and his crowd. I don't know what the game is, but I do know that you have been fostering discontent—it may even amount to revolt—among these men. If you say you were with Crust and that he was not out of your sight all evening, I will believe you. You may be a misguided, domineering fool, Mr. Landover, but you are honest. You have failed to appreciate what you were stirring up, what you were letting yourself and all the rest of us in for, that's all."

Landover flushed. He compressed his lips for a second or two before speaking.

"My opposition to you as a dictator, Percival, hardly warrants the implication that I am in a sense responsible for the devilish thing that happened last night."

"I grant you that," said Percival. "Nevertheless, it is your purpose to down me, no matter what it costs—isn't that true?"

"No, it is not true. There is an honest, sincere belief on the part of some of us that you are not the man to rule this camp. You may call it politics, if you like, or revolt, if you prefer."

"We'll call it politics, Mr. Landover. It was not politics that made me the superintendent of construction, however. I've looked after the job to the best of my ability. I am ready to retire whenever the people decide they've found a better man. You may be right in supposing that Manuel Crust is the right man for the job, but I don't agree with you."

Landover started. "Nothing is farther from my thoughts than to turn the affairs of this camp over to Crust," he said.

"Once more I agree with you. But that is what you will be doing, just the same. If you think that Manuel Crust is going to play second fiddle to you, Mr. Landover, you'll suddenly wake up to find yourself mistaken. You know what Crust is advocating, don't you? Well, I guess there's nothing more to be said on the subject."

"We'll drop it, then," said Landover curtly. "I merely want you to understand that Crust had no hand in last night's affair I can vouch for that."

ART IS WRONG - -

gonna take me over to the studio and show me Delancey Calhoun's first picture.

"So you're really goin' through with it, hey?" I says. "What company did you get him landed with?"

"The Par-Excellence Feature Film Co.," he says.

"I never heard tell of it," I says. "Who's in back of it?"

"A young feller by the name of Alex Hanley!" he comes back, grinnin'.

"What?" I hollers. "D'ye mean to say you started a movie foundry to put this guy over?"

"I'll leave it to you," he tells me, "when we get to the studio. Let's go!"

On the way over he shows me a lot of the advertisin' copy with which he's gonna introduce Delancey Calhoun to the waitin' world. I must say it was hot stuff! It claims that Delancey Calhoun is the sole heir to $20,000,000 left by the late Artemus Calhoun, which died 20 years ago. The will was given to his lawyers, Sandringham, Bellew & Fitch, with instructions not to open it for 20 years. When it was opened it was found that them twenty millions was left to his only nephew, Delancey. Alex has opened a law office downtown under the name of Sandringham, Bellew & Fitch, so's to take care of the reporters and other guys of an inquisitive nature. Then comes the kick.

Delancey, a handsome and accomplished young giant, is tired of the "sham and deceit" of his own "exalted social set" and it's his ambition to wed a girl of the common people and let her enjoy some of the millions his hard-fisted uncle wrung from their toil. He also has another aim in life, and that is to accomplish a sweepin' reform in the movie game. He's always been a great fan himself, but he's sick of the impossible plays which has been foisted on a innocent and nickel-spendin' public. Therefore, he has organized his own movie company, will produce his own pictures from real life stories of the eternal struggle, and, last but not least, he'll appear, personally, in them himself, to gratify a whim he's had since he first looked over the side of a cradle. He thinks the average movie hero is sickenin', and he wants to show the world how a real hero would act. He will appear in 12 pictures only. Each will be a episode in the greatest mystery story ever written, entitled, "What Was Hector's Choice?" Every single female in the country is invited to see this picture and send in their solution of the mystery. The one that comes nearest to the correct answer will become the bride of Delancey Calhoun and his twenty million bucks.

Oh, boy!!!

"Alex," I says, "I'll tell the world this is great stuff! It must be gonna cost you a bunch of money. Where do you get off?"

"Your head and glue is the two thickest things I ever seen," he says. "Where do I get mine, hey? I get it from the sale of the pictures this bird makes. In a coupla months they'll be riots in theaters all over the country to see this guy in the movies!"

"Maybe," I says. "But how are you gonna pull 'em in? Right off the bat he's gotta compete with Chaplin, Mary Pickford and the like."

"I didn't wanna spring my ace so soon on you," he says, "but I guess I got to. How am I gonna pull 'em in? This way—single women will be admitted free at every theater where this picture is shown!"

Whee!!!!

"You're there, Alex!" I admits. "But suppose the men and married women stays away?"

"Stays away!" he says. "They'll break their way in! The married women will wanna see Delancey and get a idea of what they missed, and the men will wanna see what this big fathead looks like, if only to kid him."

"What kind of a actor is he?" I says.

"Wait till you see him," says Alex. "He's got the studio standin' on its ear! He thinks he's the greatest actor the world ever seen and everbody else, from the director to the camera men, is dubs. He refuses to fake any of the fight scenes, and I gotta pay supers ten bucks a day to take his wallops. The first time he had a love scene with the leadin' lady he thought it was on the level and went out and got a marriage license. He argued two hours in favor of real bullets for the duel he fights with the villain and refused to play a scene supposed to be in Alaska because the studio's in Jersey. He claims the guy which wrote the scenario escaped from a lunatic asylum and he plays the second two reels his own way. I've had three different casts work with him because he gets them all sore by his kiddin' them about art. He takes everything in dead earnest and tried to beat up the villain on the street twice because he's supposed to hate him in the picture. But—this first episode is some film!!!"

I seen the picture in the private projectin' room and Alex told the truth when he called it "some film." In fact, that there would of been as good a title for the whole picture as the one they had. They were more adventures happened to Delancey Calhoun in them five reels than Robinson Crusoe, Columbus, Kit Carson and Davy Crockett had in their combined lives! He was a heart-breaker one second and a head-breaker the next. He had insisted to Alex that one villain wasn't enough for him to foil, so they had about a dozen, and he trimmed 'em all. They was also several heroines for him to save and clasp on his manly bosom, which same he did in evenin' clothes only. It was nothin' for him to save a maiden in distress from a sinkin' ship and the next second appear in a lifeboat with a dress suit on, rowin' for shore. No matter if the scene was mornin' or night, Alaska or the Sahara Desert, Delancey was there in his little dress suit. He would of parted with that and his left eye with the same willin'ness.

Apart from the film itself, which might of been good or might of been bad, but certainly was excitin' for your life, Delancey was a riot! He was the handsomest thing I ever seen on a screen and I don't blame all the dames in the studio for fallin' for him. In that treasured dress suit of his which cost Alex as much as a limousine, they ain't no woman on earth that wouldn't get a thrill when she looked at him, provided he didn't start no conversation. He looked class—that's all they is to it!

When we come out from seein' the picture, Delancey is walkin' around the studio, still with the dress suit on. He's telling one of the best directors in the country how to properly produce a movie and said director is takin' it hard. He breaks off when he sees us.

"Hello!" he says. "Well, what d'ye think of me? I'm a knockout, hey?"

"Easily that," I admits, shakin' his hand. "How d'ye like bein' a actor?"

"Rotten!" he says. "This stuff is the bunk and them actors gimme a pain. I think they're all nutty. How they get money for this hop is past me! All I do all day is pretend I'm this and pretend I'm that and the foreman of this layout keeps yellin, 'Register fear!' and stuff like that at me. I don't know why this friend of yours is givin' me money for this, but I bet they's a catch to it somewheres!"

"Isn't he simply delicious?" says the leadin' woman, with a fond glance at Delancey.

"Delicious, hey?" he snorts. "What d'ye think I am—a pie?"

They is a vampire there and she turns up her nose.

"I think he's impossible!" she says. "He hasn't the slightest conception of art."

"Lemme alone!" growls Delancey. "I'm as good a actor as you guys is, if not better. Where d'ye get that art stuff?"

"Heavens!" says the vampire. "You must have worked all your life to acquire ignorance, for no one was ever born as stupid as you. All you have is your looks."

"Yeh," snarls Delancey. "And all Rockefeller's got is a billion!"

At this point Alex stepped in and prevented bloodshed.

Well, Delancey is as big a success as a movie star as Boston is as a town, and within a month he's swept the country like a new dance. That stuff about him bein' a millionaire and willin' to marry the girl which guesses the answer to the mystery in "What Was Hector's Choice?" caught on with the ladies like cold cream and his handsome map did the rest. His picture is plastered all over the country and kids which barely knowed the A, B, C's is familiar with his name. His mail arrives daily in freight cars and Alex had four guys workin' on nothin but autographin' his photos for "A Admirer" and "Your Unknown Friend." Alex got a quarter the each for said photos to cover the "wrapping and mailing charges" and made a nice little profit on the side.

With all this success, though, Delancey Calhoun kept his head. He never appeared at no banquets, addressed meetin's on "The Future of the Motion Picture Industry," or as much as glanced at the daily slew of mail. When the dames around the studio cast languishin' glances at his handsome form, he glared at 'em like an infuriated turtle. If one of 'em remarked that it was a nice day, by way of startin' a slight flirtation, Delancey would answer that he couldn't help it, and walk away. He never spent a nickel foolishly or at all, and when the auto agents swooped down on him, he borrowed cigars from them and beat it.

The most astonishin' thing, though, was the way he acted about the movies durin' his career as a star. He never stopped claimin' that the whole thing was the bunk and that it was idiotic for a grown person to put on a wig and take off the old banker or the like, when they was only a fifty-buck a week actor. He insisted that anything as silly as the movies was could never last and they was more real money in the truckin' business for a man that knew the game as he did and had plenty of wagons. When Alex argues with him and says that many of the big stars makes fifty thousand a year, he tells Alex to stop usin' opium because it'll get him in the end.

At the end of three months, Delancey has made Alex pay him a percentage of the receipts and a salary of a thousand a week, but his opinion of the movie business is unchanged. He explains the fact that he's makin' plenty of money out of it by sayin' that Alex must be takin' it out of his own pocket and is simply makin' pictures to cover up his real game, which is prob'ly safe crackin'. Alex throws up his hands and lets him be after that one.

Fin'ly the last picture is made and Alex gives out the information to a expectant world that a girl in Brisbane, Australia, has won the guessin' contest and Delancey Calhoun's hand, and the famous star will sail immediately to wed her. The newspapers all prints pictures of 'em both, Alex gettin' the lucky dame's by photographin' his stenographer. A couple of papers didn't get neither and runs pictures of Brisbane, Australia, so's to be on the job anyways. Then Alex collects the thousand bucks I bet him that he couldn't make a movie star outa a truck driver and prepares to break the news to his wife and mine that he has done the same. He figures this will kill forever their wild infatuation for Carrington de Vire, the idol of the screen.

At that point, Delancey Calhoun walks into the office.

"Ah, Delancey," says Alex, "I was just gonna send for you. Now that our original contract has expired, let me congratulate you. You done great and far better than even I expected. You're famous the world over and must have a good-sized bank roll if you've stayed in at night and kept away from race tracks and the like. I only intended this as a experiment, but it has gone over so big that I want you to sit down here and sign a contract for five years at the biggest salary you ever heard of. We'll make the greatest pictures the world"——

"Wait a minute!" butts in Delancey. "Don't rave no more. My name is Tim O'Toole again and not Delancey, which sounds like a collar. I'm sick and tired of movin' pictures and that big salary stuff is as much bunk as the rest of it. I ain't goin' around rescuin' nutty dames, beatin' up supes which is supposed to be the desperate smugglers and divin' off bridges no more! I'm goin' to make a honest livin' and I've bought out the truckin' business I was workin' for when you come along and made a movie star and a simp outa me. I'll be takin' in money there long after the movies is gone and all the pictures I'll ever move from now on will be loaded on one of my wagons. Fare-thee-well, and I hope they's no hard feelin's. If they is, I ain't gonna sob out loud over it!"

For a minute Alex was speechless. Then he comes to and works a hour tryin' to get the ex-Delancey Calhoun to change his mind. They was nothin' doin'. In fact, Delancey walked out and left us flat in the middle of Alex's wail.

Well, anyways, Alex still had one satisfaction left and that was to prove to Eve and the wife that he had put over a truck driver as a movie star. He done it after dinner that night and if he caused any sensation I failed to see it with the naked eye.

"Well," says Eve, "that proves my argument."

"Proves your argument?" hollers Alex. "Didn't you claim movie stars was born, and didn't I take a truck driver and make him famous at it?"

"Yes," says Eve. "And then he went back to the trucking business, because he wasn't born an artist and the whole thing seemed silly to him. He couldn't stand the make-believe any longer, because he had no imagination, no art—nothing but the stupid ability to make money!"

Alex sinks down in a chair and throws up his hands.

"Can you beat a woman?" he asks me.

"Not in this State," I says. "It's against the law."

"Come," says Eve. "You boys are just in time. Carrington de Vire is down at the Palace in 'The Arctic Sunflower.' I'm crazy to see it. I think he's wonderful!"

HOW TO SELECT A GOOD KNIFE

PICKING a good knife or razor is an art known only to a few. Even the experienced cutlery buyer is taken in occasionally. But there is an old rule that the better the polish the better also the blade. Not only does the lower grade steel not take as high a polish as the higher grade article, but it would not pay the makers to expend upon inferior steel all the work and time that is required to give the blade the fine polish associated only with the best.

Good steel is not only hard, but it has also an energy of its own. The cutting ability of a knife, a razor or a pair of shears is derived from the fineness of the edge. A fine edge can be produced only on steel that is full of life and springiness, because the blade must not only cut, but must select the most suitable spot for entering the material.

A high-class razor cuts the beard without bending the finest hair; an inferior razor pulls the hair before cutting it, hence the unpleasantness connected with its use.

High-class steel has a voice of its own. The finest tuning forks of olden days were made of the best steel possible. So the blade of a knife will speak to you when you are able to understand its voice.

LEARNING TO GOLF

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

AFTER my friends had watched me play golf for a part of a game they began to give me advice.

This advice was given me not while I was walking across the fairway, where I might have pondered it and profited by it the next time I tried to hit the ball.

It was given on the tee, just as I was about to hit the ball. And it always began with "Don't." If I had a dollar for every time a golfing friend has begun an admonition to me with "Don't," I would not be under the painful necessity of pounding a typewriter for my living.

I may be wrong, but I think there have been several times in my life when I might have hit the ball, and knocked it perhaps 50 yards, if somebody hadn't said "don't" just as my club was descending toward it.

Advice differs from castor oil in the respect that it is better not to take it quickly. When it comes out of a clear sky, when you are told, for example, to change the position of your feet just as your club is within a foot of your ball, it is disconcerting.

Still, I was eager for advice, for I knew that I needed it. Most beginning golfers need it, but I doubt if there was ever one who needed it as much as I did.

I tried to act on it every time it was given me, and even when two or three people gave me different kinds of advice at the same time.

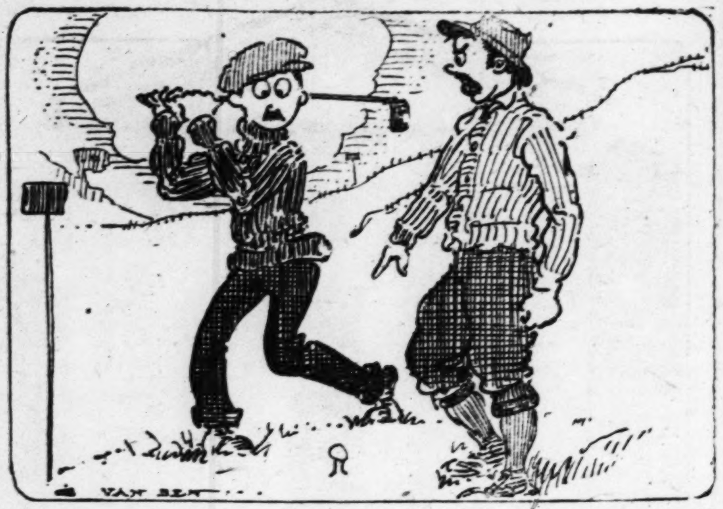
The results were not good. In time I got so that I would think of all the different positions recommended to me by different players every time I tried to drive, and attempt to take them all at the same time.

In consequence my attitude was such that people used to hurry clear across the course to watch me drive.

But I got even with these curiosity seekers. I never drove. The ball was as secure on that tee as if it had been protected by a turret of five-inch armor.

I drove away sections of the tee, and now and then hit myself in the heel or the shins, but the ball never departed. I was too busy trying to follow advice to come within a foot of it.

Now and then while on the fairway, after I had got disgusted and ladled the ball off the tee as one would shovel coal, I would land with an iron.



"Don't stand with your feet set as if you were going to walk backwards."

That kept me cheered up and at the game. It also fired me with ambition to learn to play, for there is nothing that so arouses sinful pride in a man as accidentally hitting a golf ball in the right place at the right time and sending it soaring toward the green.

After a time even my best-meaning friends saw that advice was wasted on me, so they gave me their last bit of it, which was to secure the services of a professional.

I did. And what was my pained astonishment to discover that a professional, instead of being kindly and soothing, and teaching one slowly to do the right things, was merely a bigger bag of advice than any of my friends had been.

In the first place, he would take the club out of my hands, wrench my arms into position that hurt me bitterly, put it back and command me to drive.

Naturally, as soon as he let go of my hands they flew back into easy positions, like rubber bands. Muscles are elastic, you know.

Then he would patiently pull them out again, and finally say something like this.

"Don't do everything wrong. Don't stand with your feet set as if you were going to walk backwards. Don't held the club behind you that way. Don't look where the ball is going. It isn't going anywhere. Don't lift up your head. Don't keep your right shoulder down; keep your left shoulder down.

"Stay where I put you. Don't jerk back your arms. Keep your eye on the ball—no, not that eye, the other one."

With these things in mind I would try to bring down the club, but in vain.

When it was half way down I would think of something else he had said and start the drive all over again.

Each time I got it up he would tell me something new, which I would remember only after I had started to drive once more.

Then back the club would go, and the professional, who never got impatient or out of temper, would tell me that I was doing something else wrong.

After every lesson my muscles ached like the toothache from the stretching he had given them, and from the strain of holding my arms and back in positions I had never assumed before and which, in all likelihood, no one else ever had.

Incidentally, my self-respect began to wane. The professional would take the club now and then, and, with a light tap, send a ball a couple of hundred yards away, where a 10-year-old caddie was waiting to retrieve it.

The 10-year-old caddie, who had a rusty old iron, would, on receiving it, give it another light tap, and back it would sail—another 200 yards.

Yet here was I, with a brand-new and nicely varnished driver, and an opinion of my ability that had once been average, unable to hit the ball at all.

The professional says that after a year of careful practice, if I follow his directions, I shall be able to hit at least one ball out of every six that I try to hit.

But I know that I shall not. Anyway, I am not going to follow his directions.

Profiteering Off the Profiteers

grand, high, exalted, magnificent national and international commander in chief of the league, it was meet that there be a local commander and subordinate officers. He therefore appointed the most simple minded and enthusiastic of his canvassers to the high office of local commander and bade his solicitors choose their remaining officers. This done, he suggested that his heroes might form a ladies' auxiliary if they so desired. He suggested to the newly appointed local commander that he devote his evenings to going about among grocers, butchers and other merchants, inquiring as to prices and introducing himself as the commander of the local league. The simpleton was taken with the cleverness of the idea and the importance such a performance must attach to his person.

Thus a second line of profitable propaganda was sent out. While he waited for results, the unctuous Jones was not idle. He set forth and revisited the merchants who had already disgorged $5 for the placard of the league. Approaching these merchants, who again moved significantly toward their cash drawers, Jones unfolded the second part of his idea. No doubt the grocer had a stock of unsalable canned goods or something of the sort in his cellar. Yes? Well, the Grand Commander would move it for the grocer, since he had joined the league and since one good turn deserved another. For an additional $5, Jones would have a thousand handbills printed announcing a cut price sale at Mr. Grocer's Square Deal Store, member of the American League Against Profiteering, etc. He would put these unsalable goods on the bill as a special. He would then send his soldier canvassers through all the neighborhood, getting members and distributing the bills.

The merchants looked at Jones with affection and admiration, tuned up on their cash registers and passed more notes out to Mr. Jones, who went forthwith to his printer and had not a thousand but a hundred dodgers printed for 55 cents. He then sent two or three of his soldiers into the grocer's neighborhood with instructions to leave part of the bills with the grocer and to spread the rest in the vicinity, meantime soliciting league members at 25 cents per head. They might as well work there as elsewhere. So the merchant was "trimmed" a second time. Thus an old idea taken from the trading-stamp game was utilized.

The game of Thomas Jones was now ready for the harvest. The soldiers had got together hundreds of members in this little Pennsylvania city and by the end of the first week letters and post cards began to pour in bearing complaints against merchants. Jones rubbed his chin and smiled vastly at this flux of mail. Taking a large, ablebodied, uniformed war hero on either side of his clever person, Jones set out to visit the dealers complained of.

Entering a shop with his impressive bodyguard, Jones advanced upon the merchant, displayed the complaint and said:

"We represent the American League Against Profiteering. Why did you charge Mrs. Schmalz 19 cents for that 18-cent can of corn? Eh? Why did you? Such things have got to stop. The league will put you out of business if you continue to profiteer. We came to warn you. The next complaint will bring action."

Thereupon Jones and his guardians strode majestically away to the next shop, leaving the merchant torn between anguish, fear and rage.

An hour later, Jones reappeared in person, with his finest confidential smile and his portfolio of beautifully printed cards, each bearing the American flag in full colors.

"I'm sorry for you, old man," said Jones. "But these people mean business. They're tired of the high prices. I know they're not reasonable, but you must remember they've been gouged pretty strong. Oh, I know you haven't. But you suffer for the sins of others. Too bad."

"What can I do?" wailed the dealer.

"I'll tell you," confided the ready Jones. "These people are rough, but I can control them. You see, I'm the grand international and incredible commander. They'll do as I say. Now, we might make a deal—you and I. You join the league and put up one of these cards. It'll only cost you twenty-five. I'm making it specially cheap for you because I know you're on the level. Don't tell anyone else how cheaply I let you in. Once in the league you put up this card and charge what you like. Get me?"

And soon thereafter Mr. Jones strolled out into the fine spring sunlight with $25 more in pocket. Ambling down the street a few squares he called upon another merchant similarly prepared and repeated this delicate operation.

Meantime, the enthusiasm of housewives and the soldier solicitors ran high. Ever increasing numbers joined the league and the magnificent Jones got ever greater batches of complaints.

But by this time the thing was getting too big, too noisy and too dangerous. Thomas Jones looked about him and saw that within a few days the newspapers would have the league in their columns and the District Attorney would, in all likelihood, be summoning the grand interplanetary commander to answer embarrassing questions. So between the sundown and the sun, Jones disappeared from the city and left the local officers to go ahead for themselves.

Jones now repeated the performance just described in an Ohio city of 20,000 to 30,000 population. Next he hurried to Cleveland and operated in the city itself and in all the suburbs. Everywhere the ex-soldiers and the housewives received the itinerant Jones with open arms and cheers. It gave idle soldier boys an easy way of picking up 30 or 40 memberships and eight or ten dollars a day. It gave the housewives a club with which to tame arrogant shopkeepers. All across the State women began to wear the "Down with the profiteers" buttons distributed by the agents of the incredible Jones. He rushed from city to city, starting his branches and mulcting the merchants to his heart's content. And in each case just as soon as the thing grew out of his hands and threatened to become the object of public attention and inquiry, out went Jones. He did not run away except in extreme cases. Instead, he summoned his soldier assistants to him and said that his presence was needed in Atlanta or Portland or some other distant city, where he represented the situation as being serious. Of course, his friends would realize that this was a national affair and that the grand commander must go where duty called. He had given them a start, now they must paddle alone. He would return to visit them and help them in the great work. And so he took train and sped away, brushing aside a salty tear and fumbling his roll of bills.

In the city of Duluth, Minn., the enthusiasm of the anti-profiteers grew so great that Jones had to skip out between meals. His soldiers and housewives were organizing an anti-profiteering parade and wanted the grand interstellar commander to lead it with the Mayor. Being wise in his day and generation, Mr. Jones decamped incontinently, leaving many available merchants unplucked.

Jones alone worked this scheme in more than 50 cities before he wearied of the plan and came back to town to spend his proceeds and to tell how the thing was done. It was too soft, he said. The thing cloyed after a while.

Where Jones quit, some others have begun. These shrewd gentlemen are said to be systematically combing the country with this delightful little mechanism of blackmail. No doubt New York itself will be invaded in the near future.

Sky Route For St. Louis-Chicago Mail Proves Worth

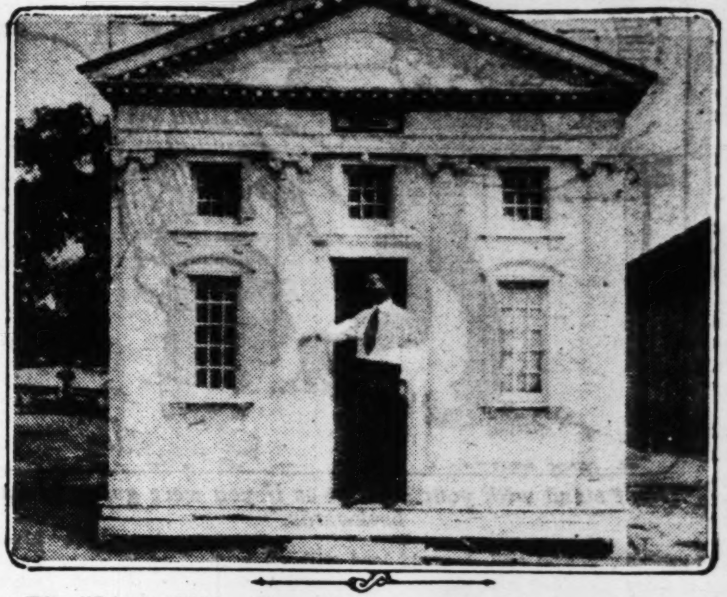
during fair weather when they wish to ascertain their ground speed or whether they are keeping up with their schedule.

The air speed meter with which most planes are equipped does not show the plane's rate of progress at all, but only the air speed. Thus, if a plane shows an air speed of 70 miles an hour, while boring into an opposing wind which is going 30 miles an hour, the ground speed of the plane will be only 40 miles an hour. On the other hand, if the plane showing 70 miles on its speed meter has a 30-mile wind behind it, then the ground speed of the plane is 100 miles an hour.

To help the pilot ascertain his ground speed over familiar territory is almost as important as to help him orient himself when, because of fog or storm, he has gotten lost.

Another suggestion which the air mail pilots make, and one which the idiosyncrasies of the airplane compass would render most welcome to them, is that some of the towns erect for the airmen's benefit, in some conspicuous place, a large arrow pointing north. The logical place for it would be with the name of the town as specially painted for travelers in the sky.

But as there might be practical difficulties in that connection, a huge wooden arrow, painted in conspicuous color and mounted in a field near the town or on a nearby hill, and pointing due north, has been suggested.



The "Little White House," used during the war for bond drives and now the office at St. Louis Air Mail Field.

Mail is carried by airplane between St. Louis and Chicago on six days in the week, but, of course, only a very small proportion of the total mail between the two cities travels through the air, and what goes is first class only. Some urgent pleas to carry perishable matter in the planes as parcel post packages have been refused. Such packages have even been taken out to the air mail field by the senders.

The field personnel and the pilots have nothing to do with individual pieces of mail. Their function is to receive the closed pouches, via auto truck, from the main postoffice of one city and transport them to the air mail field of the other city, where another auto truck bears them to that main postoffice.

Carl F. Egge is superintendent of the St. Louis-Twin Cities Division, United States Air Mail Service, which area includes the St. Louis-Chicago route. The two pilots with headquarters at St. Louis are Russell G. Jones and Earl F. Baskey. William G. Witzel is field manager of the air mail field at St. Louis. The two pilots with headquarters at Chicago are H. C. Brown and Ralph A. Reed.

The pilots work on a schedule of two days on and two days off. That is, during one week Polit Baskey flies to Chicago on Monday, flies back to St. Louis on Tuesday, makes the trip to Chicago again on Friday and returns on Saturday. That same week, Jones flies to Chicago on Wednesday and returns to St. Louis on Thursday. The following week, Baskey makes only two trips and Jones makes four. There are no Sunday flights.

The men who pilot the mail planes deny there is any particular romance or even hazard about their work. Baskey, for example, said he "would feel safer flying to Chicago than he would upon the St. Louis streets in a flivver." Jones looks at it the same way. They didn't learn to be flyers without having some nasty falls, but it is the old story of familiarity breeding contempt.

Even rural neighborhoods are becoming pretty well "broke" to airplanes. While the children usually wave and prance, and an occasional farmer will stop plowing for a few minutes to watch the planes, many others do not now pay any attention to them.

In October, the average daily load of mail to Chicago by airplane was 153 pounds, and the average load from Chicago to St. Louis was 86 pounds.

Taking the Baby on a Missionary Tour

would gather around it so closely that the anxious mother could not see her offspring, but experience taught the party that no harm was meant to the child. Sometimes the villagers would take the pole from the carriers and stalk triumphantly ahead to the village, leaving the caravan to follow behind. These were also anxious moments, but the obvious friendliness of the natives towards the baby made it appear safer to let them have their own way for the time. And the confidence was never misplaced.

When Mrs. Guptill started to care for the child, on regaining it, the ceremony became a matter of public concern.

"The black women would crowd around to give me advice," she said, "and the query, 'What baby eat?' was on every lip. We knew enough of the native dialect after our stay in the region to be able to hold a conversation with adjacent tribes, even those that had a tribal dialect of their own.

"On one occasion, a lion raided a village at which we were spending the night. He carried off a native woman. On another occasion, the baby's pet dog was dragged from a sort of porch in a hut where we were stopping, and we discovered that a leopard had pounced upon it. Otherwise, the trip was without serious danger from wild beasts. In crossing the veldt, however, where the grass was above our heads and where dangerous animals were known to lurk, we were always anxious. It is only possible to see for a few feet through the grass and the trail wound so constantly that our view ahead was limited to about the same distance. Possibly the noise of the caravan kept animals from disturbing us, however."

In spite of the difficulties of their travels, the Guptills have the satisfaction of knowing that the task for which they were sent into the wilds more than five years ago is now nearing a satisfactory completion. Their duty was that of pioneering for the Board of Foreign Missions of their church.

In 1919, the $113,000,000 centenary campaign of the church had made it possible to establish a big mission station in the heart of the cannibal country. The Guptills, having already become acclimated and versed in native ways, were chosen to go on this expedition. They were instructed to lay out a station near the kraal of some Katanga chieftain, to make preparations for building a church, a school and dispensary, and, generally, to pave the way for other missionaries from America. It was announced that a doctor and his wife, a trained nurse and three missionaries would follow them after the rainy season was over. Then it was planned to build a Centenary Hospital, to cost $15,000.

This hospital is now under construction, and will be a palatial edifice, in a region where a native house can be erected for about 50 cents in American money.

Moreover, the natives of the cannibal belt have been made favorably disposed to the white visitors and none of the suspicion or hostility seems to exist such as was created by the barbarities of the rubber traffic along the points of the Congo region. The Guptills have the satisfaction of knowing that they performed the mission for which they were sent and they can now afford to laugh at the inconveniences of their trip to the coast. While, they say, the baby can take a pride in future years in knowing that he is probably the first youngster to cross Central Africa in a meat safe.

"Cure Your Rupture Like I Cured Mine"

Old Sea Captain Cured His Own Rupture After Doctors Said "Operate or Death."

His Remedy and Book Sent Free.

Captain Collings sailed the seas for many years; then he sustained a bad double rupture that soon forced him to not only remain ashore, but kept him bedridden for years. He tried doctor after doctor and truss after truss. No results! Finally, he was assured that he must either submit to a dangerous and abhorrent operation or die. He did neither! He cured himself instead.

"Fellow Men and Women, You Don't Have To Be Cut Up, and You Don't Have To Be Tortured By Trusses."

Captain Collings made a study of himself, of his condition—and at last he was rewarded by the finding of the method that so quickly made him a well, strong, vigorous and happy man.

Anyone can use the same method: it's simple, easy, safe and inexpensive. Every ruptured person in the world should have the Captain Collings book, telling all about how he cured himself, and how anyone may follow the same treatment in their own home without any trouble. "Can you vouch for each and every member of his gang?"

"I know nothing about his gang, as you call it. If I am not mistaken, this fellow Mendez is one of your pet supporters. He may be double crossing you."

"We'll see. For the present, your friend Crust is safe. As long as he lives within the law he is all right. We're going to have law and order here, Mr. Landover. I want you to understand that. The best evidence that most of us want law and order is the incredible manner in which these people have curbed their natural instincts."

"No one wants law and order more than I," said Landover.

"And I suppose Manuel Crust is of the same mind?"

"So far as I know, he is," replied the other firmly.

Percival looked at him in blank astonishment. "Well, I'm damned!" he said, after a moment. "Do you really believe that?"

"It does not follow that he is an advocate of lawlessness and disorder because he happens to be opposed to some of your pet schemes, does it, Mr. Percival?" inquired Landover ironically.

"One of my pet schemes happens to conflict seriously with Manuel's pet scheme, if that will strengthen your argument any, Mr. Landover."

"I don't believe Crust ever had any such thought," said the other flatly.

"We're not getting anywhere by arguing the point," said Percival. He turned to walk away.

"Just a moment," called out Landover, after the younger man had taken a few steps. "See here, Percival, I don't want you to misunderstand me. If there is anything in this talk about Crust—you know what I mean—and if it should come to the point where stern measures are required, I will be with you, heart and soul. You know that, don't you?"

Percival studied the banker's face for a moment. "I've never doubted it for an instant, Landover. We may yet shake hands and be friends in spite of ourselves."

Landover turned on his heel and walked away, and Percival, with a shrug of his shoulders, set about making preparations to safeguard Sancho Mendez when he was brought in from the wood. He posted a number of reliable, cool-headed men around the meeting house, many of them being armed. Arrangements were made for barricading the door and the few windows. The prisoner was to be confined in the building, a long, low structure, and there he was to tell his story and stand trial. There was to be no delay in the matter of a trial.

Percival, Peter Snipe, Flattner and several others strode out from the meeting house and swept the long line of huts with serious, apprehensive eyes. They had expected to find the people congregated at some nearby point, ready to swoop down upon the prisoner the instant he appeared with his captors at the edge of the wood. To their amazement and relief the people had taken Percival's command literally. They had retired to their huts, and but few of them were to be seen, even on their doorsteps.

"Can you beat it?" cried Snipe. "By golly, boys, they've put it squarely up to us. It's the greatest exhibition of restraint and confidence I've ever known. This couldn't have happened at home. Hello!"

The gaze of all was centered upon two persons who walked rapidly in the direction taken by Fitts and his party. No one spoke for a few seconds. Flattner, after a quick look at Percival's set, scowling face, was the first to speak. To a certain degree he understood the situation. It was out of pure consideration for his friend's feelings that he said:

"I'll go and head 'em off, A. A."

"Thanks, old chap, but there's no sense in getting yourself disliked. I'll do it. I'm in bad already, and besides, I'm the one who gave the order."

Near the end of the row of huts he drew alongside of Ruth Clinton and Landover.

"The order was meant for everyone, Miss Clinton," he said levelly. "Am I to understand that you have decided to ignore it?"

She stopped short and drew herself up haughtily. Their eyes met. There was defiance in hers. She did not speak. Landover confronted Percival, white with fury.

"I am capable of looking after Miss Clinton," he exclaimed. "Your beastly officiousness"——

"You will go back to your cabin at once, Miss Clinton," said Percival, ignoring Landover.

She did not move.

"Miss Clinton came out here at my suggestion," said Landover. "If you have any more bullying to do, confine yourself to me, Percival."

"I am not doing this because I enjoy it, Miss Clinton," went on the young man, still looking into her unwavering eyes. "I am sorry it is necessary to remind you that there are no privileged classes here. You will have to obey orders the same as everyone else."

"Very well," she said, suddenly lowering her eyes. "Take me back to the cabin, Mr. Landover. There is nothing more to say."

Percival stood aside. They walked past him without so much as a glance at his set, unsmiling face. Landover slipped an arm through hers. She did not resist when he drew her up close to his side. Percival saw him lean over and speak to her after they had gone a few paces. His lips were close to her ear, but, though his voice was low and repressed, the words were distinctly audible to the young man.

"Ruth, darling, I am sorry—I can't tell you how sorry I am for having subjected you to this insult. God, if I could only help matters by resenting it, I"——

She broke in, her voice as clear as a bell.

"Oh, if I were only a man—if I were only a man!"

They were well out of hearing before Percival looked despairingly up at the pink and gray sky and muttered with heartfelt earnestness:

"I wish to God you were. I'd like nothing better than to be soundly thrashed by you."

* * * * * * * *

Just before sunset that evening Sancho Mendez was publicly hanged. Confessing the crime, he went stoically to the rude gibbet at the far edge of the wheat field and paid the price in full. He had been tried by a jury of 12, and there was absolutely no question as to his guilt. His companion, a lad named Dominic, fled to the forest, and it was not until the second day after the hanging that he was found by a party of man hunters, half-starved and half-demented. He was hanged at sunrise on the following day.

Manuel Crust considered himself glorified. After a fashion he posed as a martyr. Some sort of cunning, as insidious as it was unexpected, caused him to assume an air of humility. He went about shaking his head sorrowfully, as if cut to the quick by the unjust suspicions that had been heaped upon him by the ignorant, easily persuaded populace.

Sentiment began to swing toward him. He and his so-called followers were vindicated. It was his gloomy, dejected contention that if Providence had not intervened he and his honest fellows undoubtedly would have been placed in the most direful position, so strong and so bitter was the prejudice that conspired against him. He was constantly thanking Providence. And presently other people undertook to thank Providence, too. They began to regard Manuel as a much-abused man.

Easter Sunday was bright and clear, following a fortnight of cold, penetrating winds and rain. The sun smiled, but it was a cold smile, that mocked rather than cheered. The sky was the color of thin, transparent ice.

Percival had no active part in the exercises arranged by Ruth. The song service was held in the open. A platform had been erected in front of the "tabernacle" (the meeting house on occasion) for the choir and musicians. There were no seats for the congregation. Everyone stood bareheaded in a wide semicircle facing the platform.

The "boss" took his place inconspicuously among those who formed the outer fringe of the assemblage. His gaze seldom left the face of the girl he loved. Once her eyes met his. She was on the platform discussing arrangements with the two clergymen, when her roving, unsettled gaze chanced to fall upon him. For many seconds she stared at him fixedly, so fixedly, in fact, that Father Francisco, after a moment or so, shot a look in the same direction. Even from his far-off post Percival saw the color mount to her cheeks as she hastily turned away to resume the conversation that had been so incontinently broken off.

She was bareheaded. He had been watching the sun at play among the coils of her soft, dark hair, a glint here as of bronze, a gleam there as of gold, ever changing under the caresses of that flaming lover a hundred million miles away.

The affable Mr. Nicklestick was standing beside Percival, carrying on a more or less one-sided conversation.

"You see, it's this way," he was saying, contriving to reduce his far-reaching voice to a moderate undertone, "I am not in the habit of attending Easter services. I'm not opposed to them, believe me, A. A., not in the slightest. Now, at home, in New York, I make it a habit to walk from the Metropolitan Museum down to the Valdorf-Astoria regularly every Easter, between 11 and 12:30. You get them going into certain churches and you get them coming out of others, don't you see? Oh, vat would I give to be on Fif' avenue at this minute, A. A.! A hundred thousand dollars—gladly, villingly,—yes, two hundred thousand! I vonder vat things are like on Fif' avenue now, at this minute, I mean. I vonder what the vimmin are wearing this season. My God, don't you vish you were on Fif' avenue, A. A.?"

"What?"

"I say, don't you vish you were on Fif' avenue now?"

"No, I don't," gruffly.

"You—you don't?" gasped Nicklestick. "My God where do you wish you were?"

"Over in France, or, better still, in Germany—that's where I'd like to be. Keep still! Can't you see Careni-Amori is singing?"

Nicklestick was silent for two minutes. Then he volunteered: "Do you know what that song would cost if she was to give it in the Metropolitan Opera House, A. A.? A thousand dollars, von thousand simoleons. And we get it for nothing. It ain't possible to realize that you can get something for nothing in these days, is it? I was saying to Morrie Shine only this morning that"——

"Sh!" hissed an exasperated Brazilian in front of them.

"I guess we better not talk any more, A. A.," said Nicklestick, deprecatingly. Presently he leaned close to Percival's ear and whispered: "Miss Clinton is looking very fine today, isn't she?" Receiving no reply, he waited a moment and then went on: "Landover is a very lucky dog, eh?" Failing again, he was silent for some time. His next effort was along a totally different line. "I've been feeling some of the people out in regard to the election next week. I think it's a great idea. You got a cinch, A. A. Nobody vants anybody but you for Governor. What seems to be"——

"Sh!"

"Oh, you go to the devil!" addressed the exasperated Mr. Nicklestick to the Brazilian. "Ain't we got freedom of speech here on this island? Vell, then! What seems to be troubling most everyone, A. A., is who is the best man for clerk. Nobody vants to be treasurer, for why? Because there ain't anything to be treasurer about. Say, where are you going?"

"Nowhere," replied Percival, as he strode away.

Over against the line of trees on the opposite side of the wheat field still loomed the gibbet from which Sancho Mendez and Dominic had stepped blindfolded into another and darker world. While Pastor Mackenzie, leading up to the glorious resurrection, was repeating the story of the crucifixion, Ruth Clinton, sitting behind him on the platform, stared wide eyed at this gaunt object, and she saw not Christ on the cross but the spectacle of Sancho Mendez walking off into darkness. Percival's gaze followed hers and his heart smote him, for it was he who had demanded that the grewsome reminder be left standing as a warning to carrion. And he had laughed when Peter Snipe christened it the scarecrow!

"Leave it standing, A. A.," Peter had said, "and you can bet your boots no jailbird will ever roost on it if he thinks twice. And it's just that sort of a thing that makes a man think twice."

But the look of dread in the eyes of this girl who could do no wrong and yet was to be everlastingly tortured by the sight of the thing that stood as a silent accuser of all who looked, was more than Percival could stand. Easter Sunday, and that gibbet pointing its long arm toward the little flock in the shadow of sanctuary—mocking the good as it beckoned to the bad—Easter Sunday and that!

He stole quietly away, circling the edge of the crowd, his head bent, his teeth set. Just as he was about to pass from view around the corner of the "tabernacle" he cast a quick glance at the girl on the platform. Their eyes met again. She turned her head quickly, but he was certain that she had followed his movements from the beginning.

Toward the close of the exercises the congregation was startled by the sound of an ax smiting wood. The blows were rapid and vigorous. The surprised people looked at each other first in wonder and then in consternation? Who was guilty of this unseemly sacrilege?

Finally, those on the edge of the multitude discovered the wielder of the ax. Someone not easily recognizable was chopping away the supports of the scaffold. The crowd was restless; angry mutterings were to be heard on all sides. Every eye was turned from the platform to glare at the lone chopper across the fallow field.

Mme. Careni-Amori, who was about to begin her second song, looked helplessly at Ruth Clinton.

Ruth had recognized the man at once. At first she was annoyed, then there surged over her a great, uplifting thrill of exaltation. She stepped quickly to the front, and, raising her clear young voice, reclaimed the wandering attention of the throng.

"Please be quiet. Mme. Careni-Amori is to sing for us once more. Mr. Percival is knocking down that horrible thing over there. It is right that he should. We do not need it there as a warning. Mr. Percival has had a change of heart. He has been moved, tremendously moved, by what he has seen in your faces today. That is why he is over there now hacking down that dreadful thing. It is the skeleton at our feast. We were conscious of its presence all the time. He is over there by himself cutting it down so that our hearts may be lighter, so that this glad hour may end without its curse. Please remain where you are. He requires no assistance. He—he prefers to do it all alone. And now, if you will all give attention, Mme. Careni-Amori will sing for us."

How I Turned Pleasant Hours At Home Into Dollars

LAURA COMSTOCK came over to my house one hot morning last May and threw herself down despondently in the morris chair.

She is my next door neighbor and my closest friend, so it isn't surprising that we share a good many confidences. I saw from her face and red eyes that Laura wanted to get something off her mind, so I said:

"Tell me the worst at once. Has Frank lost his job? Or has your Bobby put a button up his nose? Or have you spilled ink on the one and only Turkish rug? Or is it a real catastrophe?"

Laura smiled a little in spite of herself, and replied:

"No, I wish it was a real catastrophe; then it would be over sooner—but I just can't stand the continual skimping and scraping of money It's just economize, economize, economize—and with all that Frank and I can do, we never do more than make ends meet. Frank ought to get a good vacation this Summer and we can't afford it. I need some new Summer clothes, and I've got to make over my last year's organdie and retrim my old hat. And Bobby — well, Bobby goes through a pair of shoes in almost no time, and they cost more now than his father's used to. And, to cap the climax, Frank got a letter this morning, saying that our rent is going to be raised ten dollars. Isn't it awful? I think I have a right to cry!"

I agreed with Laura about that, for I was having similar worries myself, but I wanted to cheer her up a little, so I said:

"Well, if our husbands can't make more money for us, let's go into business for ourselves. You and I would make fine partners. All that's lacking is the business. What can we make, or do, that will sell?"

Laura Shook her head sadly.

"My dear," she said, "there's nothing I haven't thought of—getting subscriptions for magazines, embroidering, making fine cakes to sell, stenography, and a lot of other things. But the things I think of either cost too much to start, or they would take me away from the children just when they need me most. There are objections to all of them. It's no use."

She reached over to the table, picked up a magazine and began to turn the pages idly, while she tried to keep the tears back. Suddenly she sat up straight and began to read intently. I glanced over her shoulder and saw the words, "Make Money in Your Own Home." We both read the page through without stopping. Then I said:

"Let's send to Buffalo and find out all about it. It sounds good. I really believe we've found that business we were trying to think of."

Well, we did send, and when the booklet and circulars arrived we found that we really had found just the kind of business we wanted.

A Narrative

By Edna L. Rivers

Now, after only a few months, the money situation is entirely changed in both Laura's home and mine. She didn't have to put up with her last year's dress and hat, and neither did I. We stopped worrying about money. In August both our families had a wonderful two week's camping trip in the woods, and we did it without Laura and I having to give up our "business." In fact, we took it with us, and it paid for our fun while we were having it.

And it didn't take any more time than we have often spent on "fancy work," that didn't bring a cent. Besides, the work was so simple that Laura's Bobby and my little girl learned to help in the "business," too.

When my husband and Laura's both began to take a hand at using the machines, we named our camp "The Make Money at Home Club," and the name has stuck. Since we have been back in town, several of our neighbors, women who had also been battling with the high cost of living, have joined our club, and have begun to make money with the Auto Knitter.

That is the name of the wonderful little machine that has enabled all the members of our club to escape from the worry and heartache of making ends meet. How did we do it? Simply by knitting socks. No, not by the slow old process of hand knitting, which took about a day for one sock, but by using the Auto Knitter.

This marvellous, but very simple, easily-worked machine turns out fine, seamless, wool socks with almost magical speed. Now that Laura and I have gained practice with the Auto Knitter, we often make a sock in only ten minutes.

And the best part of it is that we have a guaranteed, constant market for every pair of socks we make at a guaranteed price. The Auto Knitter Hosiery Company of Buffalo has contracted to take every sock our club turns out. Every member has a machine, and as soon as we have a shipment of ten dozen pairs finished we send it right off, and back comes the pay check by return mail, together with a new supply of wool to replace that used in the socks sent to the company. We wait until we have ten dozen pairs because the company pays the shipping charge on ten dozen or over.

The Auto Knitter Hosiery Company is an old, firmly-established American corporation, engaged in the manufacture of high-grade seamless socks. They have always preferred home manufacture to factory production. They believe in the independent employee, and know from experience that the best work is that done by well-paid, contented people, working in happy homes.

The Company's world-wide business connections gives them an enormous market for socks—everybody, everywhere, needs them—and the company constantly needs more workers to make socks, in their own homes. They need you.

When you decide to become an Auto Knitter worker, as Laura and I did, the Auto Knitter Company will make a contract to pay you a fixed, guaranteed wage, on a piece-work basis. In this contract you take no risk—you can work for them as much as you want, or as little as you want—spare time or full time. And for every shipment of socks you send them you will get your pay check—promptly.

You are, of course, at liberty to dispose of the output of your Auto Knitter as you see fit; you can also use the Auto Knitter to make, at a remarkably low cost, all the hosiery your family needs—wool or cotton.

But remember this: There are absolutely no strings tied to the Wage Agreement; it is a straight out-and-out employment offer at a Fixed Wage on a piece-work basis—a good pay for your services alone.

No matter where you live, I feel sure that you want to know all about the machine that has meant so much to Laura and me, and all the others in our "Make Money at Home Club." By all means write to the Auto Knitter company at once and find out about the pleasant and profitable place ready for you in their organization. Find out what substantial amounts even a small part of your spare time will earn for you.

Remember that experience is unnecessary; that you do not need to know how to knit. The Auto Knitter does the work.

I can never be thankful enough that Laura and I didn't put off writing for information about it on that May morning when we were both so discouraged.

You will never regret writing for it, either. Send your name and address now and find out all the good things that are in store for you.
